Business during the past week has been good; in fact exceptionally good for the retail trade, with some prominent funerals in the surrounding country; in the country is where there is money to spend, and someone is educating the country people to spend it. Where a few very simple flowers would have been considered plenty at a funeral a few years ago, today they must have (and there is no reason why they should not have) an abundance of flowers. The same is true as to their home surroundings. You will not find better kept lawns on any of the large estates, and while the planting of flowers is not done extensively there is hardly a home that is not brightened with a goodly area of flower beds.

Belgian Relief Day

Saturday, Aug. 3, was Belgian Relief Day for the Belgian children, and Miss Carrie Steckman, at Harry A. Schroyer's store sold 475 boutonnières, the returns amounting to $74. Considering the fact that the store is not on a main thoroughfare this is a remarkable showing.

Mrs. Geo. Goldbach and Walter Hammond have fine Summer windows, featuring mostly cool-appearing green plants and seasonable flowers.

Frank Kohr, one of our numerous market gardener florists and one who made a big success out of his place has closed it up and is now selling the Hudson "Super Six."

Fuel Notes

Fred Ritchy, who about a year ago bought the Francis Bachler greenhouses and is combining them with his own range, is getting this additional coal with which to run his establishment. We are all figuring how to get the best results possible out of our places without conflicting with the rulings of the Fuel Commission. A fairly large quantity of wood is stored in various greenhouse establishments and yard screenings are being bought up by those who can use them.

In my notes of last week there seemed to be some surprise over this ruling of our local Fuel Commission and I want to say that it was accomplished by our fully co-operating with the commission and agreeing as an organization to see that our members fully complied with the law's requirements; and not only our members but anyone in our line of business will be reported if not living up to the fuel laws. ALBERT M. HERR.

The following is the text of the permit allowing florists to use screenings:

Regulations Concerning Greenhouses

Greenhouses are allowed 50 per cent. of the average annual quantity of fuel consumed in such greenhouses during the period from April 1, 1915, to April 1, 1918, and such yard screenings or wood (which does not require railroad transportation) as they may be able to secure.

Greenhouses using not more than 40 tons of coal annually may operate to their full capacity.

This ruling applies to bituminous coal and to the following anthracite sizes: broken, buckwheat, rice and barley.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

The newly organized Penn Floral Co. has taken over, by lease, the extensive range of glass heretofore used by the original owner, Benjamin Dorrance, of Dorranceton, Pa. The Dorrance family for many years past has grown and shipped cut Roses almost exclusively to the New York cut flower market.

The new Penn Floral Co. expects to enter into a general plant and cut flower business to supply the local market.

The local florists seem to do a fairly good business, considering that very little special work is being done; most of the small growers expect to keep their houses going this Winter. Good cut Roses are scarce and the outdoor grown stock is small and poor in quality, this being caused by a week of excessive heat.

Park Dept. Busy

Our Park Department now supervises over 1200 war gardens besides a dozen playgrounds and children's gardens. The floral display in Central City Square and other parks is as attractive as in previous years. The artistic floral parterre gardens in front of the conservatory on the North River Common, with its combination of 60 beds, is being commented upon by everyone.

The blight has somewhat affected the Potato crop; the shade trees also have suffered. We have had abnormal weather condition, hot and cold spells alternating.

The Lehigh and Wilkes-Barre Coal Co. is about to establish a community residential park for its officials and employees. C. L. SEYBOLD.

Buffalo, N. Y.

Following the customary rule for August, the general demand for flowers in the Buffalo market is not brisk, although the general supply is fairly good. Asters are coming in moderately well but Carnations are over. Roses have been plentiful but during the remainder of August will gradually go into a decline. The better varieties of Gladioli are arriving.

Emil Brucker, treasurer of the William F. Kasting Co., is spending a two weeks' vacation in the Adirondacks.

The trees on the streets of Buffalo are losing their foliage. E. P. Felt, State entomologist, says that aphids are the cause. Although the local park department has given a Boston concern a $15,000 contract for spraying 30,000 trees, the trouble does not seem to be checked appreciably.

M. F. Barrus of Washington, pathological adviser for the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, recently visited Batavia to inspect the fields planted there last Spring, with the Idaho Pea Bean. It is said the success of the experiment will be regarded as important for Bean growers of Western New York.

Essex County (N. J.) Florists' Club Outing

The Essex County (N. J.) Florists' Club held its fifth annual outing on the grounds of the Camptown Club, at Berkley Heights, N. J., on Thursday, Aug. 1. The weather throughout the day was auspicious for an outing, and the recent rain had put the grounds in excellent condition for such an occasion.

The majority of the members of the club and their friends arrived from Newark, Irvington and the Oranges in automobiles about 10:30 a.m., and the remainder came on the trains leaving Hoboken at 9 a.m. and 12 m. There were about 75 ladies and gentlemen present.

Breakfast was served from 10:30 to noon, whenever the members and their guests arrived. The chowder was excellent and there were plenty of soft drinks.

At 2 o'clock a mighty good dinner of broiled chicken with the proper accompaniments was served. THE EXCHANGE representative would be glad to go on an outing every week if he were sure of getting a whole broiled chicken of such a quality as he had Thursday, and while he was eating it, he could not but feel sorry for those journalists who preferred the pavements of New York City to a chicken dinner on the grassy, well-shaded grounds of the Camptown Club on the banks of the Passaic.

Much credit for so enjoyable an outing was due to the committee of arrangements, which consisted of R. Vnill, J. J. McLaughlin, Charles Connolly, John Pfeuffer, Wm. Mueller and Emil Brunner.

Besides the committee there were present Mr. and Mrs. E. Jacobi and son, J. E. Jacobi and Miss Sipell; Ernest Helms, Mrs. John Pfeuffer and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Plebany, Wm. Haas, Edwin Perrson, George Lacey and son, Staton Waterfield, Mrs. Staton Waterfield, all from Irvington; Henry Leahy from Elizabeth; R. Francke and A. C. Sackman from Rutherford; Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Anderson and five children from Short Hills; Albert E. Jackson from Summit; Mr. and Mrs. John Walsh and son from Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. Roman J. Irwin of Larchmont, N. Y.; P. J. Smith, Paul Rigo, F. R. Martin, J. Hermann and Nick Shriner from New York; Wm. Badgley of Chatham; W. W. Adams, James Greer, and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Hausman from South Orange; Henry Hornecker and brother, and Richard Vollmer, from East Orange; John Crossley, Chris Mertens, A. Linseman, Geo. Segerow, Joseph M. McDonough, Harry McDonough, Mrs. Emil Brunner, Albert Brunner, Charles Connolly and Paul Minder, all of Newark; and several others whose names we failed to record.

Reading Florists' Outing

The annual outing of the Reading Pa.) Florists' Ass'n, held at the bungalow of the Mountain Springs Ass'n, on Mt. Penn, proved very enjoyable, a large number of members and their friends attending. There were various games, an excellent waffle and chicken dinner, and dancing in the evening.

U. S. Employment Service

The following brief synopsis of the new Governmentally directed labor service as regards unskilled labor, will give our readers a general idea of what it all means.

Few in the seed, nursery or florist line will be affected by this service, as at present it is not applicable to concerns having a payroll of under 100 men, nor does it apply to farm labor or labor for non-war work. Non-war industries, however, are affected to this extent that they must not offer superior inducements, prevent the transfer of workers urgently needed for war production, or in any way attempt to compete with the Government for labor. War industries of the Nation are now of paramount importance, demanding sacrifice and cooperation from all employers not engaged in war work in order that they may function to their maximum efficiency.

While the present regulation has to do with unskilled labor, eventually all skilled labor for war production will be recruited through the Federal Employment Service so as to bring about the efficient mobilization and distribution of labor necessary to carry on successfully the war industries of America.

On Aug. 1, the supplying of war industries with common labor became centralized in the U. S. Employment Service of the Department of Labor, and all independent recruiting of common labor by manufacturers having a payroll of more than 100 men was diverted to the U. S. Employment Service.

The above action was found necessary to overcome a perilous shortage of unskilled labor in war industries. This shortage was aggravated by an almost universal practice of labor stealing and poaching.

While restrictions against the private employment of labor apply only to common labor at the present time, these restrictions will, as soon as possible, be extended to include skilled labor. In the meantime, recruiting of skilled labor for war production will be subject to federal regulations now being prepared.

This drastic change in the nation's labor program has been found necessary in order to protect the employer and the employed, to conserve the labor supply of the communities and to cut down unnecessary and expensive labor turn-over (which, in some cases, is as high as 100% a week), and to increase the production of essentials.

While non-essential industries will be drawn upon to supply the necessary labor for war work, the withdrawal will be conducted on an equitable basis in order to protect the individual employer as much as possible.

Under the operating methods adopted the country has been divided into thirteen federal districts, each district in charge of a superintendent of the U. S. Employment Service. The States within each district are in turn in charge of a State Director, who has full control of the service within his State.

In each community there is being formed a local labor board, consisting of a representative of the U. S. Employment Service, a representative of employers and a representative of the employed. This board will have jurisdiction over recruiting and distributing labor in its locality.

It must be understood that farm labor will be protected, for the industrial program distinctly includes special efforts to keep the farmer supplied with labor.

The requirement that unskilled labor must be recruited through the sole agency of the U. S. Employment Service does not at present apply in the following five cases:

1. Labor which is not directly or indirectly solicited.
2. Labor for the railroads.
3. Farm labor—to be recruited in accordance with existing arrangement with Department of Agriculture.
4. Labor for non-war work.
5. Labor for establishments whose maximum force does not exceed one hundred.

The Market

Aug. 6.—There is again this week a full market of Summer flowers in even a greater variety than last week, and also plenty of Roses. The supply of Lilies is also abundant, but aside from the Roses and Lilies and arrivals of greenhouse flowers is inconsequential, which, of course, at this season is to be expected. The extremely warm, humid weather of the last few days, following closely the recent rains, has brought into bloom all outdoor grown flowers, especially the two staple kinds, namely, Asters and Gladioli, to an abnormal extent. The following list, probably not complete, will show which outdoor grown flowers are now in the market: Marigold, Tritoma, Hydrangea paniculata, Gypsophila, Larkspur, Dahlias, Snapdragons, Auratum Lilies, Zinnias, Delphiniums, Gaillardias, Asters, Gladioli, Helichrysum, Cosmos, Centaureas and Celosia. Some of each of the several kinds are sold mostly at nominal prices, and the rest go into the discard.

There is an abundant supply of both American Beauty and hybrid tea Roses, but they find few buyers today, Tuesday, though both moved a little better on Saturday of last week. Special grade American Beauty Roses are realizing from 6c. to 25c. each; top grade hybrid teas 3c. to 5c. in general, with a few varieties selling in small lots at from 6c. to 10c.; No. 3 and No. 2 hybrid teas at from 25c. to 75c. These prices are, of course, on actual sales, and do not take into account the left-overs.

Carnations are practically out of the market; the few arriving realize from 25c. to $1 per 100.

Cattleya orchids are extremely scarce; the demand also is small. The choicest blooms of the variety gigas are selling at 75c. to $1 each. White and pink Lilies are in more than sufficient supply; the best of the former sell at $6 and of the latter at $3 per 100.

Lily of the Valley is in extremely short supply with little demand at $3 to $8 per 100.

Of the outdoor flowers previously mentioned Asters and Gladioli are the leaders, the best of each selling at from $1 to $1.50 per 100.

Green are in sufficient supply and are moving slowly.

The Convention Party

A revised list of those who are going from New York and nearby points to St. Louis to attend the S. A. F. convention, on Aug. 20 to 22 inclusive, is as follows: Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Totty and daughter, who will journey in Mr. Totty's automobile, leaving Madison, N. J., on Aug. 13, and stopping over a day with E. G. Hill of Richmond, Ind.; Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Traendly, Mr. and Mrs. Julius Roehrs, Joseph Manda, A. L. Miller, J. G. Esler, F. R. Pierson, A. T. De La Mare and Benjamin Hammond.

Louis Schmutz, Jr., of Clarkson st., Brooklyn, is reported to be in hospital very seriously ill with a complication of diseases.

Frank Pileski, of Whitestone, L. I., a flower grower and nurseryman, dropped dead in his greenhouse at 2 p.m. Monday of this week. His death, it is said, was caused by the extreme heat which, as reported by the Weather Bureau, has reached 93 degrees the past few days in this vicinty. Mr. Pileski, accompanied by two of his children, was delivering flowers to D. Fexy, wholesale florist on 28th st., at 7 a.m. Monday. He was about 40 years of age. He is survived by a widow and five children.

To the list of names given in the issue of July 27, page 138, of THE EXCHANGE, of those giving or promising to give plants to beautify Camp Mills should now be added A. Nahlik, Flushing, N. Y., and Vaughan's Seed Store, New York City.

The Colonial Florist, Manhattan, has incorporated with a capital of $10,000. The incorporators are G. S. Wityson and S. and C. Sakelos, 921 St. Nicholas ave.

Adrian P. Wezel, who for the past few years has been gardener on the late J. D. Crimmins' estate at Noroton, Conn, is now at Camp Devens, Mass., with the U. S. Army.

Charles Schenck, president of the New York Florists' Club, gave a luncheon at the Brevoort, on Tuesday afternoon, Aug. 6, to New York Park Commissioner Wm. F. Grell and Brooklyn Park Commissioner J. N. Harmon, for the purpose of presenting them with the gold medals which they were awarded at the recent New York Flower Show. Besides the gentlemen just mentioned there were present Tax Commissioner James P. Sinnott, Charles H. Totty, Joseph Manda, F. H. Traendly, A. L. Miller, Park Commissioner Edward Sceery of Paterson, N. J., Joseph Eschman and Arthur Herrington. The park commissioners are highly interested in the success of our shows, as was proven through their hearty co-operation in the show of last March.

S. J. Mitchell, the genial president of the Houston Horticultural Society, who has been spending a few weeks in this city, left for home on Friday, Aug. 2, via Old Point Comfort and New Orleans, it being his intention to stop off for a short time at these and other cities en route.

A Letter from a New York Soldier Boy

The following letter from France, dated July 2, was recently received by George Bradshaw, head salesman for William Kessler, 113 W. 28th st., from Howard Simmons, a former employee of Mr. Kessler:

Somewhere in France,
July 2, 1918.

Dear Friend George:

Just a few lines to let you all know that I am in the best of health and hope that this letter finds you all the same. Well, I have not much to write to you as you know that we can't write what we want to. But I am "somewhere in France," and having a good time; the people over here treat us just like their sons and we treat them like our mothers. This is a fine country; we soldiers from the U. S. know what living is, and we know it now to be in such a fine country as France.

This is the first chance I have had to write you as we are always on the go, and some day you will read the outcome of it all.

The Y. M. C. A. and the Red Cross are like our homes and mothers to us, and they certainly should get the credit for their good work for what they are doing over here.

Well, I guess I have said enough, and I will close with the best of wishes and luck to you all. Best regards to all. Hoping to hear from you, I remain,

Your friend,
HOWARD SIMMONS.

Battery E, 57th Artillery C. A. C.,
American Expeditionary Forces, via
New York.

Mr. Kessler himself also recently received a letter from another old employee, Fred Keller, now with Machine Gun Company 306 in France, in which Mr. Keller also speaks warmly of the hospitality shown, wherever possible, by the French people to the American soldiers.

A National Trade Mark

A recent bulletin of the Dept. of Commerce points out the advantages of a national trade mark for U. S. manufacturers, even where a manufacturer has established a foreign reputation and built up a prosperous foreign trade on the strength of his own trade mark. Attention is called to the workings of the Irish national trade mark, which was adopted more than 11 years ago and which "has had more to do with the creation of the excellent reputation enjoyed by Irish goods than any other one thing."

Is it possible that you are a shipper of flowers and have never shipped to us?

We have unexcelled facilities for handling them, backed by years of experience and ample capital.

Special opportunity for a couple of Good Rose Growers who are looking for best returns. Our present demand is greater than our supply.

Boston

Forty Ton Allowance

A letter has been sent out by Robert B. Stone, chairman of the Conservation Dept., Boston Fuel Committee, which reads as follows: "Referring to the Federal fuel regulations of April 24, 1918, respecting fuel consumption of florists of 50 per cent. of their average annual consumption, I beg to advise you that the Federal Fuel Administration has recently qualified that regulation by a rule that greenhouses using not more than 40 tons of coal annually may operate to their full capacity. These qualifications apply only to commercial greenhouses."

P. Welch has returned to the city for a few days from his Summer home at Old Orchard, Me., looking very well.

The friends of Mr. and Mrs. B. Hammond Tracy have been invited to attend a reception to celebrate Mr. and Mrs. Tracy's 25th wedding anniversary, to be held on Friday, Aug. 16, at Cedar Acres, Wenham, Mass.

Joseph Margolis of the firm of Henry M. Robinson & Co., Inc., has returned to business after a month's vacation. The other members of the firm, Charles and Henry M. Robinson, will be away for the month of August.

Community Market Not a Success

The community market planned by the Suffolk County Food Administration, which opened in Horticultural Hall last Wednesday, July 31, did not prove a success, principally because the home growers sold their surplus products at home and they are canning most of it. Undoubtedly later on there will be a surplus for sale at the market. The gardens in this section are looking especially well since the recent heavy rains.

James B. Shea, chairman of the Park and Recreation Board, told the City Council at a meeting that Boston Common will be treeless in five or six years unless immediate action is taken in tree planting.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Penn are spending a month at Belgrade Lakes. F. E. Palmer of Brookline, Mass., has the deep sympathy of his numerous friends in the death of his wife. The obituary notice notice will be found on another page.

Springfield, O.

From all reports the volume of business during the past season far surpassed all expectations. Taking into consideration the unsettled conditions at the present time trade is about normal.

With outdoor plants now blooming there is little activity in cut flowers outside of funeral work and an occasional decoration. Gladioli are being offered in large quantities by the farmers in the local market which will tend to produce a glut until this source of supply is exhausted. About the only blooms being offered by the local retailers are Roses, Sweet Peas, Snapdragons, Gladioli, Asters and Dahlias.

On Sunday, July 29, Springfield had a bad storm, a cloudburst, with hail and high wind. The high water damaged the crop. The Reese Plant Co. had several inches of water in one of its greenhouse.

C. L. Reese lost several feet of glass. The Good-Reese Co. had water in its potting sheds.

Frank Good is in Michigan for his health.

Visiting florists were E. M. Rutenschroeder and wife of Cincinnati, Ohio, Ernest Manthey, Jr., St. Bernard, Ohio, and Floyd Anderson, Xenia, Ohio.

Improvement

Aug. 6.—There has been improvement in market conditions during the past few days, but the great heat is unfavorable to rapid improvement. The local heat record for the month of August was shattered Monday when the mercury ascended to 101 deg. at 3:45 o'clock in the afternoon and came within two degrees of equalling that of any day in the history of the bureau. Under these conditions there will be nothing noteworthy to record until a change in weather condition, and an improvement in the quality of stock is brought about. Shipping business is the mainstay of the market; local buying is spasmodic, as it all depends on the amount of funeral work that comes to the various retailers.

The supply of Roses is large, with more poor stock than there is demand for. Good stock for shipping is scarce. There are some Am. Beauty Roses, all of which are of good and medium quality and sell well. The demand is for Mrs. Russell, with Columbia a good second; these two varieties are top liners in all the price lists of the wholesalers and are in ready demand at from $4 to $20 per 100, according to stem and quality. Other varieties are selling at from $2 to $8 per 100.

Next to Roses Gladioli are the most important item of stock on the market. The supply is large but not quite as large as a week ago. There are some fine America and Mrs. Francis King that are selling at from $4 to $5 per 100. Other varieties are sold for less, with the exception of Mrs. Pendleton, Gov. Handley, and the Primulinus hybrids.

Asters, which have been rather on the short side, are coming in in large quantities but the supply of good quality stock is not large, most of it being inferior. Prices range from $1 to $4 per 100. Carnations are practically off the market; occasionally a few good ones are seen but the general average of the stock is very low.

Easter Liles are in moderate supply and clean up daily at satisfactory prices. There are not many orchids;neither is there much demand for them. Valley can be had in quantity sufficient to meet existing demand. A few early 'Mums of the Golden Glow variety are to be seen occasionally. Lilium rubrum is plentiful and is selling at from $2 to $4 per 100. It is noted that few L. auratum have come in so far, although the season is well on. Summer flowers in annuals and perennials are to be had in all seasonable varieties. Water Lilies continue to be a hot weather feature; some of the finest of the colored varieties bring as high as $8 to $12 per 100. The supply of all decorative green is good. The new crop of fancy ferns now coming in is of prime quality.

Local Convention Committee Busy

The committee to receive visitors coming through here on their way to the St. Louis Convention and otherwise help to get as large a delegation as possible from this city to the convention is doing good work. It is the intention of the committee to provide a banquet and entertainment for the visitors on Monday evening before leaving for St. Louis over the Chicago and Eastern Illinois R. R., at 11:30 on Aug. 19. This committee, appointed by the Chicago Florists' Club, is composed of C. L. Washburn, Philip Schupp, F. M. Johnson, H. B. Kennicott, Poehlmann Bros. Co. is preparing an elaborate exhibition from its supply department for the St. Louis convention. The greenhouse department at Morton Grove will also be represented with a display of select plants for the commercial trade.

Wm. E. Colligan, a former employee of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., in their cut flower department, who is with the American Expeditionary Forces in France, writes that he would be glad to hear from all his Chicago friends. He has been promoted to sergeant and his address is A. E. F. Co. M, 328th Infantry, France.

A. E. Kunderd, Goshen, Ind., president of the American Gladiolus Society, was in the city for a few days recently. He is boosting for the annual meeting and exhibition of the society at Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 14 to 17.

A. Lange, 25 E. Madison st., is enjoying the baths at Mt. Clemens, Mich. During Mr. Lange's absence, Tom McAllister is doing the buying on the market. The Lange store has ten stars on its service flag.

Fred Ottenbach, of the Zech & Mann force, has returned from a two weeks' vacation. The firm now has two stars on its service flag.

Examination for Gardener

The West Park Commissioners will hold an examination for gardener Class G, at the general offices, Union Park, Aug. 9, at 9 a.m. Applications must be filed at the offices not later than Aug. 8. The pay is 37½c. to 50c. an hour, and the examination is open to men between 21 and 55 years of age. Details are obtainable from Fred G. Heuchling, Supt. of Employment.

The recent death of Wm. F. Hoerber, of Hoerber Bros., Inc., is noted on our obituary page.

Allie Zech, of Zech & Mann, left Tuesday for an outing with a party of friends to call on growers in nearby Indiana towns. The trip is being made by auto.

There is general satisfaction among the growers over the fact that they may have all the screenings they can use in addition to their 50 per cent. allowance of coal. The only obstacle that faces them now is the scarcity of labor. The help proposition among the trade in the Middle West is the worst in the history of the country.

William H. Amling of Maywood, ex-president of the Chicago Florists' Club, celebrated his 52d birthday on Aug. 3.

The American Bulb Co. has on exhibition a vase of Eremurus robustus that is attracting considerable attention. This is a hardy herbaceous perennial with tall pink flower spikes of much beauty.

J. P. McCarty, representing M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia, Pa., was a visitor. Vincent Gorley of Grimm & Gorley, St. Louis, spent a couple of days in the city on his return from a vacation trip to Michigan resorts. Mr. Gorley is a good booster for the S. A. F. convention. He says that they are looking for a large crowd and the trade of St. Louis will do all that is possible to entertain the visitors.

Cincinnati, O.

The August meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society will be held at the E. G. Hill Floral Co.'s. store.

Roses are fairly plentiful, among others some excellent Columbia may be had. Gladioli are in heavy supply; that is larger than the wholesalers are able to move. Asters are plentiful but few of high quality are to be had. The early ones are going out and are rather short while the later ones are not yet available. Some excellent Harrisii and rubrum Lilies may be had. Late hardy Hydrangeas are of a high quality but meet with a slow market.

Jos. Hill of Richmond, Ind., has been shipping some excellent Columbia Roses to C. E. Critchell.

Visitors from out of town were Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Gerlach, Piqua, Ohio.; Geo. Hampton, representing J. G. Neidinger & Co., Philadelphia, and H. T. Calhoun, Pt. Pleasant, W. Va. TEDDY.

Stock in Over Supply

Too many poor flowers are on the market; one-half as many would be sufficient for the present demand, providing they were good. Gladioli are the chief offenders; the market is glutted with them; they sorely try the patience of the commission man. Asters are also arriving in large quantities, the major portion of them being poor stock; there is no trouble in readily disposing of the best. Poor grades of Roses predominate. A few local Am. Beauty Roses have made their appearance. There are a few long Russells to add tone to the market. Easter Liliès remain active. There are still a few good Carnatibns to be had. The general run of outdoor flowers is coming in strong; they meet with a demand that excites no comment.

Notes

Davy Jean, from somewhere in France, was a recent visitor calling on the seed trade. Mr. Jean is a seed grower in France and has been on the firing line since the commencement of the war. He had two sons killed in action. Mr. Jean states that with America's entry into the fray an allied victory is now assured.

Walter Davis of the S. S. Pennock Co. is taking his Summer's ease at one of the cool spots in Jersey.

A. M. Campbell motored to Christiana, Pa., to look over the crops of M. J. Brinton, the Lily forcing specialist.

Carl Corts, who so very capably manages the Philadelphia end of the Joseph Heacock Co., has erected an up-to-date refrigerator and cooling plant at the city salesrooms.

Charles Gray has decided to give up selling flowers and henceforth will give his time to Uncle Sam at Hog Island.

The Henry F. Michell Co. has entered into the competition for the best window display featuring the sale of War Savings Stamps on Market st.

Clarence U. Liggit states that never in his experience has he known field-grown Carnation plants to be as scarce as they are this year.

At Wm. J. Baker's Delphinium Belladonna is in daily receipts of surpassing quality.

George Burton is sending his first Summer cut of American Beauty Roses to the Leo. Niessen Co.

At Chas. E. Meehan's we noted some very excellent Asters and Gladioli.

The Robert Craig Co. will make an exhibit of plants at the Convention of the S. A. F. at St. Louis.

W. C. Cook, who has been a faithful correspondent for THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE for a number of years, is leaving the employ of the Rosemont Gardens, at Montgomery, Ala., where he has been for nine years, and will take a position on Sept. 1 as florist and assistant instructor at Auburn Institute, Auburn, Ala., a position he has always desired. It will be conducted as a commercial business, combined with instructions to pupils. Included in the work will be his charge of the large experimental station fostered by the State and Government as well. The surplus products are to be sold. Additionally, Mr. Cook will be able to continue his hybridizing studies which he had been compelled to give up while at Montgomery.

Mr. Cook is 76 years "young," and remarkably energetic. He is a Mason and has taken an active part with the Shriners. He is also a musician, being a member of the Shriner's band.

Real hot and dry weather temporarily put a stop to the planting in of Carnations, and unless we soon get good soaking rains the balance of this important work will be done under most adverse conditions. Business remains at the usual slow Summer-time average, little being done either in stores or greenhouses, although the men at the latter are never idle for want of a job, and this year much extra work is entailed by the necessity of shutting down part of the range.

Van Bochove's and the writer have got physical possession of nearly all their Winter allotment of coal and we are now hoping for a mild Winter so that it will enable us to run our places through the season.

William Thomas, who has had an operation for varicose veins, has recovered sufficiently to leave the hospital but it will be some time yet before the cure will be complete. S. B.

Cleveland, O.

August 4 was the hottest day thus far this year, the thermometer at the Government kiosk registering 98 deg. The extremely warm weather is reflected in business, which is rather quiet. Receipts of stock are normally good, Gladioli and Asters leading in quantity. Orchids and Valley are in steady supply but the call is seasonably light. Some rains have fallen but not in sufficient volume to thoroughly moisten the outdoor crops, which in consequence have suffered seriously. Some excellent Easter Lilies are arriving and meet with a good demand. While there is little suggestive of briskness, the market is in a fair condition, and sales are equal to those of previous years.

Boosting the S. A. F.

Frank A. Friedley, State vice-president of the S. A. F. for Northern Ohio, has inaugurated a campaign for increasing its local membership. The Cleveland Florists' Club could well be entitled to representation at the council tables of the national body by reason of its membership of over 200, only half of which number is required to secure this advantage. At present 35 club members only are enrolled on the roster of the national society, 65 more being necessary to obtain a seat on the directorate for the club. But few florists' clubs enjoy this distinction and it is easily in reach of Cleveland. Let us all get busy and assist the enterprising State vice-president in putting this matter over. There is this additional incentive: If the membership from the club is raised to 100 and one of the Liberty Bonds offered by President Totty is thereby won, it is to be donated to the club.

Death has again visited the home of George W. Smith, the youngest boy, Jack, aged seven, having succumbed to spinal meningitis on July 31. The little fellow was interred at Lakeview Cemetery, Aug. 2. Mr. Smith has the sincere and most heartfelt sympathy of his fellow craftsmen.

The J. M. Gasser Co. is featuring a vegetable window, made up of specimens from the farm at Rocky River.

A meeting of the publicity fund committee was held at the Hollenden July 30.

The Cleveland Florists' Exchange, successfully operated by George W. Smith for many years, is now closed, the stock having been purchased by the Cleveland

The Florists' Cluub held its regula monthly meeting at the Hollenden, Aug. with President Carl Hagenberger in th chair. Chairman Russell, of th entertainment committee, handed in a r port covering the annual picnic, follow ing which a vote of thanks was unan mously extended the committee for i splendid work. Chairman Friedley, the soldiers' committee, announced th the ever increasing number of floris and gardeners joining the Colors ke his committee on the jump. Final r port of the Peony show was read H. P. Knoble and was approved a accepted by the Club.

In his campaign to increase the loc membership of the S. A. F., Frank Frie ley, State vice-president, announced th he had thus far secured 32 new membe which brings the club's representation the National body up to about 70 me bers. And the end is not yet.

Cleveland Wants S. A. F. Conve tion in 1920

Over 20 years have elapsed sin the Sixth City had the honor of havi a S. A. F. convention, and the opini was unanimously voiced by the club th the time was again approaching for t enjoyment of this distinction. A n generation has arisen since the time the last gathering here, and Clevela as a trade center has advanced by le and bounds. Actuated by this thoug representatives of the Florists' Clu the St. Louis convention were empo ered to invite the S. A. F. to meet h in 1920.

Seasonably quiet trade still rules, w a few decorations and perhaps a li more than the usual amount of fune work. Some very fine Lilium aurat and Lilium rubrum have made their pearance in the retail stores during past week, in addition to the usual st on sale at this time. Market Notes

Trade conditions generally have been good. There has been a brisk demand for flowers the greater part of the month, which to a great extent made up for the slump in business the latter part of June. Flowers have been fairly scarce and so were used up clean and at a profit. The fancy stock is very scarce and commands a good price; in fact, almost Winter prices. Carnations are 3c. wholesale, which has not happened in the Summer for many a year. Gladioli bring from 50c. up to $1 per doz. wholesale and prove very satisfactory to the retailers. Funeral work is the rule with all the shops. The one feature of the Summer business so far is that a very large per cent. is cash; in fact the percentage of cash sales increase has been noticeable the entire year.

News

The long wait for the call to service in the merchant marine has at last come to Wm. G. Wood, and by the time this goes to press he will have been many days on the water.

Clarke Bros.' new Rose, the pink sport of Mrs. Chas. Russell, has all the markings of becoming a winner, as even in hot weather it far outstrips all others. The blooming qualities seem also to be enhanced in the new sport over the original Rose. It has been given the name of J. C. Ainsworth, and is clear pink in color. This firm has had excellent results with their seedling Roses having several that look very promising. They were grown by Frank Chervenka.

Max M. Smith sold his Dodge car and purchased an Oldsmobile.

The Liberty Florist, operated by Geo. Betz, has discontinued business for the present, but will probably be in the ring again this coming Winter. H. NIKLAS

A Timely Caution

This caution has to do with the After-the-War Scramble.

The scramble to make up for time and money lost.

Money lost because of coal shortage.

Money lost because of shortage in help.

Money lost because of high price of repair materials and difficulty in getting them.

Because materials are high; labor higher yet; and both difficult to secure, there are a lot of the growers who are throwing up their hands and "letting things slide" as they put it, "until after the war."

As a result, when the war is over, there is going to be such a scramble for repair and building materials, as the country has never known.

Of course, prices can't then go down.

They will go up.

It's the history of all wars that building materials cost more the first few years following peace.

With these facts facing you, it's folly to let repairs on your houses slide.

It's the folly of follies to "patch up" your heating system. If ever it was important to have it absolutely right—now is that time.

As never before, the fact faces you, that to make some money you must spend some money on your heating.

How to spend the least money and still secure the necessary economy in coal, is your problem.

It's the problem that our Coal Eater Detective can help you on.

He is rushed these days. That means you had better make an appointment for him not less than a week ahead.

One thing sure—with the shortage of men in our heating department, we cannot rush things through for you at the tail end of the season as we have other years.

The Wholesale House of the Future

By J. O. Pollworth of Kennicott Bros. Co., Chicago

The meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club last Thursday bids fair to be memorable for many a day to come on account of the important papers which were read on that occasion, brought together through the Committee for the Good of the Club, T. E. Waters, chairman.

While each paper presented was good, it is hard to praise one above another. Perhaps because the width of the subject afforded the opportunity, the paper read by J. O. Pollworth on "The Wholesale House of the Future" must be credited with an assembling of common sense ideas rarely brought together by one man. Every line of this paper makes for a practical application. We cannot even criticise Mr. Pollworth for upholding Chicago as the center of the universe when it comes to selling cut flowers. It is his right, his city, and therefore his privilege. Seldom has a paper attracted our attention as has this one. It bears the hall mark of much study, and the arguments and discussions are those of an eminently practical man with an A1 business head on his shoulders.

Let us hope that the work of the night will not cease with the reading of the paper, but that organizations will be affected which will shortly bring into being the "The Wholesale House of the Future," not alone in Chicago, but in all our great civic centers.

Modern business methods Modern business is always aggressive. To spend intelligently in accordance with the needs of the business is conservation—always alert to every opportunity to a healthy expansion. Let us introduce commercial ideas and practices as are to be found in such other lines of activity. Some wholesalers have shown this spirit of aggressiveness where others fail to keep abreast of the times, standing still, or losing ground. The New Ideas of "The Wholesale House of the Future" is to give valuable service to realize greater returns. The Old Idea is to wait for business. Increased sales by the wholesaler should not necessarily mean more customers—it should mean that the increase in sales is due to more efficient and valuable service to the customers we already have.

Cost of doing business The cost of wholesaling has advanced steadily toward the 15% commission allowance. To hold down the cost of doing a wholesale business is to do more business. No reduction of cost or expense can be expected, and it is for that reason that some effective and practical plans must be devised to "get the money" for the grower—that's getting it for us, and for the retailer. who must see the grower prosperous in order to have the producer raise the stock for him to do business with. We have been asleep. Always making money heretofore, and now when doubtful conditions are placed before us—well, anyhow—let's not blame it entirely on the war.

Starting in business Wholesale houses in the past could start with a little capital to do a 100% business on a 15% basis—rise from a wage earner, as salesclerk or bookkeeper, to having his own wholesale commission business. The wholesale market is conducted any way any individual house may see fit to carry on its business. To begin to analyse the operations of all the houses would take more time than one cares to listen to—but out of such a complex situation some one house must arise as will typify "The Wholesale House of the Future."

Waste of duplication In carrying on a wholesale business we continually encroach on each other without any resultant benefit to anyone individual, wholesaler, or to the market as a whole; each overlapping the other, neither recognizing any ethics in business. The war has rapidly forced the trade into looking into new things—new ways to economize, and yet compelling it to see that it maintains itself.

"Sales returns" To classify these wholesale factors that make up the market—the grower selling direct has less "to think about" than the commission wholesaler. The grower selling direct "does not have to be shown."—He knows.

Foreign consignments A wholesale commission house should have its limitations. It should not accept consignments of "Indoor and Outdoor" stock except from growers whose specialty is to commercially produce for the wholesale market.

Department stores To discourage the practice of selling to department stores in times of overabundance (glut) unless such department stores operate a retail cut flower department all the year through.

Retail orders That the wholesale grower and the wholesale cut flower commission business omit selling direct to the consumer—otherwise known as the "Red Violet Business."

Growers' organization Growers consigning to any one house to organize and hold regular meetings to take up such matters as of interest to consignee and consignor, thereby promoting the welfare of both. Acting under one administrative force it is bound to give greatest returns to the grower on the capital invested, and the greatest amount of satisfaction to the management of such wholesale institution. That some means be devised of an organization in the wholesale market with growers as represented by the commission wholesaler and with that of the wholesale grower to prevent as much as possible the dumping of foreign stock into the market during a glut period.

Licensing and Bonding Licensing of the commission business and bonding them for the proper conduct of their business—particularly for the benefit of the consignor and the prestige such supervision will carry to the distant buyer. To stop questionable methods of soliciting consignors.

Credits Increased overhead cuts closer into the 15% allowance of the consignor. Long credits will have to be discontinued. Each credit extended by a wholesaler uses that much more of the capital. We eventually must curtail our credits to the same limits that we have to pay those with whom we deal. No retailer has a justifiable reason to expect to use a wholesaler's capital to carry on his business.

Expense of Selling It takes from 8% to 12% for a wholesaler to do business right. If collections are not within a fixed basis of income additional money of the wholesaler must be supplied. The expense of selling has increased without increase of commission income. Problems we solve today to meet conditions are but stepping stones in establishing "The Wholesale House of the Future." Present obstacles are not temporary. They will be with us for a long time to come. Labor shortage, higher wages, higher production costs in the commodities we handle, require greater returns on the investment. The wholesaler must first see to it that the grower is able to continue on at a profit so that the commission house has something to sell, therefore, means must be found to keep the growers on a business paying basis. The large producers have shown that they can well afford to develop their own markets, while the smaller growers, collectively, do best by the commission method.

20% Commission Chicago is a natural "dumping ground" for cut flowers coming in from all parts of the country. While we are obliged to accept them when express charges are paid or guaranteed, it is our privilege to charge 20% from transient shippers.

Greenhouses Costs Greenhouses cost is beyond the present scope of this paper. Costs can be measured very readily on the "per square foot measure" basis of the soil benches or from the individual plant, or determined by a given glass area. A grower with a record of cost should compel his wholesale house to render a detailed "Report of Sales;" just what the products are selling for. Such records will be available from the "Wholesale House of the Future."

Advertising Retail dealers are attracted to this market only as we have the goods to advertise. The wholesale grower and the commission wholesaler has done very little to create a demand for flowers with the consuming public. If you want higher prices, support the publicity campaign of the "S. A. F." Create a demand to put flowers to greater uses and the public will pay the price.

Control of Shippers So long as the commission wholesaler exercises no control over his consignors to bring about better conditions of marketing, so long will we stay as we are. The commission house, to build and to hold its customers, must have control over the grower. It is expensive to get the customers and then fail to hold them. The retailer pays the price when given the quality and the service due him and only so will the grower expand as he has assurance of receiving prices to cover the cost of production. The grower who coordinates his greenhouses with the commission wholesaler, broadens the responsibilities of such wholesaler—each cooperating with the other, yet each retaining his individuality. Several growers, because of their close relation, have succeeded well in consigning their stock in open market. It stops suspicion and discontent of the grower in the sales of his products.

The "Square Deal" A wholesale cut flower commission business should show no favoritism to any grower in the sales of his stock—stock received to be sold on an equal basis with that of all growers doing business with the consignor. Within the strict meaning of a commission house, such house should not have any stock of their own "to get first attention."

Speculation No wholesaler in the cut flower commission business should speculate for his own account. It may be justified in some other commodities, as fruits and vegetables, but in the cut flower commission business all sales should be made to the account of the consignor—deducting the usual commission, express charges, and, where circumstances permit, for any "pickled stock" that customers will not pay for. The grower should take into consideration with his wholesalers the probability of the products he wants to grow—that the same are "Good Sellers." Growers should endeavor to produce dependable, acceptable products to satisfy the retailer. "Pickling" is but a temporary gain to a grower and usually the permanent loss of a good customer to the wholesaler, and no wholesaler with a knowledge of such conditions of stock should unload it at any price. When such stock reaches the public the harm done usually costs more than many times the price received in getting rid of it.

Regular Consignments Getting stock into the wholesale market in the best of condition is worth all it costs to the grower in entitling him to the highest prices with the least amount of trouble and effort in the handling of it by the wholesaler.

Marketing Stock All stock should be bunched and graded to run uniform in quality. Wherever practical it is advisable that the stock show some mark of identity of the shipper, since such stock, when known to the buyer, creates a demand for itself with consequent higher prices.

Poor Stock Poor stock requires more attention of the sales force and is usually unsatisfactory to most buyers. It is to be admitted the bigger the volume of sales because of good stock the greater the income of commission to the wholesaler.

Grading of Roses Roses should be graded uniformly as to bloom and foliage—sorted out in their different lengths according to rule measure. 8 to 12 in. in length for short, 15 to 18 in. for medium, 24 to 30 in. for long. That is for the grower to do. The long length to be wrapped up 25 to a bundle, the medium and short 50 to a bundle. Any "in-between" lengths demanded require the re-grading by the wholesaler. Such grades are so marked on the consignment sheet, in their different varieties, and should be so sold and reported to the grower on his "Report of Sales."

Carnations Carnations are likewise bunched in 25, as is the custom, with an identification tag to each bunch, marked in their different colors on the consignment slip, and so reported each day's sales on their "Returns." With few exceptions, most stock can be handled in this manner resulting in fewer mistakes and less losses to the grower.

Classes of Wholesaling The commission house accepts consignments to sell at best prices obtainable less 15% commission, and remits the proceeds. Then we have the wholesaler who produces his own stock and also accepts consignments as well as speculates for profit above the purchase price. Then we have the wholesaler who creates his own market and sells his own stock. Others in the market make up the balance "all in one."

The Department Store Many department stores consider it good advertising to attract the people to their store, offering cut flowers cheap, and misleading the public to the belief that the legitimate retail florist asks too much for his flowers. "The Wholesale House of the Future" will not sell cut flowers to department stores for such purposes as the department stores use them.

Remedy for Gluts A well managed retailers' association should be so organized as to relieve the Chicago market in "Glut Periods." Retailers in all parts of the city could accept such proportionate share as they could dispose of in their community. With newspaper publicity, low prices of cut flowers would attract buyers to retail stores everywhere, stimulate new business and please the regular patron.

Cost of Advertising The cost of such advertising would be small in comparison to results achieved. The growers, wholesalers, and a retailers' association, through an advertising agency, could well work out a plan of cooperative advertising. Retailers will learn to make their prices correspond to changes in the wholesale market. To get flowers into the hands of the public through the retail florist when flowers are cheap is one of the initial steps of getting the public at large "To say it with flowers." Profits will be just as large to the retailer selling in quantity in glut times as the profits from high prices and fewer sales. The commission man would realize his commission from the grower and the grower would not take his losses "to the dump."

Cooperation Advertising properly applied is the keynote to accomplishment. "The Wholesale House of the Future" will work in unison with the retailer, with his growers, with his competitors, to master the law of supply and demand in the promotion of sales. "The Wholesale House of the Future," in doing its advertising to reach the dealers, should be a "Booster," for the Chicago market. No advertising at any time should show discredit to any one or more competitors. We must keep business coming to Chicago.

Cut Flower Orders Standing orders—mail orders, telegrams, telephone, or orders filled by personal selection, must reach destination in a satisfactory condition to uphold a profitable market. While the very perishable nature of the goods brings about uncertainties, expected difficulties will naturally arise at times to the quality of the stock. It is a good rule to accept the statement in good faith of an approved customer who has cause to complain, and it is best to rectify such complaints to retain the good will of the buyer.

Business Principles "The Wholesale House of the Future" will have to conform to defined business principles as are seen in other organized commercial industries. We have in our midst several examples of such wholesaling. A wholesale house can expect the respect of its position in the trade only as it has the full confidence of the growers and retailers. It cannot be fair to the grower unless it is fair to the retailer.

Regulation of Market Only in mobilizing the resources of the Chicago market can we hope to obtain such regulation as will best serve the needs of the grower toward higher prices. Make buying in this market so inviting and prove up the standard strength of our "Productive Power." Let us make it easier for city retailer and distant buyer to buy cut flowers from this market because it is cheaper to get them from the Chicago market than it is for the retailer to grow them for himself.

Burden of Overhead To reduce a part of the "Burden of Overhead" of the wholesaler because of duplication of efforts and fixed expenses, would it not be expedient to consolidate some of our wholesale growers with that of smaller growers, as represented through the commission house, and begin the day that will add to our market "The Wholesale House of the Future?"

Consolidation Less wholesale houses and better ones. Each big enough to do things as they ought to be done. That will aid towards equalizing the prices, to serve the retailer, and provide a guarantee of prices to "Keep up" the earning of the grower. Growers, large and small, with the retailer, bring about an understanding on different phases of this market. Harmony will prevail among all classes of the trade. That is the wish of the "Wholesale House of the Future."

Organization It is hardly necessary in the year of 1918 to present arguments for trade organization. They have demonstrated their usefulness, banding together those who have common interests. Apparently, the grower, consignor, and the retailer in Chicago have no interest in common. The better understanding toward each individual member brings about unlimited possibilities to do good. The future expansion, the present protection of the cut flower industry in all its branches, requires organization. Uniformity, standardization with a constant alertness towards progressiveness, will make the cut flower industry a greater influence in the Business World. Where individuals take years to bring about changes, to check abuses or to make improvements, this can be done in a few months by Organization.

From a Wholesaler's Standpoint

By E. C. AMLING CO., Chicago

Emphasis is again placed on knowing the cost—Why worry about items short on the market?—It is the heavy cuts that cause trouble—Keynote of success: Do justice to your grower

We have seen the Chicago flower market progress from day to day and season to season. There are some things we can all be proud of but there is still plenty of room for improvement along all lines especially under the present conditions.

First of all we must look after our supply of stock, this means the man who really is the foundation of our business: the grower. Without him and his welfare looked after all our efforts are lost, so he is consequently the most important.

You can only obtain a price for the grower's stock by asking for it. We should impress upon him to keep a complete record of his production and receipts so he can be able to tell, from time to time, when to market his crops to the best advantage, also what varieties of stock to plant in order to meet the demand. He must also produce the best quality possible and, if he can do this, he is bound to benefit by it, as the demand for quality is always there. There is at times, in spite of this, an oversupply; when this occurs he will lose money if his stock is not the best. The best grower never loses in proportion to the one who grows undesirable stock. This much for our supply.

Now how about the wholesaler, who condemns the poor stock, and the retail buyer who comes to his store or calls up on the phone and is promised the world with a fence around it and sometimes only gets the fence. Do we always size up our supply correctly? This is a vital question from a selling standpoint. Do not try to fool the buyer as this hurts your demand and makes sales on the wrong line of stock. Get your customer to push the varieties of stock you know you can supply. This will make money for the customer as well as the grower.

Let us try to equalize the demand, so all the stock will sell at a good price. No grower has ever lost anything on a high market so why worry about the items short on the market? Rather worry about the heavy cuts we cannot get away from. Induce extra quality that you generally find goes with the large cuts. We should always impress on the retail florist that he cannot run a flower store without flowers and that he loses money as well as a customer when his competitor fills the order. His argument that he cannot afford to carry stock is not a good one for his percentage of the profits should be based on doing so and he must also charge more money to cover the increased cost of operating.

We should not handle shipments from surplus shippers who, as a rule, are our competitors in the shipping trade; so handling we do two wrong things; help to load up the market and prevent the regular shipper from getting what belongs to him, and lowering prices in general. Growers who do not ship entire cut to one house keep us in the dark. You can only judge your supply by the daily cuts and when you know that you have received from day to day all the stock that has been cut on that one place this is all the competition necessary, without letting a grower make competition on his own stock in the same market.

We can do more shipping business if we do our business better than the florists in other cities, not by selling cheaper, but by delivering better stock and in good condition. Many good retailers are up against unfair competition due to our failure to collect our money promptly from he who uses our money in furthering his business, while the other one pays promptly.

The whole sum and substance of the matter is that we need more real business, with many other ways of doing things omitted. Do justice to your grower by trying to get the best prices possible so as to enable him to produce at his higher cost. He pays his commission (or his selling expenses) by operating his wholesale house. Do justice to the retailer by keeping down unfair competition. With this in the minds of all wholesalers we can overcome present as well as future conditions.

Profitable Prices for the Grower

By PAUL KLINGSPORN of the Chicago Flower Growers' Association, Chicago

The wholesaler and salesman should be posted on the grower's cost of production—This done, a proper market value for the stock can be obtained—Profits should be fairly divided

This is a subject which needs no introduction as it has been discussed more or less thoroughly since the incipiency of the florist business. However, up to the present time, it has not turned out to be a 100 per cent proposition from the grower's viewpoint. The following suggestions, are submitted for general consideration:

First—The Production of a Good Average Quality of Flowers

We all know that some growers produce much finer quality than others and consequently should receive better returns. Poor stock is unprofitable at all times for the grower and the middle man who handles the goods to sell to the retail trade.

Second—Get the Proper Market Value for the Stock

This would be easy of accomplishment if the wholesaler and salesman were more thoroughly posted on the original cost of the stock, the grower's overhead expense, and the prevailing market conditions. Such knowledge is essential to insure the grower a fair profit on his investment and labor.

The average retail buyer aims to secure his stock as cheaply as possible, accomplishing his purpose by setting his own price and in a good many instances overruling that of the salesman. A more general knowledge among salesmen of the grower's problem would lead to better judgment in selling—in compromising—and in holding the price in accordance with market conditions.

It is well for the retailer to stop and consider that unless the grower realizes a profitable return for his flowers he may discontinue growing them, and perhaps turn his attention to the production of vegetables. Such has been the case in many instances within the past year and furtherance of the same would not be conducive to the trade in general.

What will the retailers do if this should occur generally?

Would it not be well to weigh this problem carefully, and stop the tendency to hammer down prices to the point where the retailer realizes an abnormal profit and the producer suffers a loss?

Never overlook the fact that one needs the other, and that neither should have all the profit—it should be fairly divided.

Regulating Surplus Stock

By C. L. WASHBURN of Bassett & Washburn, Chicago

The flower market is largely a weather market—Cold waves cause a shortage—Warm waves a surplus

The surplus of flowers or gluts of flowers can be partially controlled by the grower in the following manner: The excessive supply of Roses is largely caused by heat waves. The U. S. Weather Bureau issues a daily bulletin and weather map, which shows from 24 to 48 hours in advance the various changes of temperature that will occur. These predictions have been proven correct in such a large percentage that they can be depended upon. If the grower will watch these maps and predictions they can control the supply of Roses by disbudding the short and medium stems, and thus reduce the excessive supply during warm waves and in that manner the supply will more nearly equal the demand.

The flower market is largely a weather market. The cold waves cause a shortage and the warm waves a surplus. As these weather maps are issued free it is important that the florists should get this valuable information; they can save a good deal of money by guiding themselves by the weather predictions.

The supply of bulb stock is hard to regulate except by planting in rotation. The supply of Carnations is also an item that is hard to regulate. However, with both Carnations and bulbs, by throwing away the poorer qualities a much better price can be realized from the improved quality of stock to warrant the loss of the poorer grade. Stock grown outdoors such as Gladioli, Asters, etc., is hard to control; putting the surplus in cold storage would be a great help.

There are certain sources that will absorb flowers provided the price is low enough; whether these sources of disposal are of ultimate good to the market is hard to say; frequently they come in direct competition with our regular customers causing them considerable loss.

The main thing for the growers to do is to watch the weather reports and try to guide their production by the predictions which they contain.

General Trade Suggestions

By O. A. TONNER

Surplus should be handled in a way profitable to all—With a suggestion as to how this may be brought about

It seems fitting at a meeting of this kind to mention a few things that have often been discussed with no action ever taken.

There is a necessity for improvement in all three divisions of the trade, but we cannot expect co-operation or protection unless we stand for sound principles in each individual division.

Our biggest problem is to get a larger average price for the grower, but our attention, in this line, should be turned decidedly to the times when their heavy cuts come in, for at these times their stock is wasted. Flowers ought never to be sold so cheap, that the public, for the time being, turn their thoughts to something more favored than flowers.

Overstocking the larger wholesale houses ought to be considered. It is true they are the first to send prices up but they are also first in causing them suddenly to drop below normal, when their surplus in some lines, is found wanting a market. We are depending on a retail trade to consume our stock; we should therefore protect them from that unfair competition which does destroy their buying power—sometimes for a week or more—and this has its detrimental effect on our general market as well.

Can we look forward to a time when the surplus will be handled in ways more profitable for all, through a local board whose duty it would be to promote ways and means of distributing the surplus and so keep a more normal stable market?

An active committee, made up of and supported by all three divisions of the trade, undoubtedly could produce favorable results that now seem farsighted.

The Canadian Horticultural Association

This association held its 21st annual convention extending from Aug. 13 to 16 at Ottawa, Ont., the first session opening on Aug. 13 at 2 p. m. The usual routine of committee reports, and many important essays, some of them having to do with present day problems, were read and discussed. Socially the meeting was also successful, part of Thursday and all of Friday being given over to entertainment of various descriptions. It is good to note that, although Canada has been actively engaged in the war for four years and over, the Canadian Horticultural Association is still in vigorous health as was proved by its ability to organize so creditable a meeting.

Ads for our Convention Number, which will be issue of Aug. 24, should be in our hands Tuesday, Aug. 20. Wire or telephone in your reservations.

The WEEK'S WORK

Conducted by FRITZ BAHR

Screenings

To be permitted to use 50 per cent. oal screenings as fuel for the coming Winter means good news no doubt to many florists throughout the country. At least it will enable them to pull through a little easier. When one has to pay in the neighborhood of $3.50 per ton for screenings in the Middle West, and figures on the percentage of waste from what is being carried out in the ashes it is rather an expensive matter to heat greenhouses with such fuel for the man not equipped for it.

For the florist who intends burning partly screenings it is advisable to see that the screenings are placed separately and not mixed in or dumped on top of the other coal. In an ordinary boiler with not too good a draft it is hard to start a fire or get any good out of it with screenings, but when the fire is going and the returns are warm you can make use of screenings to advantage. With a fair body of coal in the fire you can put on a few shovels of screenings without having them run through the grates into the ash pit; and that is the way to use screenings to advantage. Or you can bank the fire with them. The better the draft the more good you will get out of screenings, and the poorer the draft the harder it will be to get heat out of them.

The present is the time to make preparations in order to get along with the allowance of coal and screenings; it means a further increase in the price of production, bear this in mind, and it will keep on going up and up and those of us failing to recognize this fact will see money out.

Bouvardias

If you plants are outdoors and you expect to house them soon, get ready with the benches. Bouvardias lift and transplant easily but will wilt badly if not shaded well or are handled roughly. If the benches are full of soil and everything is ready to house the plants, select a cloudy or rainy day to do the work in. Both the small flowering sorts as well as Bouvardia Humboldtii are benefited by being pinched back about this time. You don't want them to flower now but rather to obtain bushy plants, ready to bloom next October or November. Shade well after housing and keep the plants sprayed during hot days.

Genistas

While not the most desirable of house plants, Genistas like many others will be among the good things to have on hand next Easter. If you have any, whether in pots or planted out, take good care of them, keep them well watered and pruned into shape. No matter how you shear them now they will make sufficient growth during the Winter time for flowering wood. Plants now in the field should be lifted in early September, potted up in liberal sized pots and placed in a frame where they can be kept watered properly, for if allowed to dry out a few times the leaves will begin to drop and the plants be spoiled.

Violets

While you don't want to house the single Violets for some time to come, still the plants should be kept free from runners and decayed foliage, and the soil between them frequently cultivated. Usually with a few good rains single Violets grow larger than is necessary for housing; do not permit too many crowns to develop; three to five are sufficient. The double Violets can be housed now at any time. When once inside you have better control over them and from now on until steady cold weather sets in constant watching is necessary; don't allow yellow or diseased leaves to remain on the plants; when a leaf is once spotted it has no more business on the plant. As with the single Violets so with the double sorts, keep the runners off and don't bring in anything but clean, healthy stock. Being a cold house crop Violets should be considered as one of the desirable things to grow this coming Winter, but the average small grower will find the singles, especially Princess of Wales, more desirable than the double sorts.

You may not want to grow all the plants you should have to supply you with flowers during this Winter and Spring, but it will pay to have at least a fair sized batch on the place. If you have the room you can pick flowers from the end of October right up to Easter, and then have the plants out of the way for your bedding stock. Good Violets always sell, and to have them good you must be able to offer them freshly picked.

Nitrate of Soda for Fertilizing Purposes

The War Industries Board has to date distributed to farmers 75,000 tons of nitrate of soda. The material was sold at coast ports at $75.50 a ton, which was its cost as nearly as could be determined in advance.

In 1917 120,000 tons were contracted for in Chili. The balance remaining in that country on this contract, 30,000 to 40,000 tons, it is expected will be available here before the season for its use arrives.

In the effort to increase the nitrogen supply and serve the needs of their departments, the War Department and the Department of Agriculture, the two most sentimentally dissimilar departments of the Government, perhaps, have united in experiments for the production of nitrogen from the air.

The largest experimental plant in the United States for the manufacture of fixed nitrogen from the air, with the exceptions of the ones now being constructed for the War Department, is in operation at the Department of Agriculture Experiment Farm, Arlington, Va. At this plant the nitrogen from the air is combined with hydrogen to form ammonia, which can be used in the manufacture of explosives and fertilizer. Experiments are now being conducted at this plant by the Bureau of Soils with a view to increase the efficiency of the process. What is known as the Haebr process of nitrogen fixation is being used. This process involves the production of ammonia from hydrogen and nitrogen. The two gases are mixed in the proper proportions, put under high pressure, subjected to intense heat, and passed over spongy iron, whereupon a portion of the mixture combines to form ammonia.

Outdoor Irises

If you have space at all to spare outdoors, by all means devote some of it to Irises. In spite of the fact that their flowering period only extends over a very small part of the year every florist can make them pay. Among the many desirable sorts few equal Iris pallida dalmatica, an extra strong grower and free bloomer with large flowers. The best time to divide old clumps or plant young stock is during the end of August and the month of September. Most of the stock planted now and given a chance to become re-established will flower next Spring, and you will not only have a chance to make use of the flowers but plants can be sold each Spring and Fall from the increase you obtain when dividing them.

Stock Plants of Coleus

And Other Soft Wooded Plants

We are hardly through with planting out the last Coleus when it is getting time to think about next Spring's supply, to be grown during the coming Winter. Cuttings taken at present will root almost anywhere and if potted up and kept shifted between now and November will develop into showy specimens. If you have more than wanted for stock plants, some can be disposed of around Christmas. It only takes a few from which to grow many hundreds of small plants by Spring. This is also a good time to propagate Alternantheras.

Big Demand for Peat

Production in 1917 Beyond That of Any Previous Year

The peat industry in the United States was prosperous in 1917, for the quantity of peat sold exceeded that sold in any preceding year. According to statistics compiled by C. C. Osbon of the United States Geological Survey, Department of the Interior, the peat sold in 1917 amounted to 97,363 short tons, a quantity greater by 44,857 tons, or about 85 per cent., than that sold in 1916, and by 42,220 tons, or nearly 77 per cent., than the record annual sales, 55,143 tons, established in 1911.

The average price received for peat in 1917 at the point of consumption was a little more than $7.29 a ton, and the gross market value of the output was $709,900, a gain over 1916 of 26c. in average price per tons, and of $340,796, or about 92 per cent., in market value.

All the producers reported that the demand for peat exceeded the supply, and some stated that on account of railroad embargoes and the scarcity of labor they were unable to meet the demands of their regular customers. Improvements designed to increase production in 1918 were made to substantially all the peat plants operated in 1917.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

[From the foregoing it can be seen that some people are handling peat successfully in their furnaces. We will appreciate advices as to how to handle this product to advantage from any of our readers who have had the experience.—ED.]

A Highly Interesting Government Publication

Some hint of the multiplicity of interests served and the very large number of workers in the fields of agriculture, horticulture and floriculture may be gained from the "List of Workers in Subjects Pertaining to Agriculture and Home Economics" for 1917-1918, published by the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, at Washington, D. C., which has recently come to hand.

The list is divided into two parts. Part I covers the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture; Part II the State agricultural colleges and experiment stations.

Part I includes such diverse bureaus as the Weather Bureau, Bureau of Animal Industry, the Forest Service and the Bureaus of Plant Industry, Chemistry, Soils, Entomology, Biological Survey, Publications and Markets. Each bureau in turn has a number of divisions. A brief description of the work of each is given, with the names of the workers in the division, and these names are again repeated for convenience in the form of an alphabetical index.

The Bureau of Plant Industry is of special interest, including as it does the Laboratory of Plant Pathology, Plant Disease Survey, pathological collections and divisions devoted to the investigations of fruit diseases, forest pathology, crop physiology and breeding, soil bacteriology, soil fertility, crop acclimatization and adaptation, fiber plants, and drug and similar plants; seed testing laboratories, economic and systematic botany, and the division of horticultural and pomological investigations. The last named division has charge of gardening, vegetable growing, floriculture and related topics. The division of experimental gardens and grounds, has, within its scope the work of care and ornamentation of the department grounds, maintenance of greenhouses and plant collections, propagation of plants for experimentation, etc., and experimental work with florists' crops. The Bureau of Plant Industry also includes the division of Congressional Seed Distribution, that devoted to foreign seed and plant distribution, and the Arlington Experimental Farm.

Part II gives a list of the officers of the Ass'n of Amer. Agri. Colleges and Exp. Stations, the names of members of the joint committees of the association and the U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, and also a complete list of workers in the various State agricultural colleges and experiment stations, arranged alphabetically and grouped by States. This section also contains an alphabetical index of names.

The publication, which runs to 158 pages in all, is of great value for reference purposes.

The embargo is now off all Bermuda ılbs. See editorial columns.

In our wide measure columns will be ınd some pertinent observations on the ed season of 1918, and wherein is also ven the causes which led to the ap- ırent slump in retail buying well before e season was over.

European Notes

Seed growers generally are passing rough a rather anxious time just now, r, with a perfect deluge of rain falling ery day, we are beginning to feel that is, at one time, sorely needed visitor beginning to outstay its welcome.

Owing to the high prices charged for urnip seed in the early Spring, a num- r of farmers who had not fed off their ots decided to leave them for seed, and is has naturally matured much earlier an the transplanted crops. These vol- nteer crops are being hurried on the arket with all possible speed, each ower hoping to effect a sale and de- ery before the inevitable slump sets in. s, however, very few of these men pos- ss the requisite appliances for harvest- g and curing their crops, the stormy ys which have succeeded a showery St. within's Day have tried them sorely.

To the regular seed grower the same nditions have meant delay and some ss where the seed was still in the fields, it there is a certain recompense in the ller development of the later crops and e wholesale destruction of the hosts of rmin which had wrought such serious mage during the prolonged drought. rassicas and Mangels have benefited mensely.

Peas, which have never been quite tisfactory this season, are naturally ffering very much just now. The early rieties are bursting their pods and ny of the early pods on the later sorts e rotting in the mud. The outlook is rtainly not cheerful, and at present ere is no prospect of a change for the tter. We can only "wait and see."

As there is a splendid prospect for the ain harvest, and the crop of Potatoes good, on the whole it appears probable at through the splendid and generous lp our noble American allies are giv- g us the short of food conditions that one time threatened us have happily en averted. European Seeds.

New York Seed Trade

Any hopes of the arrival of French bulbs n early date rest in their being aboard the ıbre line steamship Fenchurch, which ared from Marseilles and whose arrival n Atlantic port is soon expected. One importer in reply to a question whether he had any information about the shipment of his French bulbs replied, "We have had information that our bulbs are afloat, but not till they get here will we be sure." The Nieuw Amsterdam, it is said, is returning to the country in ballast. A firm of New York importers informs us that it has 170 cases of Dutch bulbs now on the way across, via England; another firm makes the same statement, except that it does not give the number of cases. On the other hand, a large importer showed us a cablegram from a prominent firm of Holland growers received Monday of this week which said: "Direct shipping impossible via England too risky."

There was noted this week in the store windows of Stumpp & Walter Co., 30-32 Barclay st., a specimen sheaf of Storm King Oats grown by R. A. Halladay, Alpine, N. J. These oats weigh 45 lbs. to the bushel and the specimen exhibited shows clearly that with proper culture good Oats can be grown in New Jersey.

Chicago Seed Trade

The Chicago Wholesale Seed Co., Chicago, has been incorporated; capital $3000; incorporators, E. E. Elder, J. W. Glynn and J. F. Summers.

Winterson's Seed Store is handling a fine lot of home grown Lilium candidum and reports inquiries from florists for some of these bulbs to be grown as pot plants for Easter flowering. War conditions are responsible for many changes for in former times L. candidum as a pot plant was a favorite for Easter sales, although of late years it has been somewhat neglected.

Vaughan's Gladioli exhibit at the retail store 31-33 W. Randolph st. continues to grow in attraction as the season progresses. A neat folder is distributed to visitors containing the names of about 150 prominent varieties, with space left after the name of each variety for the purpose of making notes; thus when the visitor has made his notes the folder serves as a ready reference book for the next planting season.

Judging from inquiries received from some of the larger growers for prices for Dutch bulbs it is reasonable to suppose that many of the growers who formerly ordered direct from the Holland growers have not done so this year. Under these conditions should the bulbs come the seed and jobbing trade will handle most of the business.

There seems to be no improvement in the Japanese Lily bulb situation. At a recent hearing in Washington, D. C. the Japanese legation went on record as stating that imports of greater importance required the full tonnage capacity on the Pacific. This is discouraging to the Japanese exporters as well as to a large portion of the seed trade on this side which has in the past made a specialty of Japanese Lily bulbs.

The Everett R. Peacock Co. is erecting a storage house for Onion sets at an estimated cost of $35,000. The capacity of the new warehouse will be 60,000 bushels, and it is located on the company's trial grounds on Harlem and Pensacola aves.

Christmas flowering Sweet Pea Seed has been received from the growers by all the local dealers. The demand for it is reported to be unusually good, well up to the average of former years.

The Farmers Seed and Nursery Co., Faribault, Minn. will erect at once a substantial one-story building 24ft.x60ft., which will be used for the seed, feed, and produce business of the company. Incidentally it is an evidence of the growing business of the Faribault Seed Co., which is the retail branch of the Farmers Seed and Nursery Co., one of Faribault's biggest industries.

American Tomato Seed Desired in Mexico

Recent Commerce Reports state that there is a demand for good Tomato seed in Mazatlan, Sinaloa, Mexico, as Tomato growers there have had large losses with previous crops because of inferior seed. The next planting season begins Nov. 1. Full information may be obtained by writing the U. S. Consul at Mazatlan, Sinaloa, Mexico.

Demand for Farm Implements in Scotland

[Consul Rufus Fleming, Edinburgh, July 2.]

The shortage of agricultural implements in Scotland, due to trade restrictions and transportation difficulties, is indicated by the extraordinary prices realized at a sale held recently near Edinburgh when the farm machines, etc., used by the East of Scotland College of Agriculture were offered at auction. Binders and mowers and reapers sold for 50 to 75 per cent. more than the price originally paid. A hay rake which cost £10 ($48.66) when new, brought £21 10s. ($104.63). A fanner, costing £9 ($43.80), sold for £24 ($116.80), while a drill, which had been purchased for £18 ($87.60), realized £38 10s. ($187.36). Farm carts sold for £21 ($102.20) to £23 ($111.92).

Question for Sweet Pea Specialists

Is there any advantage (or, if not, what is the disadvantage) in allowing Sweet Pea seedling to fall over, thus causing a "break." Some writers instruct us to tie them up as soon as they are out of the ground and others go so far as to suggest placing brush before the seedlings germinate. Other practical growers recommend that the seedlings be allowed to fall over, thus causing a "break." Which of the two methods have you found to be more successful? Can you cite any instance in which the "break" method has been used with more success than the immediate trainings? I am desirous to have letters from practical growers on this subject. H.V.K., Ind.

Outing of Peacock Dahlia Farms

On Friday, Aug. 9, the employees of the Peacock Dahlia Farms, Berlin, N. J., made their annual fishing trip to Tuckerton, N. J. The boys made a good haul and also caught many novelties (fish, not Dahlias) the biggest being a 3ft. shark hauled in by Ed. Snyder.

C. H. Vick Heads New Seed House

We are informed that Chas. H. Vick, president of James Vick's Sons, Rochester, N. Y., until his withdrawal July 1, and George B. Hart, the well-known wholesale florist, have formed a company under the title of Hart & Vick, Inc. Mr. Vick is president and Mr. Hart is secretary and treasurer of the new concern.

Mr. Vick has been connected with the seed business from boyhood, having served in all its branches with his father, James Vick. Mr. Hart has been connected with the florist's business in a similar manner, having started as a boy with Salter Bros., with whom he was employed until he started in the wholesale florist's business 14 years ago. The firm will do a general wholesale and retail business in seeds, plants and accessories, and will occupy part of the building at 55 Stone st., now occupied by George B. Hart.

Our Advertising Man's Corner

The unsolicited letter published in this column recently from Ernest Harris, Delanson, N. Y., told the story of the value of the advertising columns of THE EXCHANGE to its steady patrons in its final phase.

Said Mr. Harris: "I have read THE EXCHANGE for a number of years and have been able through your advertising columns to sell all I grew."

And that is the situation with many. Year in and year out you will find these men offering their goods in these columns. No better evidence as to whether THE EXCHANGE is in the hands of a responsive field could be advanced.

On the other hand, a brand new set of advertisers every week would indicate that we had not made things interesting enough for the previous advertisers to stay in.

In what direction are you anxious to stimulate sales, or is business so good that it could not be better?

We have the medium that long ago passed the experimental stage for advertisers and you are invited to be one of our weekly patrons.

Here's a test as to the value of publicity in THE EXCHANGE. Think up a dozen of the men selling at wholesale whose names are most familiar to you. Then turn to our weekly list of advertisers, or to our Classified Department, and find out how many of these men are in our columns. It's "dollars to doughnuts" that we have the majority represented in our columns.

Make the test now!

Vegetable Crops Under Glass and in the Open

Fertility of Greenhouse Soils for Forcing Lettuce

Greenhouse soils to be used for forcing Lettuce crops this Fall, Winter and Spring, must be in the best condition before the Fall crop is planted. Those who have had experience in growing vegetables under glass realize the importance of high fertility, because the cropping systems in the greenhouses are much more intensive than those employed in the field or market gardens. Greenhouses are busy producing vegetable crops from Sept. 1 to the following Aug. 15 in Northern sections, where the industry is highly specialized.

The expense in the erection and operation of greenhouses makes it necessary to secure good returns for the crops grown. It is evident that everything should be in the best condition, and for Lettuce, probably the most important factor is the fertility and the physical condition of the soil. The methods employed by greenhouse vegetable growers in the maintenance of soil fertility are somewhat different than the methods used by florists.

Heading varieties of Lettuce seem to prefer lighter types of soil. Loose leaf types of Lettuce like Grand Rapids, will grow well on light soils, and on heavy soils that are properly enriched with stable manure. Horse manure is used more than any other kind, because its fibers are coarser and it tends to keep the soil in better physical condition; loose and friable. Horse manure decomposes rather quickly, and becomes available to the crop much sooner than cow manure. Often a mixture of horse and cow manure is used.

A certain amount of composting is done by most growers, but for vegetables the most common practice is to spread the manure and work it into the greenhouse soil thoroughly. In small houses this is done by hand, but in larger vegetable houses the manure is spread by two-horse manure spreader, and most of the soil is plowed with horses. This leaves very little hand work to do. Not long ago, I was in a house where they were using fine calf manure secured from slaughter houses.

The most important point is that the soil must be very fertile for Lettuce. When plenty of manure can be secured little if any other fertilizers will be needed for the first crop. A good application of manure is 25 to 40 tons per acre per year, or one ton to about 1000 sq. ft. of ground. Sometimes all the manure is applied in the Fall before the first crop is planted; others divide it into two parts making two applications during the year, depending on the crops grown.

Florists who have on hand considerable sheep manure, could use horse manure now for the first crop of Lettuce, and then work in a thin application of sheep manure after the ground has been spaded for the second crop of Lettuce. Chicken manure may be used in this way also, but both chicken manure and sheep manure are more concentrated, containing greater quantities, proportionately, of nitrogen, phosphorus and potash than horse and cow manure, and therefore must be applied thinly to avoid injury to the crop. Bone meal decomposes a little too slowly for Lettuce but if it is used now, the Fall crop of Lettuce will receive a little benefit, and the rest will become available for later crops.

Liquid manure can be used to a good advantage when there is not enough manure to spade in a good application. It is made by placing a bushel of horse manure or old, unleached cow manure in half a barrel of water. After stirring it occasionally for a few days, it is ready for use. One gallon of the liquid should be diluted with three to four gallons of water before it is applied. Some growers have special tanks for making up large quantities and pipes arranged so that the liquid manure can be applied with a hose.

While Lettuce uses a great deal of nitrogen in leaf growth, the fact must not be overlooked that other elements such as phosphorus and potash are needed to keep up a balanced supply of plant food in the soil. Liberal quantities of stable manure may contain enough of these for the crop, but if the application of manure must be light, it would be desirable to add to this, acid about 1 lb. of acid phosphate, to 145 sq. ft. to make up the deficiency of phosphorus, since manure contains less phosphorus than nitrogen or potash.

Fumigate Before Planting Fall Crops

To make a good start, a crop must be as free as possible from the attacks of insects and diseases. Houses in which crops were grown last Spring and this Summer, may be harboring a great many pests. These crops are all harvested by this time and the plants or vines will be removed from the house.

After the soil is prepared for the Fall crop and there are no plants at all in the house it may be fumigated with a strong fumigant. The fumes of burning sulphur will kill practically every living pest in the house, that is exposed, and in addition the sulphur will destroy large numbers of disease spores. A very strong dose of hydrocyanic acid gas will kill all the insects but not the disease spores. Of course, if there are plants in the house which must remain there this method of fumigating cannot be used, but it is advisable to fumigate this way once a year if possible. Some growers sterilize their soils with steam to get rid of pests which fumigation does not reach.

Combating the Sweet Potato Weevil

The Bureau of Entomology, U. S. Department of Agri., has organized a corps of experts to investigate the Sweet Potato Weevil, looking to its control and possible eradication. Field workers and inspectors to act in co-operation with State forces have been assigned to Florida, Georgia, Alabama, Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas.

LEXINGTON, MASS.—A severe storm which struck this section of the country on Aug. 7 did considerable damage. It is reported that the large nurseries of the Breck-Robinson Co., which has offices in Boston, suffered heavily.

OGDEN, UTAH.—The flower shop of Wm. L. Porter, located at 20th and Jefferson sts., was sold on July 23 to J. W. Wheelwright, who will continue the business along the old lines.

Business picked up a bit, due to several large weddings and a number of funerals.

Kerr the Florist reports that he is very well satisfied; his last month's business showed a gratifying increase over the business for the same month last year. Mr. Kerr and Mr. Eichling were out working on the Thrift Stamp drive this week. The store is getting in about 500 to 600 Roses a day from the the R. C. Kerr Co. The company is well along now in constructing its greenhouses and will be ready to do business with the general trade in the Fall. The new Columbia Rose is doing well; also Sunburst, Pink and White Killarney, Ophelia and the little Rose Cecil Brunner.

R. G. Hewitt of the Brazos Greenhouses prepared the decorations for the wedding of Wm. A. Reynaud, a member of the Houston Hort. Club.

Vice-President Kofahl of the club, called a meeting for Monday Aug. 5, during the absence of President Mitchell, but so few members were on hand that the meeting was declared off.

J. M. Laughlin, secretary of the club, is getting some new landscape work.

Paul M. Carroll has had the decorations for several affairs at the Country Club and is preparing a big wedding decoration. There is great joy in the Carroll household because of the birth of a boy

R. Shoch of M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia, was in town during the week. C. L. B.

We have no representative in Baltimore, and would like to hear from a friend in that city able and willing to undertake the position or who would recommend a competent man. Answers will be treated in strict confidence, if it is so requested.

Business has been about what can be expected at this time of year. The stock that is received each day is of very poor quality and is sold only because there is nothing better to be had. If there were better stock perhaps there would be more business done. The long, dry, hot spell lasting for more than four weeks is the cause of poor Gladioli and Asters. Aster blooms are extremely small and have short stems; there will be hardly any good Asters until the late New York State Asters arrive.

We have had extremely hot weather during the past two weeks during which period the temperature went as high as 104 deg. We had a heavy storm and an all-day rain on Saturday the 10th, which helped considerably.

The Roses that are coming in now are mostly short-stemmed and of poor quality; most of them go to the rubbish heap, daily, as the florists are unable to obtain ice and the stock that is left over it is impossible to keep for the next day. Am. Beauty are arriving in larger quantities with a fair demand, prices ranging from $4 to $20 per 100. There is a good demand for Lilies which are not plentiful. Greens are scarce but we look for a good supply soon. There has been considerable funeral work lately.

E. M. West of the A. W. Smith Co. is improving rapidly from the injury he received in the elevator of the Farmer's Bank building.

H. L. Thompson of Rochester writes from Los Angeles, Cal., that he arrived there in good time and had no trouble with his Overland machine en route. The low price of flowers in that city was amazing to him, Asters selling at 4 doz. for 25c. and Roses 3 doz. for 25c.

A baseball game between the gardeners and retailers was an attraction, the latter winning by a score of 6 to 5. Some of the players would be a find for the big leagues. A home run by B. Thompson of the gardeners' team and two three-baggers by A. Krongold of the retailer's team were features. A tug of war between the gardeners and retailers was the best event of the day, the gardeners winning; the prize was a box of cigars donated by Geo. Franks. Every person admitted to the grounds was entitled to a chance on a handsome wicker floor lamp donated by the A. L. Randall Co. of Chicago. It was won by Geo. Franks.

A fine lot of prizes was donated; 23 books of Thrift Stamps were distributed as prizes. The day was very hot, which kept some people away. All the stores closed at noon. It is hoped that an annual outing of this kind can be made a regular feature.

Lancaster, Pa.

While the retail business is not booming it is somewhat above normal, for August, there being much funeral work, and the stores are all well satisfied with business, in spite of the hottest weather on record in this city.

Roses have been a bit unsatisfactory to handle, as the bud of today is a full blown Rose before tomorrow; hence the staple flowers are Asters, Gladioli and outdoor Snapdragons, with enough variety in other sorts to tempt the customer.

Fred Ritchy, Peter Brown and the writer are having a heavy run on Geranium cuttings and the hot weather has not made their troubles any the less. Most of this stock is going out parcel post.

The Exchange at the Front

Lancaster has her share of florists in the war zone and the writer has had letters from Paul K. Murphy, with the Ambulance Corps in the front lines, who says that THE EXCHANGE is keeping him in touch with the business and Lancaster's notes are always read first. Andrew Irwin, a nephew of the writer, who left a good florist's job in York, Neb., and in six weeks was overseas is located in a French village that he says was built before the Christian era is anxiously waiting his chance to get to the front. Eugene Martin who was formerly with Walter Hammond, reports being put to sleep every night by the big guns and says he can sleep anywhere: in a cellar, a barn or in the ditches. As a florist the Wheat fields of France appeal to him, with their red wild Poppies, and blue Cornflowers and Larkspur. There will be "some Florists' Club meeting" when they all come back.

Clubs and Societies

Stamford (Conn.) Hort. Society

Notwithstanding the warm weather, there was a good attendance at the regular monthly meeting on Friday, August, 2, at Moose Hall. Many interesting subjects were discussed, the principal one being the advisability of holding a Fall show.

It was the unanimous decision of the members that a successful show could be arranged. To this end, a committee was appointed to look after the matter and report at the next regular meeting. In this connection there will be special classes open for children and for war gardens. It was decided to carry all members that are in the service without remuneration until the end of the war and to procure a service flag.

Anton Pederson was presented with a cut glass vase by the society in appreciation of his efforts in their behalf, particularly for the fine work he did in connection with the July show.

Mr. Bischke addressed the society on Chrysanthemums, in particular in regards to the taking of buds. His address was highly interesting and much appreciated.

A number of fine exhibits were displayed which were awarded prizes. Anton Pederson received honorable mention for an extra fine display of Tomato, "Stamford Beauty". This is a new Tomato which originated with Mr. Pederson and was put out last year for the first time,so far it has made a wonderful showing. A letter was read from A. P. Wezel, who is in the service, in which he speaks of the "bit" he hopes to do for his adopted country. At the next regular meeting, which falls on Sept. 6, many matters of interest will be taken up and full details of the coming exhibition will be arranged.

W. J. RICE, Cor. Sec'y.

Westchester (N. Y.) and Fairfield (Conn.) Horticultural Society

The regular monthly meeting was held in Hubbard's Hall, Greenwich, Conn., Friday evening, Aug. 9, Pres. P. W. Popp in the chair. Two petitions for membership were received. Mr. Whitton reported that one of our members, A. Clarkson, is in a hospital in England severely wounded. Two more of our members have joined the service since our last meeting. Mr. Williamson reported that he sent $50 worth of smokes, etc., to our boys "over there." Mr. Durward of Newport made a short speech describing conditions around his locality.

Mr. Seeley as chairman of the outing committee reported that our outing and dinner was a great success. In all 150 sat down to a most enjoyable shore dinner, prepared by Mr. Lawrence. Music was supplied by the Lawrence Inn orchestra and patriotic songs were sung. After dinner all adjourned to a field close by, where considerable merriment was furnished by the ladies, who where blindfolded and given a stick with which to knock down flower pots from a string suspended across the road. Each of these pots contained a present for the one who was successful in knocking it down. Owing to the extreme heat a number of events were called off. Tarrytown was well represented; so was Nassau county. But the Stamford boys: Well, they were conspicuous by their absence. The events and winners were as follows:

Game of quoits between Westchester and Tarrytown: the latter won by a score of 21 to 16, the teams being made up of Whitton, Nichol, Stuart and McAllister for Westchester and Grant, Jameson and Russell for Tarrytown. 100 yard dash: 1, W. :: Question Box ::

Common Red Cedar.—Do you know of any place where Red Cedar (Juniperus virginiana) is growing, or can you tell me anybody who is growing it?—T. W., Buffalo, N. Y.

Can any of our readers furnish above information? Presumably our correspondent would prefer getting these from a locality not far distant from Buffalo.

Worm Attacking Iris Roots—A worm is attacking German Iris roots. It is about an inch long, rather plump, white with pinkish marking. The Iris began to turn brown and on examination we found numbers of these worms gnawing the roots. Nothing has ever troubled the Iris before. What is the remedy? S. P. F., N. H.

—The insect attacking your Iris plants is probably the Iris root borer. Macronoctua onusta Grote, although the larva of this species is considerably larger when fully grown. The adult is a brown noctuid moth having a wing expanse of about two inches, which emerges about the first of October. The female lays eggs on the Iris leaves and these hatch the following Spring. From my own observations I conclude that the insect is seldom sufficiently abundant to be much of a pest, but destroys occasional root stocks here and there, particularly in old beds. Destroying the infested roots when found, and frequent resetting of the plants, will usually be all the measures necessary for its control. If abundant, however, the old leaves should be gathered and burned, or the beds burned over, in late Fall or early Spring to destroy the eggs. W. E. BRITTON.

Evergreens for the Florist-Grower's Show Ground

In this instructive article Samuel Newman Baxter points out the great value of evergreens as a side line in the Show Ground for the florist-grower and emphasizes the fact that late August and September are the best times in which to transplant most evergreens. His article is therefore especially timely. Mr. Baxter brings out the various purposes for which the florist-grower may profitably grow evergreens. He further gives practical hints on the growing and handling of the stock and adds some useful selling points. The lists of varieties suitable for growing in different sized show grounds with the characteristics of the varieties enumerated are especially valuable and merit careful study.

Next to herbaceous perennials the florist-grower's best side line is evergreens and, as late August and in September is the best time to transplant most of them, now is an opportune time to discuss their merits, and suggest suitable selections preparatory to getting quotations and placing the order.

Evergreens do not take up much room; they are ornamental both in Winter and in Summer and therefore an all year around attraction on the show ground. If bought in sufficient quantity from the nurseryman they would supply material for the window-box trade, making the florist independent of the uncertainty of transportation when immediate orders were to be filled. Customers could also make their own selections and possibly be attracted by the more uncommon and higher priced sorts, which the florist might hesitate to use on account of the expense, were the selection left to him. So, instead of the commonplace Box bush—which, by the way, may not be plentiful—Retinisporas, in various hues of green, gold and silver; Cedars and perhaps Yews for the higher priced sorts; and Arbor vitæ for the cheaper material could be grown.

Another advantage in having one's own evergreens is that it enables one to meet the demand for Christmas trees. Quarantines and embargoes have affected these shipments in the past, but this year threatens to be far worse in this respect, and it would not be surprising if the railroads decline to handle shipments of cut trees. For this purpose is recommended the following Spruces: the Norway, (Picea excelsa), Black, (P. nigra), or White (P. alba), whichever is the most available as the cheapest plant. The Fir, however, is more lasting under house conditions and the Balsam Fir (Abies balsamea) would be the best, or possibly Douglas Fir (Pseudotsuga Douglasii).

Exclusive of the window box and Christmas trade requirements, the grower's stock should consist of choice sorts, which if not sold one year would be growing into more money for the next season. Fast growing sorts would soon take up undue space on grounds of limited size and become unwieldly for handling and unsalable if not root pruned. For this reason, Pines—except the Swiss Stone (Pinus Cembra) which is a slow, compact grower, and White Pine (P. Strobus) which is our most popular native sort, are not recommended in the list, nor would Norway Spruce be given a place except as a quick grower and Christmas tree subject.

Buy Stock from the Nurseryman

As to the manner of obtaining this stock, the average florist grower should not attempt the slow, tedious process of propagation by seed, cutting, or grafting as the case may be, but let the nurseryman with special training and facilities do this, and buy from him the required amount, remembering that 25 plants are usually sold at the 100 and 250 at the 1000 rates respectively.

Referring again to the Christmas tree trade, it should be remembered that if these plants are put in tubs in August or September they stand a far better chance of growing for your customer the following Spring than if tubbed late in Autumn; also that as Christmas trees for subsequent planting outdoors, they are worth more than the kind which are chopped out with few or no roots and potted in December, though the latter, so far as appearances go, may look the same, and prove satisfactory for the Yuletide. These selling points should be impressed upon the customer to justify getting better prices for the early tubbed stock. Get catalogs from the evergreen specialists, several of whom advertise in THE EXCHANGE.

Speaking of selling points, an evergreen which has been transplanted or root pruned every second or third year has a more fibrous root system and is practically certain not only to stand transplanting successfully but continue to grow as though undisturbed. Of course more or less expense is involved in root pruning and transplanting and unfortunately the plants in the nursery do not show it, but impress the value of this treatment upon the prospective customer, when you ask a better price than your competitor quotes. If you have confidence in the quality of your stock and know that your customer will handle the tree properly you may even go so far as to guarantee it to grow, adding 10 to 20 per cent. for this guarantee. This will often clinch an order over a competitor who declines to give a guarantee.

Suitable Lists for Various Sized Grounds

In the following selections the broad-leaved evergreens—Box bush, Rhododendrons, etc., are purposely omitted for the reason that with the possible exception of Box bush for the Winter window box trade they are not recommended for Autumn transplanting and therefore not appropriate for discussion at this season.

In making the foregoing selections it is assumed that the grower with limited ground—50ft. by 100ft. would prefer high class stock which would bring a good price and not soon outgrow the limited plot if not sold in a few seasons. Should the grower feel otherwise disposed, either by reason of limited ground or class of patronage, and prefer fast growing plants, window box material, Christmas tree subjects or specimens suitable for offering in tubs or pots, the various descriptive abbreviations appended will help him to make a selection which best suits his requirements.

This will be followed by "When and How to Prune Evergreens," by Edwin Matthews.

There is no better time than RIGHT NOW to take up the study of landscape gardening, and it is fortunate indeed that such a book as Cridland's is obtainable for, on account of its simple explanations of details and its devotion to the requisites of small properties, it is of far greater value to the average nurseryman and florist than the usual "heavy" books on the same subject. Cridland's is obtainable from THE EXCHANGE office for $1.90, delivery postpaid.

Close up that $50,000

No more gratifying result for all concerned could be brought about on the floor of the S.A. F. Convention at St. Louis next week than an announcement from the chair to the effect that the full $50,000 publicity fund had been secured.

New Jersey Association of Nurserymen

The Summer meeting of the New Jersey Association of Nurserymen will be held at the Experimental Farm at Rutgers College in New Brunswick, N. J., on Saturday, Aug. 17, at 10 a. m. All nurserymen in the State are cordially invited to attend and meet with members of the association. A. F. Meisky, Secretary

St. Louis Ass'n of Gardeners

The St. Louis members of the National Ass'n of Gardeners have arranged for an executive meeting and conference at the S. A. F. and O. H. convention Wednesday, Aug. 21, at 8.30 p.m. at the convention hall, Moolah Temple (Lindell and Vanderventer aves.) This date will not interfere with the business of the S. A. F. and O. H.

The St. Louis gardeners extend a cordial invitation to all gardeners and others interested in floriculture to attend this meeting, where a discussion of current topics of interest will be held. G. H. Pring, Corr. Sec'y.

Embargo Off All Bermuda Bulbs

John Scheepers & Co. of New York advise us that after correspondence with Thos. W. Slocum, Director of Hearings, U. S. Shipping Board, the Board has amended its ruling of July to the effect that all bulbs from Bermuda will be allowed entry. The ruling now reads as follows: "We are glad to be able to report to you that it has been interpreted that Lily bulbs in the ruling of July 11 shall include all bulbs from Bermuda."—These are Amaryllis, Oxalis, Freesia, Zephyranthes, etc.

Mr. Scheepers took up the point with Mr. Slocum that, under the rulings, it was permissible to bring any of these bulbs in bond by way of New York if destined for any part of Canada. He also made the point that a number of bulbs are coming in from Great Britain without restriction and, further, that his own company possessed property in bulbs in Bermuda, consisting of Freesias in color, and raised the point as to why American property should be excluded.

He was assured that he had made a good point and hence the extension of the entry ruling.

No Convention Till After the War

The executive board of The American Ass'n of Park Superintendents has recently voted indefinitely to postpone the 20th annual convention of that organization, scheduled for Hartford, Conn., Sept. 10, 11 and 12, 1918. This action was taken at the request of the local Hartford committee, as well as many members scattered about the country, the indications being that the attendance would be very light.

The organization is rather distinctive, in that its members are nearly all public officials and their convention expenses are covered by municipal appropriations. In most cases these have not been made this year on account of war-time economy. Advanced railroad fares and the need of applying all possible personal funds to war relief work made it appear unlikely that many members would attend the convention at their own expense, aside from those residing near Hartford; hence it is decided to cancel the convention. It is understood that the next convention, whenever it may be, will be held in Hartford.

Under the constitution of the organization, all officers will hold over until the convention meets and elects their successors. Roland W. Cotterill, Sec'y.

Production Cost and Overhead

The florists have had many problems thrust upon them since the declaration of war by the United States, particularly in the past few months when the tension has been drawn tighter and ways and means for conducting the war have been decided upon and are now in process of execution. More than one remark has been made to the effect that the florist will ultimately benefit through the radical changes being brought about in the business world Appearances at the present moment may not altogether warrant such a statement, but the underlying fact is that unless the growers are far more obtuse than we take them to be, they are slated for their full share of beneficial results; nolens volens they will have to go with the tide, and this tide will float all who will safely and land them on firmer ground financially than many of them ever trod before.

All signs point to the inevitable fact that those growers who refuse at the present time to thoroughly systematize their business are going to be the losers. They will be wiped out of business entirely unless they be among the fortunate few exceptions who override all difficulties, although even they are likely to get their wings singed. But the florist who puts his house in order, as it were, who will make it a point to know thoroughly his cost of production, is getting close to the ideal for the reason that if after installing a cost system he finds a Rose is costing him 3½c. to grow, he certainly will use every endeavor to obtain 3½c., plus his profit, for that Rose.

Also, following out systematic business methods. he is going to sell on thirty days and collect in sharply on time. He is going to watch his credits; that is, he is no longer going to extend credit indiscriminately; consequently, he is going to have more money in his pocket than ever before, and he is going to feel just as independent of the world as a good farmer or any other man with a paying business at his back.

Agencies will be developed to assist him, either through his own local associations or through the national S. A. F. or other private agencies working along credit and collection lines. Such an agency does exist and has been working for many years, but money has come and gone easily with the grower, and an occasional loss here and there did not impress him with the necessity for ordinary business caution.

There is a universal cry going up for higher prices. The grower is the keystone and at present the principal sufferer. He must have more money for his product. This is the testimony of the various gentlemen who read papers last week at the meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club. These papers, by the way, are highly educational, and we would refer our readers to them in this issue. Those who have not given this matter study would profit largely through the careful reading of these articles. Granted, then, that the demand for the higher price must come to the grower through his own efforts—for no one else is going to do this voluntarily for him— it becomes the bounden duty of that man to inform himself thoroughly as to what it costs him to produce his crops. This he cannot ascertain unless he keeps books, and the form of these books will have to be prepared for him by a specialist, one who has given years of study to the subject of production and overhead and the methods whereby these two extremes are brought together and the absolute cost established.

Systematic bookkeeping sounds more formidable than it actually will prove in practice, for the reason that, in the case of the grower, it can be made exceedingly simple. He may need to spend $100 or perhaps $250 to get the system running correctly, but it will prove the most productive outlay he ever made in all his business career. It will prove to him just what his cost is and what his income against this cost, and if he wants to go more closely into the matter he will be enabled to tell just what every house costs him, and what he receives for the product from each house, or he can go still closer and ascertain just what every bench costs him and what he receives for the product from that bench. It will teach him to grow certain varieties and to discard others, and may prove to him that certain things he has been doing—involving time and money—have been at a dead loss. These he will throw into the discard. Through a study of his figures he will become far more of an expert in his line than he ever was before, although at this present reading he might be apt to doubt this most emphatically.

Cost accounting has existed in some form or another for centuries, but modern cost accounting as we know it today is revolutionizing business. Systems for almost every kind of business have been evolved and are in practical operation. Thousands of employers—men in every line of industry—use these systems. Other thousands are installing them and, before long, the merchant or manufacturer who has no cost accounting system will be looked upon as a back number; he will be refused accommodation by his bank, and even the business associates who have known him for years will look askance at him if he approaches them for financial favors, extension of credit, etc.

In a recent article we called attention to the fact that the laxity prevailing in the florist and nursery trades especially, and in the florist trade in particular, was accountable for losses innumerable. Looked at in a serious way is almost criminal to keep on extending credit to one who seemingly makes no effort to come to an outright settlement, to the class who play with their due notes, paying a few dollars on account and obtaining a renewal, extending the process indefinitely until the bitter end when bankruptcy strikes them, and their obliging friends come in with 10c. on the dollar—oftentimes with nothing. Confidence bestowed without investigation, just for the sake of being a good fellow and accommodating, only helps the average borrower to his downfall.

With a complete inventory, knowledge of costs, business systemization and a prospering trade, even though it be a small one, it is possible to go to the bank and obtain accommodation which will enable one to settle accounts with 2 to 5 per cent off for payment in ten days, thus discounts in one year of active buying totalling up to a goodly sum. What a contrast this to postponing settlements and making and renewing notes! There are many growers who would be refused bank loans if they will but keep their books in a way that will enable their bankers quickly to size up their standing.

The purpose of the bank is to loan out its deposited money; this is vital to its success. If a bank withholds credit it is because sound credit judgment can be based only on a knowledge of facts. Lacking a complete knowledge of the facts surrounding a borrower's business the bank must be cautious. If a borrower is refused a loan it is because he has not kept his bank habitually and completely informed as to his resources.

For ourselves, there appears to be no reason why the price of flowers cannot be stabilized from day to day in every city; just as in the market one will find one price prevailing, so, on the part of the growers, this same principle should prevail. In the big markets you move from stall to stall, and find exactly the same price for the different grades of fruits and other articles of produce. The figures are fixed and no effort on your part can create a break. If 30c. is the price for a small basket of fruit at one stall, 30c. is the price everywhere, and you pay it or leave it alone.

The grower should be able to do just as well. The grower, as we said in the beginning, is the keystone of the arch. It rests with him as to what price he is to receive. Give him a knowledge of costs, he will be amply fortified to stand up for that which belongs to him.

In connection with the effort to raise prices for the growers it will be noticed that two of the speakers on behalf of the Good of the Club Committee (Chicago) held diametrically opposite views, one stating that if the florist would distribute his consignments in time of glut he would get more money and the trade would be better able to work it off while the other stated that when a grower practiced this method it had the effect of putting the commission dealers all at sea.

The Tractor as a Labor Saver

The tractor is a coming tool for our trade. That one adapted to intensive cultivation, and provided with the correct tools will be the leader. The writer of this article has had a wide experience with many makes; we commend the result of his observations to our readers.

Mr. Editor, this is a very commonplace title, but to save labor nowadays is to be patriotic, and to be patriotic it is necessary to produce all that is possible, for the more or less general use of the David Burpee adapted slogan "Food Will Win the War—Produce It!" can only be carried out by conserving everything that is possible in man power, and also in adding just as much as possible to the efficiency of such man power as we are able to secure.

The tractor, of course, was originally designed for that purpose, but the adoption of the gas-engine to the various machines has resulted in almost an endless number of makes and designs.

Under my own personal observation and employed by our firm we have the Beeman or Small Garden Tractor-Cultivator, the Avery Cultivating Machine, the Moline Universal Two-Wheel Tractor, and the Cleveland, which is of the caterpillar or track laying type. In addition, I am acquainted with the performance of I. H. C. "Mogul," the Avery Four-Wheel Tractor, the Rumley "Oil-Pull," the Parrett, and the Happy-Farmer, the last-named a three-wheel type tractor.

Of all the light four-wheel tractors the Parrett in so far my personal observations are concerned, is without uestion the best adapted to the average type of soil and nd lay.

The Cleveland on our own farms has done remarkable ork. It has great speed, approximately 3½ miles an hour th two fourteen-inch bottoms, or 3 miles an hour with ree twelve-inch bottoms. At a recent demonstration saw this make of tractor plow a measured acre in excellent ape in 57 minutes. Of course, this was ideal land and vel, but it is safe to say that in the hands of an experienced erator, and with no breakdowns, that the Cleveland will ndle in the workday of ten hours from seven to nine res, and do the work well. Of course, this refers to plowg alone, but it is a veritable little giant with the disk rrows and, as a finishing machine, it has, in my opinion, superior as it will go anywhere over any type of soil.

The Avery Cultivating Machine will do splendid work ith Corn and other crops, and can handle Corn as high as irty-six inches without in any way damaging the leaves a growing crop. It is also very fast and will do approxiately the work of two teams.

The Moline Universal Tractor has given great satisction, both with the plow and as a tractor for hauling, arvesting, or any other of the many uses to which a tractor this type can be put.

For the florists, nurserymen and seedsmen, and especially r close cultivation of trial grounds work, and for the reuirements of cultivation necessary in the growing of florts field crops, the Beeman has given splendid satisfaction s a tractor and cultivator. Many sections of the country re using these with a great deal of satisfaction and onomy. It has the advantage of being a power plant hich can be moved around on its own wheels. This power lant can be used for soil crushing, pulverizing and inumerable other uses, for which a small engine is suitable. will be found an efficient aid and help wherever used, nd incidentally it has some subtle power which seems charm its operators and keep them an interested second arty. Its principle weakness at this time seems to be uitable cultivating machinery that can be attached to the ame as now used. In consultation with one of the high fficials of the S. L. Allen Company, who are the makers f the Planet Junior tools, I was told that they were working ut a suitable gear that may be added to the Beeman and nat will not break under the strain that the tractor gives. he Beeman can be depended upon to do all that can be one with a horse cultivator, or with one horse and his gs, and incidentally it is not eating when it is not working. t is also more obedient than a horse, because it will do hat you want it to do when you want it done.

I do not want this endorsement of the various tractors have named to stand as a recommendation for any of the akes, except as a recommendation by reason of my own ersonal observation. The way to prove the efficiency f a tractor is to try it, but for the average farmer, and for ie small area, the small tractors and the cultivating achinery I have mentioned have proved themselves not nly satisfactory but great time and labor savers.

The "Ninth Story Window" is sorely missed by the majority our readers, especially these days when it would be a relief to rn for a minute to so entertaining a feature as was provided ere by our late editor. Have we not a Scotsman among us able id willing to furnish jest, criticism and an amusing story or two, ch week, and so keep the column going? Even an Irishman or Frenchman might be capable. Who will volunteer?—From the lorists' Exchange, Aug. 3, 1918.

Horticultural Hodge-Podge

There could be but one "Ninth Story Window," and ie shade of that was drawn some months ago, but there re other stories, probably not so high, a second story indow out of which looks a mere woman, neither Scotch, ish nor French, but plain American.

Only one object is in mind the hottest day of the year nd that is to get cool. As an assistant to that end let ie give you a fan; the common garden variety, "the Palm eaf Fan." It is a dead leaf and yet it is not thrown way for it gives "succor and comfort" this weather. s a rule it is not given to animal or vegetable life to retain ie same visible body after so-called death and to be of ervice in its same form.

A small junior florist, aged four, was helping his daddy ick the bugs off the potato vines, and nearly convulsed is parent by filling both pockets of his rompers with live, riggly, crawling bugs; upon being questioned: "I want oth hands to pick more bugs." Oh! Boy!

Extract from a letter by a Northern florist soldier in Southern camp: "The flora here is somewhat different, ts of Magnolias, Trumpet Vines, Holly, beautiful Ferns, ater Lilies, wild Plums, Mimosa, Spanish Moss, water akes, lizards, mosquitos, flies, dust and heat. Am well nd enjoy it all."

A pretty native perennial, Campanula americana is in oom now and should be cultivated. It is a beautiful blue.

Page Mr. Hoover, boy, to preserve, can or dry this heat r use next Winter when we'll really need it.

Let us close our effort with this bit from Whittier's pen:

Along the roadside, like the flowers of gold
That tawny Incas for their gardens wrought,
Heavy with sunshine droops the Golden Rod,
And the red pennons of the Cardinal flowers
Hang motionless upon their upright staves.
The sky is hot and hazy, and the wind,
Wing-weary with its long flight from the South,
Unfelt, yet, closely scanned yon Maple leaf
With faintest motion, as one stirs in dreams,
Confesses it. The Locust by the wall
Stabs the noon-silence with his sharp alarm.
A single hay-cart down the dusty road
Creaks slowly, with its driver fast asleep
On the load's top. Against the neighboring hill,
Huddled along the stone wall's shady side,
The sheep, snowwhite, as if a snowdrift still Defied the dog star. Through the open door
A drowsy smell of flowers, gray Heliotrope
And white Sweet Clover, and sky Mignonette—
Comes faintly in, and silent chorus lends
To the pervading symphony of peace."

COLUMBIA.

[Not so bad, Columbia. Your effort gives us encouragement. Try again. But we must caution you to be careful not to stray too far off the horticultural track.]

Did you ever stop to think what a demand there will be for flowers, when the boys from "Over there" come marching home again?

Wonder whether the New York Florists' Club Motor Car shared in the glories of the Marne victory?

Why don't the bacteriologists, fungologists and bugologists petition the government to stop the importation of Cactus from Chihuahua and lobsters from Labrador, so that the Potato blight may not be further spread in these United States.

If flowers are "non-essential" why do the inhabitants of France and Italy shower our soldiers with beautiful blooms? Why, they are "Saying it with Flowers" because they are more expressive than words. There are some people in our Land of Freedom who ought to be pelted with Skunk Cabbages and other appropriate horticultural productions.

Flowers non-essential? A funeral without flowers is as solemn as Liberty Cabbage would be without the proverbial hot dog. The lads who started the "non-essential" whoop, have earned the right to be planted with Solemn Solemnity. Nothing to be said with flowers.

Will the St. Louis pilgrims en route sing "When we gather at the River"? Mississippi River, of course.

Horticulturally speaking the Phoma Potato blight is an interesting subject to florists, because a large percentage of the craft enjoy Potato salad with the usual liquid trimmings. Professor G. P. Clinton's diagnosis of the disease is absolutely correct, but his guess as to cause does not apply to a patch of spuds with which the writer happens to be intimately acquainted. The ground upon which they were planted did not suffer from drought, and was heavily enriched by fertilizer de horse, home brand. A moon or so ago they were something that would make any Ornamental Horticulturist sing for joy. Ten days later they were a lot of dry sticks, and the owner is willing to sell the crop cheap to some swell restaurant where small Potatoes are sold under a big French name at a high price. Can Professor Clinton advise how it came about that this particular patch caught the Potato influenza?

Extract from Indianapolis Newsletter

There is a growing tendency to attend gatherings of florists since the war started and troublesome problems began to present themselves. It is only through close cooperation that the florist may maintain a fair balance and it is sincerely hoped that many will avail themselves of the national gathering in St. Louis to lend aid and reap the benefit.

St. Louis Convention Aug. 20, 21 and 22

With the Convention only a few days off it is pleasing to note the greatly increased interest in the subject matter of the program. There is every indication of a large attendance, and it would not be surprising if the number of visitors exceeded the number registered at any preceding convention. It should be borne in mind that the society's membership roll has been increased more than 25 per cent since our last convention, and, naturally, a large proportion of those making up this increase will want to meet their fellow members, as well as to take some part in the proceedings, or to get information which will help them in the solution of business problems such as beset us all in these troublous times. Never before did we have before us for discussion matters of such vital interest to our trade as those scheduled in our program: publicity, with details concerning the expenditure of a fund expected to approximate $50,000; the fuel situation, which is fraught with perplexities as to what we can and cannot do to keep our plants going; credits and collections, which promise in the near future to engage our most serious thought, and various other matters of general interest.

St. Louis has the advantage of central location; consequently its drawing power should be greater than that of a city located remotely north, south, east, or west. It is a city of high rank among our commercial "hub" cities, and its facilities for the care of large visiting bodies are excellent.

Hotel headquarters will be the Jefferson Hotel, conveniently located. The convention will be held in Moolah Temple, easily reached from the hotel district.

The Trade Exhibition

The trade exhibition, as already announced, will be housed in the same building as the convention. A feature of this exhibition this year will be the display of florists' accessories "made in America." As might be supposed, imported goods will play a minor part in the general display, and their place will be filled largely by goods produced at home.

Visitors who are interested in bulbs will have an opportunity to bid on the splendid collection forming the exhibit of the Cottage Gardens Co., of Eureka, Cal., which exhibit is to be sold at auction for the benefit of the Red Cross, the proceeds to be turned in as the donation of the S. A. F. and O. H.

National Publicity Campaign

The chairman of the publicity finance committee arranged with the secretary to make a two days' visit to Chicago last week, for the purpose of making a canvass of the district in the interest of the campaign fund. The visit, necessarily, could not be extended beyond the stipulated time, as the secretary was obliged to return to St. Louis on Saturday evening, convention matters there

Later he went to Baltimore, where he eventually established the business which he conducted till his death. Four children survive, including a son, Thomas J., who will continue the business.

Amaziah M. Herr

Amaziah M. Herr, father of Chas. B. Herr the well known Carnation grower of Strasburg, Pa., died Sunday Aug. 4. While not actively engaged in the business he was remarkably well informed on all matters pertaining to floriculture. He was always on hand at the Herr greenhouses to welcome any of the trade and was greatly liked and respected. The funeral was held from the residence of his son-in-law, Dr. Martin H. Musser and attended by a great number of friends and relatives, as well as by a goodly portion of the Lancaster County Florists' Ass'n, who sent a beautiful spray of flowers as a token of their sympathy. He is survived by two sons and a daughter: Edgar and Charles B. Herr and Mary, wife of Dr. Martin Musser.

ALBERT M. HERR.

requiring his attention; consequently it was only possible to call upon a few outside the wholesale district. As will be seen from the list of subscriptions, the wholesale florists subscribed freely. These subscriptions form an important addition to the list of subscriptions from Chicago already reported. The secretary was also assisted in his canvass by Charles L. Washburn, of Bassett & Washburn, Paul Klingsporn, State Vice-President for Illinois-North, and Frederick Lautenschlager, chairman of the Illinois publicity committee and president of the Chicago Florists' Club, who generously devoted their time to the work.

Our campaign fund lacks now about $7000 of the amount which we started out to raise—$50,000. Among the thousands of florists who have not yet subscribed, the required amount should be raised in a day or two; at any rate, prior to the convention.

All the trade papers are kind enough to give space to our weekly reports of the work being done by our publicity committees; therefore it would be hard to believe that there can be any florist in the land who is not familiar with our campaign, with its objects, and with the benefits already resulting, so far as reported. With the knowledge our promotion bureau has of the effort put forth to make every florist see the great necessity for a campaign such as ours, the bureau is satisfied that anyone who does not know of what we are trying to accomplish never sees a letter carrier, and worse still, never reads a trade paper. Why, then, cannot the few hundred dollars required to complete the fund be immediately forthcoming? That it will be forthcoming eventually there is no doubt whatever, but we want it now, before the convention, so that the committees can report that our object has been attained. We know of several other industries, many of whose aggregate investments are not nearly as great as those in our own trade, who have created for a similar purpose far larger funds than the florists are asked to create, and are enjoying the benefit which they were positive would result.

Presentation of Gold Medals to the Park Commissioners

Do you want to have the public believe that flowers in their homes are not essential, or that their purchase for any purpose is an extravagance in war times? Do you want to see the use of your products cut out at functions where they have always played a conspicuous part? Do you want to see them denied admission to hospitals and other places where their cheering influence is beyond dispute? Of course, you do not. Then subscribe to this fund, because it will be expended in a country-wide effort to prevent these very conditions, and without this effort the future of our business would be dark indeed. So impressed are some of our subscribers with the value of our work that they are increasing their subscriptions. So why hold back, Mr. Nonsubscriber? The campaign is as much in your interests as in those of anyone else in the trade, and your returns are absolutely sure.

Some Observations on Seed Season of 1918

Many Seedsmen have been and still are wondering why their sales dropped off suddenly in April last. The writer solves the mystery

The majority of seedsmen made preparations for a heavy year for 1918. The experience of the year before led many to build high hopes that the war and vacant lot gardening movement would create a tremendous demand for seeds. This was, in a measure, true.

A little study of the subject will reveal the fact that certain mail order seed houses, certain retail seed stores, particularly those located in the large centers, were well equipped to serve this small garden demand and so reaped a harvest in the season of 1917.

During 1917, many of the small houses and many of the large houses that catered particularly to a bulk trade were in no position to serve this small garden demand but, nevertheless, felt that here was a profitable field, so they in turn made preparation to take care of it and, of course, the houses that had profited thereby also fortified themselves, with the result that the field of supply was greatly increased and more than double the number of concerns made preparation to take care of just such trade for the season of 1918.

Again, the war garden organization at Washington was prepared to furnish seeds this year, and many of those who had attempted small gardens in 1917 secured seeds in 1918 from that source. Others obtained seeds from their con gressmen, and still many others who had profited by th previous year's experience found that their requiremen were not nearly so heavy as they were the year befo when they had less experience and did not know exact the requirements of their gardens.

Delayed shipments and back ordering served to crea a surplus in the stocks of nearly every one who had ma such strenuous preparations for an exceptionally hea year.

It is the writer's opinion that there was in all probabili just as large an area, or even larger areas, devoted to wa backyard and community gardens in 1918 as in 1917, b because of the disappointments that were experienced b many of the embryo gardeners, the number who plant gardens was vastly less than in 1917; on the other han those who had made a success of their gardens for 191 planted larger areas, with the result that while the are cultivated and devoted to this garden effort were just large the number of seed buyers was greatly decreased.

The effect of this is readily apparent when one conside the individual tastes of the many gardeners as compar with the smaller number who actually conducted garde this year. In other words, where a community gard interest for 1917 was made up, we will say for illustratio of twenty planters, the number this year was probab reduced to fifteen, but these planted a larger area.

Now, where a greater number were interested in co munity gardens every planter had to have Lettuce, Ra ishes, Beans, Beets, etc., and of course this made a on third greater demand for these particular things, becau after a little experience a gardener almost invariably duces his plantings to those things which he and his fami like and which he can grow with greatest success.

Our own personal experience has been that while t amount of business done this year was in excess of the ye before from a dollar-and-cents point of view, the numb of orders filled were materially reduced. The net analy being that while the Department of Agriculture and t newspapers are probably 100 per cent. correct in th statements that war gardens for 1918 were conducted o larger scale than ever before, the actual fact of the matt is that there can be no question but that the individu effort was larger for this year than last year.

Now, the seedsmen all experienced this year a gre slump in the latter part of the season. This is also direct traceable to certain effort on the part of the war gard commission, the seedsmen themselves, and many of t publications in which seedsmen are wont to advertise, advising their readers to order early. This advice w particularly noticeable in such publications as Gara Magazine, Country Gentleman, House and Garden, and ev the daily press. The result of this advertising was th the fewer number of garden planters did order early ar of course, later in the season the business took this ve decided slump because there were no longer any buyers require seed.

It is indeed amusing to listen to the complaints of th in the trade who do not stop to realize the causes that affe conditions, and simply attribute it to something beyo their comprehension. The conclusion to be drawn is th the great rush for war gardens in 1917 was the result advertising, because every medium, everybody, and eve condition, continuously pointed out to the public at la the necessity of planting a garden. Then for 1918 th same publications advertised "order early," because t advertising of the year previous resulted in a great shorta of seed occasioned by the increased demand, and the f that only a limited few had made any preparations this demand.

If our seed dealers, as well as our merchants, would o sense the way the wind blows, or would gauge their bu ness preparations by the sign posts that are only too e dent to the student of advertising, there would be l disappointment, and there certainly would not be t conjectures that now exist.

The real believer is advertising bases his every effort preparation on the advertising that exists which he p ceives will govern his efforts.

I want to make it plain to all who read this analy that he who believes in advertising, and we all believe it, either consciously or unconsciously, knows that it absolutely the dominant force in business creation. goes without saying that service must be a running ma of advertising, for while advertising will create business conditions it will not maintain them unless satisfacto service is given.

Chicago Florists' Club

Karthauser's Garden on Ridge ave. Thursday eveni Aug. 8, was again the scene of the second get-togeth rally of the Chicago Florists' Club. The attendance w large, all the sections around the city where cut flow growing is carried on extensively being well represente There was several visitors from out of the city. It w wholesalers' and commission men's night.

President Lautenschlager held the chair during t business portion of the meeting, when several applicatio for membership were received. In order that these app cants could be made members immediately, so they wou be eligible to membership in the S. A. F. before the c vention, the rules relating to applications was suspen or the evening and all were duly elected to full membership in the club The new members are as follows: Louis innerman, wholesale florist; A. A. Craig, retail florist; Eric Johnson, of the A. L. Randall Co.; Sam Freund, aper box manufacturer; D. D. Robinson, paper box anufacturer; E. A. Banding, Ft. Scott, Kans., representing a fuel saving equipment for growers.

Mr. Lautenschlager, as chairman of the advertising nd publicity committee, gave a detailed report of the sale f stamps and posterettes for Valentine's Day and Mother's Day that was highly gratifying. The statement showed a ross profit to the club of $1,018.92. He was given a ising vote of thanks fot the excellent showing made for the lub under his direction.

E. A. Banding, of Fort Scott, Kans., who is installing n equipment for fuel saving for growers, was present nd made some important statements regarding the equipent of much interest to the growers. One has just been nstalled in the Louis Wittbold heating system that he ishes to speak for itself. Varied conditions existing in ifferent sections as to quality of coal, type of boilers, etc., as to be studied out before an equipment can be adjusted or a particular case. Excess of air, scale on boilers, soot, eat going out of the chimney, were all given as cause for uel waste. This the speaker proposes to control by a ystem of hollow grates, dampers, and other devices of the quipment.

Secretary Zech suggested that the meeting in September should be in the nature of an exhibit of common arden and field flowers, so many members of the club not nowing the names of many of these; he suggested a large nd varied quantity of these should be provided for the ext meeting and if necessary to have one of the professor's om the State University present to aid in naming those nknown to the members.

This concluded the business portion of the meeting, nd to Chairman Waters of the "Good of the Club" Committee then presided. This committee had featured for he evening a series of papers from several of the leading holesalers and commission houses on matters pretaining the betterment of conditions from their point of view. he papers were of a high order and were listened to with uch interest by the large audience present.

These will be found elsewhere in our columns. We sk every subscriber to read them so as to obtain enlightenent on present conditions and be ready to act intelliently when the time comes for concerted action as come must.

The meeting was held in the large dancing pavilion the garden where the members could enjoy the refreshing eeze and the aroma of fragrant flowers in the nearby ardens that "The Ridge" is famous for. Everything ossible was provided for their comfort, the luncheon ble was heaped with all that was good to eat; Radishes, elery, Onions, Lettuce and Tomatoes galore, the pride the famous Ridge gardeners, salmon salad, large platters sliced boiled ham, and other tempting dishes that only ine host Karthauser knows how to prepare. Beverages ere abundant and the cigars were passed around many nes. Nick Karthauser is a member of the Chicago orists' Club, having been a practical gardener and florist r many years before starting his present "garden", hich is conducted on intensive irrigation principles. s. J. Kairns, representing Henry A. Dreer Co., Phila. t. was a visitor and said he had attended many florist ub meetings but this one was the best of them all.

Higher Prices for Flowers

By A. T. PYFER, of A. T. Pyfer & Co., Chicago

Unless prices are advanced we will find many growers out of business before another year has elapsed—A demand for system whereby the grower will know his cost—Closer co-operation between grower, wholesaler and retailer

One of the Chicago "Good of the Club" Papers

There is no other line of business suffering today as uch as the flower business on account of low prices obined for the product, and unless the prices are advanced mediately we will find many growers out of business fore the end of another year. Many have already sed all or part of their houses or are devoting them to getables or planning to close them for the Winter. herefore, this decrease in supply, with a normal demand, ll have a tendency to increase prices as the flower busiss is dependent almost entirely on supply and demand. e might say, entirely dependent, since we lack organizaon and strict co-operation among wholesalers and growers. long as a grower is satisfied to get a lump sum at the end the week, regardless of how much stock is sold or at hat price, these conditions will exist.

The grower is the one who is losing the largest amount money these days. Everything he uses in producing owers has advanced and he is paying the price because hatever he buys is controlled by organizations who ow the cost of production and charge accordingly. here is no underselling in other lines for these know the st and keep it before them, carefully consulting it before aking a sale; as prices of raw material advance they raise eir prices.

Let us begin with the grower. Does he know how much osts to produce flowers of any certain variety, or does he know that they can be sold at a profit for a certain price at any time of the year, or at an average price for the season. The grower can keep a record and can know these things and know all he wants to know but he forgets the most important thing of all: SYSTEM. It is just as important to have a bookkeeper in your greenhouses, no matter how small your place is, as it is to have expert knowledge of how to produce good flowers; but since you have no knowledge of cost and are willing to accept your cheques at the end of the week and not demand detailed report, you must not expect better conditions. You must organize and get together—co-operate: grower, wholesaler, retailer. Let the grower keep a record of how much it cost him to produce certain flowers and demand an accurate and detailed report from his commission man, and the grower from his manager, and you will have the first important step toward getting what we must have in order to keep the flower business in existence—higher prices.

If you were to tell an ordinary small grower that he must keep books showing his actual expense and profits he would scoff at the idea; exclaim it was unnecessary. He does not neglect to water or care for his plants as he can observe the results if neglected for one day, yet he is neglecting the very thing he is depending on—PROFITS—for his very existence. What good is all your hard labor (and it is the hardest kind of labor), if you have no profits at the end of the year and a depleted bank account. Therefore, you must employ some one or take time each day, at least, to make a debit and credit entry in a ledger as regularly as you water and cut your stock. Show the wholesaler what it is costing you to produce the stock and demand higher prices.

The wholesalers lack all knowledge of cost of production in most cases; they are unorganized; they do not co-operate with each other; each is doing all he can to undersell his competitor. Instead of helping or co-operating each one is continually underselling the other fellow in order to fill his own purse at the expense of the grower. Is there a stated price on any flower in the market today? A few rare flowers are commanding a high, steady price, but only one or two houses handle these. What we want is a higher price for the common stock we are all dependent on.

During the month of July most florists obtained better average prices for the month than they did last year, and yet they do not know if they have received cost or not, nor has the wholesaler obtained the highest price possible, as many times during the month there was a vast difference in price on the same kind of stock.

Instead of an equal distribution of stock, one house will get more than it can handle and cut the prices to unload at the expense of the grower. Let the grower distribute his stock to as many houses as he thinks best so that no one house will be overloaded, and by several houses handling his stock he can have a daily report of all stock sold and on hand, and distribute it accordingly so that no one is overloaded. Even in a glut the grower gets a better average and more stock is sold than when unloaded in one house and slaughtered, disregarding prices or cost of production. This applies to the grower selling his own stock as well as commission house. This must be stopped; the grower must demand it or it will not stop. Let the grower distribute his stock to several houses and demand an accurate daily report and you will see how soon price-cutting will stop, and co-operation of wholesalers will begin. As they will be forced to meet the prices of other houses and automatically a better and more uniform price will be established; then let the grower show how much it costs to produce flowers, and demand a living price, and you will obtain the higher prices we must all have. Every grower who goes out of business means that much less stock on the market, which may or may not be a good thing for the trade; but inasmuch as flower prices are largely determined by supply and demand, therefore we would think that by curtailing 50% of the stock you would get a 50% increase in price, and there is some doubt as to whether the 50% increase in price would overcome the increased cost of production.

What kind of co-operation is there or will there be with the wholesaler and retailer? Here, too, there is lack of co-operation and a tendency to putting prices down and selling to department stores in order to move the surplus or glut, thus killing the market for several days for the retailer, who must, in a way, meet department store prices, or at least be told about the low prices "downtown" by many customers each day. The retailer wants higher prices and standard or uniform prices to all, and co-operation of of selling wholesale only. Let the retailers buy everything from the wholesaler, and get organized together and overcome these underselling competitors.

I have endeavored to give you a few rambling thoughts which, I hope, will be the means of getting an organization between the grower, wholesaler and retailer, which means co-operation and higher prices.

The accompanying illustration shows one of the two show windows at the Philadelphia store of Henry A. Dreer, Inc. at 714 Chestnut street

This was especially arranged in response to a request from the National War Stamp Committee to boost the sale of War Savings Stamps. The display was made during the week of July 29 to Aug. 3 and attracted much attention

Fuel Restrictions in Russell, Mass.

The following communication concerning fuel restrictions has been called to our attention by Alfred B. Copeland, grower of Russell, who says: "this ruling seems to me not according to the ruling of the Federal board as I understand it." The letter referred to reads:

"I have received today the following information from Mr. James Storrow's office: 'Commercial greenhouses are classed with manufacturers, therefore they cannot have any anthracite larger than No. 2 buckwheat. They may have bituminous coal up to 50 per cent of their average annual consumption for the last three years, but if their average annual consumption was less than 40 tons they may have 100 per cent.'

(Signed) RUSSELL FUEL COMMITTEE, etc."

Mr. Copeland adds: "Most of the smaller florists are outfitted to burn anthracite coal, but not screenings or soft coal and to do so successfully an entire and expensive addition to the present heating units would be required, which the Federal board seems not to require or desire."

[The State Fuel Administration, as we understand it, has a right to designate the character of the coal allowance, being guided thereto by the supply coming in. Whether this right is an exclusive one or not we cannot say—the only way to prove it out is to appeal to the National Fuel Administration at Washington.—Ed.]

Our Florist Soldiers

The Editor would be glad to receive and publish items of information concerning the lads who have joined our country's naval and military forces.

Everett H. Hart, son of Chas. C. Hart of the Chas. C. Hart Seed Co., Wethersfield, Conn., and who is corporal in Co. B, 101st Machine Gun Battalion, took part in the battle of the Marne, the battalion helping to drive the Germans across the river; then crossed themselves and helped to stop a number of German counter-attacks. It is understood that the battalion was in action for 21 days continuously. A cablegram was received from Corporal Hart by his parents on Aug. 2, stating that he was safe and well, having just come from the front on that day.

Plants for Camp Upton

In THE EXCHANGE of Aug. 3, p. 165, there appeared an appeal from Lieut.-Col. J. E. Abbott, Group Headquarters, 152d Depot Brigade, Camp Upton, N. Y., asking for flowers and plants to beautify the grounds around several of the buildings at Camp Upton. Lieut.-Col. Abbott states that as there are no funds available at the camp for the payment of express or freight charges on shipments, Such donations of flowers, plants and seeds can be shipped free, if sent through the National Plant, Flower and Fruit Guild, 70 Fifth ave., New York City, which organization will furnish an approved label, which is all that is required.

Kansas City, Mo.

Some of the florists report an unusual business for the week just closing; unusual for this season of the year and better than had been expected. Most of it is funeral work, but hospital orders have also been heavy.

Stock has suffered greatly from high temperatures, running to 100 deg. and higher, which have prevailed in Kansas City the first two weeks of August. The thermometer reached 108 deg. two or three days in succession and for several other days it was slightly below that, and many of the flowers were burned up. A heavy, soaking rain fell for several hours the night of Aug. 8, which greatly helped stock. The flowers that are available are in good condition, despite the heat, but the supply is short. Gladioli are $6 to $8 per 100. Asters, 5c. apiece; Roses, $4 to $10 per 100; Lilies, $10 per 100.

In the Service

Walter Newell, son of Arthur Newell at 10th st. and Grand ave., has finished his course of training at the aviation camp, Champaign, Ill., and is awaiting orders for service. Fred Horst, who was for several years a salesman for Mr. Newell, is on his way to France.

L. T. Archis, of Sedalia, Mo. and Harry Miller, representing the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago, were recent visitors.

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Lamb, of the Kellogg Flower and Plant Company, are spending the month of August at their summer home in Outing, Minn.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Elberfield have motored to Minnesota for a two week's stay.

Miss Pearl Foulk, who was formerly with the Apollo Flower Shop in Petticoat Lane and later with J. Austin, 31st st. and Troost ave., is back at the Apollo.

The Kellogg Flower & Plant Co., had the biggest funeral order during the week of July 29 that it has ever had. B.S.B.

St. Louis, Mo.

The flower business for the past week has been at a standstill, nothing going on but necessary funeral work which item has been fair. Continued extremely dry weather has shortened up stock tremendously and this condition is getting worse every day. We have not had what you would call a respectable rain since May. Several small showers since that time have just prolonged the agony. Stock grown out in the field is simply "shot to pieces," and the only good grade stock coming in has been under constant irrigation all Summer.

Roses are in fair supply annd demand at from 2c. to 8c., in the tea class. Russell are the best sellers when obtainable; Ophelia and Killarney are also offered at the above-named prices. Carnations are very small and of poor quality, at 2c. to 3c.

Asters are abundant, in poor graded stock, running at 2c. to 3c.; some few choice ones are found bringing 4c. to 5c. The Gladioli are also poor; field stock has been burnt badly; it sell at 2c., 3c. and 4c., although good, choice stock in pink, red, yellow and spotted sorts brings $6 to $8 per 100.

Lilies are in ample supply for the demand, at 10c. to 12½c.

A few other miscellaneous flowers, such as Phlox, Delphinium and Helianthus are sold at quoted prices. All greens are plentiful except Smilax and Galax.

Successful Annual Meeting

One of the best outdoor meetings in the history of the St. Louis Florists' Club was held at the Jefferson Memorial Building, in Forest Park, Thursday, Aug. 8, the club being the guest of the St. Louis Park officials. Some 60 members were present, and a most enthusiastic and useful meeting ensued. The important feature was the election of officers for the ensuing year, which resulted as follows: President, August Hummert; vice-president, Julius Beneke; secretary Jos. J. Windler; treasurer, Wm. Smith; trustee, 3-year term, Alex. Lurie.

Among the guests were Secretary John Young of the S. A. F. and O. H., who gave a splendid talk on his travels from coast to coast, giving the members a good view of the important features of our business, and urging the great necessity of advertising our business more extensively at this critical time. The club and its individual members have responded heartily to this movement and all who were not in surely got in after his earnest appeal to uphold our interests now. Another welcome guest was J. Fred Amman of Edwardville, Ill., who we hope will be the next president of the S. A. F. and O. H. John Moritz was presented with a silver loving cup in recognition of his untiring efforts to make the last Spring flower show a success. Mr. Moritz and his park staff rendered great help in this undertaking.

Reports of chairmen of the various committees for the national convention were read and all found to be in perfect order for the entertainment of our guests. All officers were present and occupied their new positions. The new members elected at this meeting are: Otto Brunig, Theo. F. G. Browne, Charles Wors, C. A. Kuehn, Jr., and Hiram Niualls. The club was escorted through the park greenhouse, animal and bird houses, and with the customary refreshments it was the end of a perfect day. O. K. S.

Indianapolis, Ind.

There was little to do last week except funeral work, which comes in spurts and which cannot always be relied upon to remove a large surplus from the market.

An abundance of field grown flowers, such as Delphinium, Hydrangeas, Shasta Daisies, Phlox, Golden Glow and Gladioli, featured the trading. Prices vary greatly, as both grower and retailer are apt to follow the general demand, rather than the printed quotations.

Giganteum Liles at $10 to $15 per 100; also rubrums and albums at $5 to $6 are offered in quantity. A few new crop Carnations sell slowly at $1 to $2 per 100. Attractive bunches of Straw Flowers, of the best varieties, are much favored in the shops at 25c. to 50c. per bunch.

The Rose market has been decidedly weakened by the continued warm spell. Much of the shipped-in goods is damaged and the home grown stock is far below the usual quantity. $3 to $8 per 100 is the average wholesale price; $1 to $3 per doz. the retail. A few good Russells are to be had at $12 to $15 per 100; also Am. Beauty Roses at $10 to $25.

Lively Meeting

The State Florists' Ass'n of Indiana held a lively August meeting, with about 30 present. Quite a few from different parts of the State attended, and this always lends interest. The matter of sending flowers to Ft. Harrison weekly was discussed thoroughly and it was the general thought that this important matter be given every attention so that a regular supply be assured. The present committee was continued indefinitely.

President Bertermann and Secretary Steinkamp gave little talks remembering those who were in the service. John Vans of Richmond, Ind., thought a service flag would be the thing and with fine spirit authorized the secretary to purchase a nice one to be used at the club meetings hereafter. It was also thought well to exhibit the service flags in the local store windows.

Adolph Baur thought it would be a wise plan to have a permanent coal committee. After some discussion Messrs, Baur, H. Rieman and Len Elder were appointed.

A special meeting is to be set aside within the next few months in honor of those who come from outside the city.

The Circle Flower Shop was host for the event and a most enjoyable luncheon was served.

William Williamson of the C. B. Thompson Co., Louisville, Ky., is spending a vacation in this city.

Robert Ellis and family have returned from a trip to Anderson, Ind.

There is a growing tendency to attend gatherings of florists since the war started and troublesome problems began to present themselves. It is only through close co-operation that the florists may maintain a fair balance and it is sincerely hoped that many will avail themselves of the national gathering in St. Louis to lend aid and reap the benefit.

Wm. Hack of Ben Davis is cutting his usual supply of fancy Gladioli. His son Carl, who generally looks after the selling end, has lately entered the aviation department at Camp Taylor. I. B.

Cleveland, O.

The unusually warm weather continues and business is sustained at normal by funeral orders and occasional weddings. Large quantities of Gladioli are arriving in both the common and better grades. Some excellent indoor Asters are being sent in, but the field stock is very inferior, having been seriously injured by the prolonged drought. Carnation plants are looking well and housing is in progress. Roses are in low supply, particularly the longer grades, for which the demand is steady. A few orchids are offered daily and are readily absorbed, and Valley is arriving in just sufficient volume to meet the call. Some choice Easter Lilies are to be had and greens of all kinds are superabundant.

The St. Louis Convention

Among those who have signified their intention of attending the S. A. F. convention in St. Louis, Aug. 20, 21, 22, are F. C. W. Brown, Robert Weeks, Walter E. Cook, Frank A. Friedley, Carl Hagenberger, Chas. J. Graham and several others. Despite the acknowledged unfavorable conditions, all indications point to an eminently successful meeting of the national society. Perhaps never before in the history of the society has personal attendance been so imperative as at the present, because of the many vital problems that are now in the process of solution, and because of the absolute necessity of warmly supporting the officials in active charge of the work for the common good. Many Cleveland florists are now away on their annual vacations and there are many unable to get away because of greatly depleted staffs, but notwithstanding, the Sixth City will be well represented at the convention with a goodly list of new names to add to the society roster.

Sunday Closing Works Well

Several weeks have now elapsed since the new Sunday closing rule went into effect in the wholesale market, which is sufficiently long to demonstrate that a closed market on Sunday is not a detriment to business. Retailers doing a Sunday business secure their stock late Saturday, but a marked increase of florists who do not care to do a Sunday business is being noted. A decidedly brisk trade is also noticed early Monday mornings. The change has proved a move in the right direction and it is only a question of time when it will be impossible to purchase flowers on Sunday.

For the first time in many years there are only four wholesale houses in Cleveland, the number being reduced by the Cleveland Florists' Exchange going out of business recently.

James McLaughlin, of the J. M. Gasser Co., returned from his annual vacation Aug. 12. J. M. L.

THE U. S. Government Bureau of Conservation suggests that retail stores ask buyers to carry home such packages as can easily be handled to aid in saving labor in delivery.

Taking retail business as a whole, from the grocer to the big department store, the delivery of small packages has long been an item of expense. Delivery, overtaxed, abused and taken advantage of beyond its intentions has ceased to be a complimentary service thrown in by the merchant for accommodation and good measure.

The American Stores Company, a corporation of chain groceries, takes this opportunity and cuts out all its delivery at one stroke. They say: "We put a store at every objective point and sell you the goods at a big saving over old methods; avail yourselves and carry home the goods." The department stores suggest, in their newspaper advertising. that customers be patriotic and carry home small packages, to save man power for the government. Just what effect this will have on the average buyer who has been spoiled and pampered so long, remains to be seen.

There is a great class of retail buyers who are not in position to carry their purchases. The florist sells his product almost exclusively to this trade. He cannot ask his customers to carry parcels if they want them delivered; and 95 per cent of all flowers purchased must be delivered or there would be no sale. The delivery, therefore, cannot be separated from the sale. We florists, then, cannot follow the advice of the government, but we can reorganize our delivery along better lines that will result in ultimate saving. We certainly need to be more efficient in delivery. The cost of maintenance is now greater than it should be. The haphazard -go-as-you-please plan of delivery service used by all retail florists is presenting an item of expense that is not entirely covered in the selling price.

Take the help situation, once so elastic. No longer can we keep the driver waiting through the best part of the afternoon for goods to be put up and then send him out about the time he should be coming in. He wants to know with reasonable certainty about what time he will finish the day, and he has a right to this consideration.

The business man who lays claim to success must be consistent all around. This is how one of the biggest and ablest men in the world, namely, Charlie Schwab, talks to the employees in the shipyard: "Boys, you're not working for me, you're working with me!" That's the spirit of the day; it unifies effort and gets the goods delivered on time and in time.

"We'll Send It Within an Hour."

waiting service in autos, and boys, and featured quick delivery. Recently this stock phrase, "Within an hour," was changed to "When would you like to have it?" with the result that the delivery is just as much a feature and just as quick, but it is more efficient. They are doing the same work with less help and equipment. The question asked with every order, "When would you like to have it delivered?" required a direct answer, which ran accordingly: "As soon as possible"; "By 2 o'clock sure"; "Any time today"; or, "I would rather have it go the last thing today, as it is for evening use." These answers are recorded on the order sheets by the salesman and, when the time was given, it was marked exactly when wanted and not an hour or two ahead to allow for sending, for this is the work of the shipper, who tabulates the delivery time and makes up the routes accordingly. He is the man who occupies this position because he know how long it will take to make a certain delivery and the best, quickest and most economical way to make it. Waiting delivery service that loafs or speeds under stupid direction is wasteful, not so much in the equipment itself as in the lack of intelligence to plan and direct its use.

No matter how small the business the delivery problem is not absent. First, there's the man with greenhouses three quarters of a mile from town. Most of his business is by phone and he must deliver everything. Next comes the average store retailer, drawing most of his trade from his town or a certain section of a large city. In passing quickly he seems not to have or need a delivery; but a closer view shows that his run of funeral work is quite steady and requires daily service, and that, outside of a few specials run in the window, everything calls for service. Then comes the fashionable store in the larger cities, and here we find delivery is a feature of 98 per cent of the sales.

The Cost of Delivery

Most any florist store will decline to send out goods costing less than $1. It is well to use tact in this—an arbitrary ruling is never to be recommended. The cost per piece delivered, on a yearly average basis, is very high, running from 25c. to 75c. The delivery, with its proportionate overhead in a well managed store, will run about 35 per cent on a before-the-war basis; this percentage, however, included the boxing and packing also. In July, August and September the delivery often costs $1 per package, and even $2, depending on how much saving can be made on help in Summer, when it is not needed. On the other hand, in the busy season, the average cost per piece should drop to 25c. per unit, depending on the efficiency of the system and management.

The florist's is a sort of an idealistic business and it is often unwise to attach an item to the customer's bill, like "delivery, $1." But carfare by your messenger to out of town points must be paid for and the customer is the one who pays. On a larger order the added expense disappears, but on the average order it should always be charged for as an extra item and not taken out of the goods, or at the end of the year the delivery costs will stun you. On a small order outside the delivery limits, it does not pay to send a boy even though the carfare is paid by the customer, because the added cost of the boy's time on the small order will diminish the profits until it becomes simply an accommodation.

Proper Routing Reduces the Cost

Every retailer should use a light auto. There is no business that can afford to be without at least one car. While it is true that the customers of the florist make unreasonable demands this is no reason for leaving the delivery without direction. It is really surprising to see how wastefully this service is conducted in establishments of national prominence, that is, as far as a name goes.

It was in one of these that I had the opportunity to see how they did it at Easter. A fleet of automobiles had been engaged by the hour to handle the extra business. As fast as the goods were ready they were piled in a machine without routing. The driver was told where to stop next by a boy who waded among the packages, handling them over and over to hunt out the addresses. The driver went up and then down, retracing and crossing, going miles out of his way, for the boy, as can be imagined, often got the cart before the horse. The driver was like a navigator trying to find a port without a map; but he didn't care, for he was working by the hour. On the return to the store the boy gave the shipping clerk a double handful of coupons detached from the tags containing the signatures of the recipients. The shipper dropped the coupons in a large violet box like so many beans. Just think of the fine time he will have hunting for Mrs. Blank's ticket if he is called to prove the delivery.

The Card Index System the Best

The usual way of routing, and one in general use, is to have the shipper make up the trip and then copy the name and address in route order on a sheet or book for the delivery man to follow, obtaining a receipt for every de livery. The great drawback in this system of routing is the delay caused by the clerical work of the shipper in copying the trips for the drivers. In the rush season when every minute counts and the cars are waiting the time loss is considerable. I have had a lot of experience in handling the delivery problem and I recommend the card index system as the quickest method of routing and dispatching. This system takes all the clerical work out of this department and puts it in the office. Here the order clerk makes out the tag, and an index card, 3x5in., with a hole in center near the edge. This card bears the name, address and date, leaving a space for the recipient's signature. The index card is clipped to the order and remains with it until after it is filled, then it goes into the shipper's file. All that now remains for him to do is arrange his cards so they will run in route order and hand them to the driver with the goods. The driver puts the cards in a loose leaf binder with a ring clasp. As the cards are signed, he simply turns them back without detaching from the ring.

When he returns he gives the cards, now signed, to the clerk, who indexes them alphabetically, in a box file, where they can be immediately produced if wanted. The card index system of routing will increase the efficiency of the delivery at least 30 per cent by saving time, help, confusion and error. A grower friend of mine, using his own car, helping on the delivery with the card system, handled twice as much in a given time as he did the following day when he hired out to another store where they kept him waiting an hour before each trip, and then gave him the route on a piece of ribbon paper that soon became illegible and torn.

To have a reputation for quick and reliable delivery service is the greatest asset a store can have. There can be no compromise on delivery. It must be right and it must be dependable. Carefulness and a reasonable amount of style in package and equipment are essential and go hand in hand with reliability and speed. By no means let down on appearance. Don't neglect the car, but have it done up this season as usual. There must be no such dangerous practice as cutting down on delivery; no false economies in war times.

The Undertaker and the Florist

Editor The Florists' Exchange:

I noticed an article in THE EXCHANGE of Aug. 3, page 175, entitled "Business with Undertakers". As far as paying an undertaker 20 to 33 per cent. commission is concerned, I for one do not intend to pay any undertaker commission on my labor. The time is coming soon when all the florists will have to come to some understanding on the subject. An undertaker has no right to sponge upon the florists' labors. What would an undertaker think of a florist if the latter should come to him and say: "A man has died up my way; if I get you the job I want 25 per cent. commission." I suppose the undertaker would call the florist all kinds of names; yet he has the "cheek" to take what belongs to the florist. When commissions are paid to undertaker the customer is not getting what he pays for.

The florist should get together; they can do so without harm to themselves. They will have the respect of their customers and can give them value to 100 cents on a dollar, which they are entitled to. Every florist should have a printed card in his place of business letting the public know the facts. Very few of the public are aware of this "graft" of the undertakers and when they are educated to the fact, it will be better for all florists. Let the undertaker mind his own business, get his legitimate profit from his labors and "stay in his own yard," letting the florist have what rightfully belongs to him. I hope to hear further from our fellow florists in regards to the "undertaker's commissions."

Aug. 8, 1918. THEODORE STREZESKI, N. J.

Foresees Wonderful Development After War

Editor The Florists' Exchange:

Was it in your columns that I lately saw the suggestion that nurserymen take up landscape gardening as a "side-line"? I rise to protest against such a mistaken proceeding, and to give my reasons for such protesting.

Many things this terrible and blessed war is doing for us; terrible for obvious reasons; blessed for reasons equally obvious, for many blessings have already come from it for our country; the greatest one "in my foolish opinion" the discovery by the public mind of the value, dignity and delight of farming and gardening. After the war, there will be—make no mistake about this—such a renaissance of beauty in this land as is not dreamed of now. Every man, woman and child who has grown vegetables, will be calling for flowers, flowering shrubs and all the beautiful decorative material which exists in our nurseries. Flower gardens will be the order of the day everywhere. New societies will spring up devoted to special flowers. The offices of landscape architects and garden designers will be overwhelmed with work. The newer shrubs and trees will be in immense demand. If unworthy design is given to the public from now on, by untrained men or half trained men in the nursery business, the public mind will be misled and an opportunity will have been unused to set the feet of Americans in the path of true beauty.

If the nurserymen must add landscape gardening to their usual routine of business let me urge upon them the employment only, of designers who are graduates of recognized schools or departments of our universities, men unlikely to force upon unsuspecting clients such material as Colorado Blue Spruce, Golden-leaved Philadelphus, and the other out of date stock now under the ban of all persons of taste. It would be far better for the general advancement of horticultural taste in the country, and therefore ultimately far better for them if, as a rule, the nurserymen would keep to their own province, the improving of their stock, and the interesting and remunerative business of filling orders for that stock. LOUISA YEOMANS KING.

Mrs. Francis King,
Alma, Mich., July 31, 1918.

We welcome this letter from Mrs. Francis King, well known in many florist circles, and president of that eminently serviceable organization, the Woman's National Farm and Garden Association.

We have printed Mrs. King's letter in full, and are happy to state that she is somewhat mistaken in her conclusions as to the course we are steering in our endeavors to induce florist-growers to take interest in nursery stock.

We have not advocated that nurserymen take up landscape gardening as a side line, for the reason that today there are few nurserymen catering to ornamental side lines who have not one or more first class landscape gardeners attached to their staff, men who reflect honor on the nursery business, and who are fully as able to cope with the problems of landscape gardening as is the landscape architect, perhaps better able for, as a rule, he is more thoroughly acquainted with plant life and realizes better its development, and the correct positions for trees and shrubs with a view to the consummation of their crowning glory.

Our special endeavor is to interest the florist-grower to plan and plant out a show ground, first with an eye to the improvement of his own property, and secondly with a view to stimulating the free use of trees and shrubs by the average householder—a propaganda which he of all men is best fitted to carry out. The result of such an effort on a fair average would be that the planting of ornamental nursery stock would be increased one hundred fold. And the florist-grower will find an ample field for his work in planting out and caring for small properties. It would be unnecessary, in fact, unwise, for him to make an effort to plant large properties; these can well be left to the men who have made this larger work their life sturdy.

As to "Colorado Blue Spruce, Golden-leaved Philadelphus, and other out of date stock now under the ban of all persons of taste", we must refuse to be drawn into a discussion of these higher ethics of "refined" planting.

C. W. Ward, of Eureka, Cal., advises the writer that he feels confident that he will obtain his full import orders of Dutch bulbs this year, for in addition to holding import licenses from both the United States and Holland Governments, he has received assurances from influential sources that, as his orders are for bulbs for planting, rather than for re-sale, they will be given preference in shipping. Mr. Ward states that his purchases of Dutch bulbs this year are the largest that the Cottage Gardens have ever made. He expects his shipment to be afloat between Sept. 5 and 10.

D. Raymond, of the Garden City Pottery Co., states that Government restrictions have so far not affected his company's output of flower pots, and as yet there are no clouds on the horizon.

F. C. Jaeger, of F. C. Jaeger & Son, advises the writer that he believes the floral offerings tendered to "Eddie Graney" on the opening of his new establishment, would, at a conservative estimate, amount to more than $1000, many of the pieces costing upward of $40 each. "Too much publicity cannot be given to a matter of that kind," says Mr. Jaeger. "Time and again, people would send floral offerings on an occasion of this kind, but fail to do so, simply because they do not think about it. It is the florist's duty to keep the matter in their minds."

Richard Diener has named one of his new Gladioli after Miss Gladys Plath, daughter of H. Plath of the Ferneries, and another after Mrs. Jack Walsh, wife of THE EXCHANGE correspondent. The first named Gladiolus is a cattleya-lavender with carmine throat; the second is salmon-pink with deep red throat. Both varieties having characteristics of great promise.

Mr. Dobner, of Schmitz & Dobner, of Stockton, Cal., dropped into town on Saturday, Aug. 3, and was a guest of the Pacific Coast Hort. Society that evening. Other visitors in town included M. H. Ebel, of Sacramento, and C. W. Ward, of Eureka, who is making his headquarters at the Hotel Whitcomb.

Club Meeting—Coming Picnic

At the August meeting of the Pacific Coast Hort. Society, held on Aug. 3, J. A. Carbone exhibited a specimen of orchid Vanda Luzonica, which received an award of 95 points. At this meeting it was decided that the picnic of the society be held at San Mateo Beach, San Mateo County, on Sunday, Aug. 25. Those going to the beach by electric car can reach there by taking the San Mateo car, at 5th and Market sts., and alighting at Peninsula ave., Burlingame; then walking westward to the beach. At this writing it is expected that some arrangement will be made whereby guests who come by electric car will be taken down to the beach by automobile, but a definite announcement on this point will be made later. Those making the entire journey by automobile will find the beach easily reached by turning westward from the Mission rd. at Peninsula ave., Burlingame.

J. R. W.

Portland, Ore.

August so far has been highly satisfactory. Flowers have been fairly plentiful, but the steady funeral work keeps them pretty well cleaned up. Good Asters are now coming in. Carnations are still coming in finely and clean up well but the growers who still have a bench or so in crop will soon be throwing them out to plant young stock. Miscellaneous outdoor flowers are still coming in but will soon be off the market, as the weather continues dry. The Rose crop on the young, newly set stock is arriving, so that the call for the Rose can again be taken care of.

Buy From the Commercial Grower

Gladioli are of excellent quality and in good supply; in fact it looks as though there might be an oversupply soon. They have sold well with both the grower and the retailer. Let us hope this flower will not be overdone. The writer had occasion to speak to a private party soliciting sale for some 5000 Gladiolus flowers that she expected to dispose of to the trade. Now it can be safely said that there are enough commercial growers to fully supply all the Gladioli that are needed and when a retailer buys from private people he takes what really belongs to the grower, who makes his living from the business. Private parties will also make a sacrifice more readily than growers and the result will be that instead of the grower realizing from 5c. to 8c. he will get from 2c. to 4c. and the retailer will find that his competitor has cut the prices correspondingly. Retailers have been making the mistake for years of buying such flowers as Daffodils, Narcissi and many other sorts from non-commercial growers at very low prices until

City Water Injurious to Plant Life

The following question is submitted in the hope that one or more of our readers will be in a position to answer it, perhaps one who has himself suffered injury from a too high percentage of chlorine in the water, although it would be natural to assume that if such is the case, it might also be injurious to the humans who drink the water:

"Has there ever come to your notice any case of injury to plants through their being watered with city water which has been subjected to chlorinization treatment for killing of bacteria? This process is frequently used, we believe, for rendering city water free of disease germs, and we are anxious to find out whether the amount of chlorine gas in the water would have an injurious effect on plant life."

The Market

Aug. 13.—The two pronounced features of the wholesale cut flower market this week are a medium large general supply of flowers, mostly of those grown in the open, and a small demand.

American Beauty Roses are in medium supply and the quality of these in general is rather poor. The demand is very moderate and special grade blooms are selling at from 6c. to 30c. each and the other grades at corresponding prices.

Hybrid tea Roses are in fair supply for the season. They are moving slowly, the top grades at prices ranging from 3c. to 8c. each in general, with small sales of the choicest blooms of the preferred varieties at from 10c. to 25c. each and bottom grade blooms at from 25c. to $3 per 100.

Carnations from the old plants are practically over and only a few blooms from the young plants are arriving. Prices range from 25c. to $1 per 100 with few purchasers.

Cattleya orchid blooms are in extremely short supply which is not sufficient to satisfy even the present weak demand. They are selling at from 25c. each for the inferior varieties up to $1 each for the preferred varieties and some very small sales are reported at a still higher price.

There is an abundant supply of white and pink Lilies, both moving slowly, the former at from $4 to $6 per 100 and the latter at from $1.50 to $3.

A moderate supply of Lily of the Valley, some of it of excellent quality, is now arriving. The demand for it at from $2 to $8 per 100 is not brisk.

Of the Summer flowers grown in the open the supply of Asters and Gladioli is not as large as last week. A little better price, as may be seen from our quotations, are obtained for the higher grade blooms of each. The supply of other Summer flowers is quite varied and moderately large, but the demand for these and for greens is small and sales are made only at low prices. An exception to this statement should be made in the case of Tritoma, the blooms of which are scarce this year and have been selling and are now to some extent at about $4 per 100.

S. A. F. Convention

It may be unnecessary, but will do no harm to remind the members of the craft that the party from New York City and vicinity, traveling from New York to St. Louis to attend the S. A. F. and O. H. Convention, will leave this city on the Keystone express, No. 21, from the Pennsylvania Terminal Station, 33d st. and Seventh ave., New York City, at 2:04 p.m., on Sunday, Aug. 18. The names of those from New York and vicinity who propose to attend the convention were given in our last issue, and up to this date, Wednesday, no other names have been reported to us.

Gladiolus Show

The Horticultural Society of New York will hold an exhibition of plants and flowers on Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 24 and 25, in the Museum building, New York Botanical Garden, Bronx Park. The premium list is arranged for distribution, and will be sent on application to the secretary, George V. Nash, New York Botanical Garden, Bronx Park, New York City.

O. A. M. Miller of the Green Floral Co., Dallas, Tex., who some time ago came to New York to undergo a serious operation, which was performed recently, is reported to be now well on the road to recovery.

Geo. Vlachos, formerly a retail florist, has recently published two copyrighted post cards. On the reverse of the one is a poem entitled: "'Never Again' the Kaiser's Cornflower but call me Liberty Blue." and on the other is a poem also about Cornflowers, entitled: "The Pleading Little Flower." These patriotic post cards are well illustrated in colors with Cornflowers, soldiers and the flags of the several allied nations. Not a few articles have been written and published during the last few months, the trend of all of which show that the Cornflower, Centaurea Cyanus, is a flower of English origin and belongs to the whole world and not to the German Kaiser and his followers exclusively.

John Miesem of Elmhurst, L. I., the well-known Lily grower, and Mrs. Miesem, will celebrate their 25th marriage anniversary on Aug. 24. They will spend a few days about that date with Jos. S. Fenrich and family at their Summer home at Bradley Beach, N. J., during which visit they will make a trip in Mr. Fenrich's auto to Atlantic City, N. J.

Marcel Lamont, formerly in charge of the flower shop at the Hotel Astor, is now in Jacksonville, Fla., at Camp Johnson, teaching our soldier boys the French language.

Some fine specimens, for this season of the year, of Russell Roses and also of the new variety Columbia were noted this week at Jos. S. Fenrich's, 51 W. 28th st.

When calling recently at H. E. Froment's, 148 E. 26th st., who, as is well known, is one of the largest receivers of Roses in New York City, our attention was called to the unusual quality for this season of the year of Mrs. Shawyer, Prima Donna and Columbia.

To correct a misleading word in last week's issue we desire to say that Harry A. Bunyard is still with the Nitrate Agencies Co., at its New York City office, and will remain with the company until he is called overseas, which will probably be in the course of a few weeks.

Boston

The Market

Aug. 14.—There is a slight shortage of outdoor flowers, due to a severe rain and hail storm which struck this section of New England the middle of last week. Business is rather quiet and the shortage is not materially felt.

There is a moderate supply of American Beauty Roses, which are selling fairly well at 6c. to 25c. each. There is an abundance of hybrid tea Roses of good quality which are moving fairly well at prices ranging from 1c. to 10c. The latter price is only obtained for small lots of Kaiserin, Ophelia and Russell.

Carnations are practically all out of the market and those that reach the market sell at $1 per 100. Asters are in lighter supply; the wet weather has spoiled many of them. Late Asters will soon be in good supply and look well this season. Gladioli are abundant but are moving fairly well at reasonable prices. Cattleya orchids are scarce but there is very little call for them at this time.

There is a fairly good supply of Lilies without any noticeable demand. There is a big supply of Lilium Auratum which hardly can be sold at any price. Lily of the Valley is very scarce, at $6 to $8 per 100. There is a good supply of all seasonable greens, such as Asparagus and Adiantum, which has a fair call. Plants are moving slowly; the only kinds offered are Dracænas, Crotons and ferns.

Mass. Hort. Society

The board of trustees at a meeting last week voted an appropriation not exceeding $3500 for the 1919 schedule of exhibitions and gave the following outline of prizes and exhibitions: For the exhibition of products of children's gardens $250; for children's gardens within 10 miles of the State House $250; for amateur home vegetable gardens within 10 miles of the State House $250; for exhibition of the products of amateur home vegetable gardens $250; for a fruit and vegetable exhibition in September $1000 for vegetables and $500 for fruit.

Annual Gladiolus and Phlox Exhibition

The exhibition held at Horticultural Hall on Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 10 and 11, was not large but the quality of the flowers was exceptionally fine in many instances. The show was a little too early for some growers. The attendance was good. A notable feature was the many seedlings of merit that are being raised in this section of the country.

The majority of the prize winners were in the amateur class. Thos. Cogger of Melrose, Mass., was awarded first for a vase of six spikes, any other color, with Miss Helen Franklin. He was also awarded a silver medal in open competition for the same variety. Miss Helen Franklin—which, by the way, we singled out as a winner when it was exhibited at the show of the American Gladiolus Society in New York, last Summer, and illustrated in the G. and F. Annual for 1918—is said by the originator to be one of the finest varieties for florists' use. It is a clear white, with violet stripes on the lower petals, developing seven flowers when in full bloom. It is a very upright and strong grower. About 200 blooms were shown in Boston. See illustration in another column.

S. E. Spencer, a heavy prize winner, was also awarded a silver medal for a magnificent display of Gladioli which contained beautiful varieties showing superior cultivation.

The Boston Cut Flower Co. put up a remarkable display of artistically arranged Gladioli in baskets and was awarded the society's silver medal.

Bronze medals were awarded C. W. Brown and Jelle Roos for displays of Gladioli. George N. Smith received honorable mention for collection of herbaceous Phloxes.

There was a good display of seasonable fruit and excellent collections of vegetables which were fine examples of superior cultivation.

Severe Hail Storm

On Wednesday eve'g, Aug. 7, a terrific hail and windstorm did considerable damage to vegetation in this section of the country. Many large trees were uprooted in the Boston Public Garden. Many war gardens also suffered damage, more particularly by the hail.

M. A. Davenport of Watertown has an immense range of greenhouses, mostly devoted to the growing of ferns. This is one of the places where Italian women do a large part of the work and are giving good satisfaction. Some of the greenhouses are to be closed up next Winter.

Wm. R. Morris of Wellesley, who has been a Rose grower for many years, is going to grow Carnations the coming Winter; in this way he hopes to be able to get along on his allowance of coal. R. C.

Rochester, N. Y.

Business generally is quiet, as is usual at this time of the year, but things are far better than can be expected under present conditions, and if transportation were reliable much more business could be done. However, under present circumstances it is impossible to ship anything with the assurance that the goods will arrive at their destination in a satisfactory condition, especially through the intense heat which has been general here for the past two weeks or more.

The market is pretty well overstocked with Gladioli and a few other odds and ends of outdoor material. Roses are not particularly abundant but the supply at present is fully equal in most cases to the demand, and the heat plays havoc with the blooms. Asters are not plentiful. A few are coming in but the quality is generally poor, although there is every reason to believe that late Asters will be good, as we have had some good rains lately.

Charles W. Curtis of Irondequoit, N. Y., has a new white Aster, apparently of the branching type, which he has been nursing for some time. It has every promise of being the best early white extant.

The contents of the greenhouses; also implements, etc., of the establishment conducted by the late Frank O'Brien, were sold at auction on Saturday, Aug. 10, at Fairport, N. Y.

Geo. De Muth, formerly with Geo. B. Hart and now stationed at Camp Dix, made a short visit this week. He expects to leave shortly for overseas duty.

Thos. J. Sullivan has gone across, news to that effect having been received. H. B. S.

Bridgeport, Conn.

The war gardens have been seriously affected by insect pests especially the aphis, so that the crops will be small. Flowering plants in the cemeteries have also suffered.

Some of the local florists will have to close up part of their houses, in order to comply with the 50 per cent. fuel order. One leading firm, which has about 30 houses, will close up at least nine of them.

Fine Asters, Snapdragons, Gladioli, Stocks and other seasonable flowers are being cut.

Business in general is not brisk; about the only call for flowers is for the sick at the hospitals. F. E. B.

The Market

Aug. 13.—The mercury on Monday reached 101 deg., which is within one deg. of the August record of a week ago, and the third hottest in the history of the weather bureau in Chicago. Such weather conditions are bad for the flower market, both wholesale and retail. Stock is popping into bloom prematurely and everything is showing the effects of the heat. Poor stock and slow sales are the prevailing characteristics of the market.

There are some Am. Beauty Roses of fair quality, cut mostly from young plants, that are having a steady call. Mrs. Russell is the best of the other varieties for hot weather use, as the great substance of the blooms prevents them from opening quickly, which is a desirable trait for hot weather shipping. All the other varieties open more quickly, the market being well filled with open stock. Good stock for shipping is scarce.

Carnations are about as poor as they ever get to be. The fact that it is their off season, coupled with the extreme heat, are the reasons for this. Gladioli are offered in large quantities everywhere but some dealers say there are not as many as there were this time a week ago. However, there are more than enough for the demand and prices are low. The price last week ranged from $1 to $4 per 100.

Asters are another strong feature of the market, but they are showing the effects of the extreme heat. Should the heat continue Aster growers are fearful lest the entire crop may be irreparably damaged. They are selling at from $1 to $4 per 100. Orchids and Lily of the Valley are on the short side but as there is no active demand their scarcity is of but little importance to the dealers. The supply of Easter Lilies is good; there is also plenty of L. rubrum, which meets with only a moderate demand, its chief use being for funeral work. Water Lilies are selling exceedingly well. Golden Glow 'Mums are still coming in and are being featured in the window display of some of the leading retailers.

There is the customary supply of all Summer flowers, all of which show more or less damage from the heat. The supply of greens is ample. With a stronger demand fancy ferns might not be sufficient, as reports come from the shippers in the North Woods are to the effect that the difficulty in getting suitable help for the picking of this crop is fast becoming a perplexing problem with them.

General News

A. Lange, 25 E. Madison st., has returned from a vacation in Mt. Clemens, Mich., very much improved.

Secretary John Young was in the city Friday and Saturday, collecting donations of Chicago firms to the National Publicity campaign. The secretary desires to make the best possible showing for the society in his annual report at the convention to be submitted at St. Louis next week.

C. B. Knickman, representing McHutchison & Co., is in the city on his way home from a trip to the Pacific Coast. While on the coast he visited the famous Eureka Gardens, and speaks highly of the Tulip and Hyacinth crops that are now being harvested there. Azaleas and Rhododendrons out there re looking fine and are in widespread emand throughout the country.

Nick Spiropolos, proprietor of a basement flower store on Wabash ave., known s the Wabash Flower Market, was attacked on Friday night by a stranger who went into his place of business and sked for a casket spray. Just as the florist was filling the order the stranger hit him on the head with a piece of cast ron rod that broke on his head. The blow did not stun him as expected and his outcry caused the would-be robber to make a hasty escape. Nick was around he market Saturday exhibiting a cut head and the piece of iron rod that caused it. This happened in the heart of he loop district and within three blocks of the Chicago wholesale market.

Thein's Greenhouses, under the direction of J. Fred Wustenhoff, are fast assuming an up-to-date appearance. Stock s being potted and in the Carnation houses new benches have been installed and soil put in ready for benching.

The Ove Gnatt Co., La Porte, Ind., has an exhibit of artificial flowers and preserved foliage at the manufacturers' exhibit at the Palmer House. H. G. McLellan will represent this firm at the St. Louis Convention, where it will have an exhibit of preserved material suitable for the florists' trade.

Creditors of Pyfer & Olsem filed an involuntary petition in bankruptcy against them in the U. S. Court in Chicago, on Aug. 6. The claims scheduled by the petitioners are: International Forwarding Co. $85.25, Van Zonneveld Bros. & Phillipo $584.60, and L. Van Leeuwen & Sons $303.40, all representing Holland firms. The business of the firm has been in a tangle since last February when Harry E. Philpott filed a bill of foreclosure under which a receiver was appointed, Mr. Philpott eventually succeeding to the receivership, which terminated by agreement July 1 when the profits of the season's business were to have been divided among the creditors. Mr. Philpott endorsed all the purchase notes and took second and third mortgages as security. The property formerly belonged to Herman F. Schuettler, chief of police in Chicago, who holds the first mortgage and who filed suit July 23 to recover interest due on notes. The firm of A. T. Pyfer & Co., wholesale commission florists, have no connection with these proceedings as a body, other than Mr. Pyfer's own personal interest.

I. O. Kemble of Marshalltown, Ia., is in the city. He complains of the difficulty in his State of securing competent greenhouse labor. He came here to engage a foreman.

Allie Zech and wife and E. C. Pruner and wife will start Thursday for a trip to the St. Louis convention. They expect to make the entire trip by auto, spending the first night out in Joliet and the following one in Springfield.

President Lautenschlager of the Chicago Florists' Club estimates that the entire representation from Chicago to the St. Louis convention will be about 50. Paul Klingsporn of the booster committee is compiling the list.

A large number of visitors on their way to the convention are expected in the city Sunday and Monday next Some of the wholesale houses expect to keep their places of business open Sunday for the purpose of accommodating and entertaining such visitors as may be in the city that day. On Monday evening a dinner will be furnished the visitors before taking the train for St. Louis.

Chas. Kohn, well known on the wholesale market, is in Co. D, 326th Infantry, in France. He has written a letter to Wietor Bros. telling of camp life over there and adds incidentally "the flower business is a very poor business in the Army."

Fort Wayne, Ind.

We have been experiencing the hottest weather for 20 years; the thermometer registering as high as 110 deg. on Tuesday, Aug. 6. However, the demand for flowers did not suffer materially from these conditions, as several of the florists report a better call than there has been for weeks, with funeral work predominating, and a number of small weddings. The supply has been wholly inadequate to the demand, especially in flowers for funeral work. Lilies having been decidedly on the short side, while there was an excellent demand for them. The same was true of Roses, those obtainable being of poor quality. Russell, the best Summer Rose on the market here, is off crop, and Shawyer is looking decidedly faded.

Among outdoor flowers, Asters are the mainstay of the florist, as they are showing the best quality. Other flowers, especially the smaller sorts, are suffering from the long continued drought. Gladioli have been somewhat affected, as many of the buds wither before they open, after they have arrived in the stores. Carnations are decidedly poor, most of them being "sun-spotted." Baskets have been used to a great extent both for hospital purposes and funerals to help out.

There is a big demand for Boston and other ferns, as there are practically no other potted plants on the market. There were a greater number of weddings during July and the first half of August this year than for several years. There are a few hardy Sweet Peas. Orchids are still scarce. A few early Golden Glow 'Mums, the first of the season, are being displayed in some of the leading stores. Few other outdoor flowers are being shown, the best of these being Daisies, Calendulas, Candytuft and Snapdragon.

For the Red Cross

A. J. Lanternier & Co. donated 23 corsages to the Red Cross Gift Shop on Saturday, Aug. 3, which met with a fine sale, and netted the Red Cross excellent returns. A number of loose flowers were given to the Red Cross by the Freese Floral Co. D. B.

Philadelphia

The Market

Aug. 13.—The intense heat of the past week has played hob with the market, and flowers are arriving in poor shape. Especially is this so of the outdoor stock, such as Asters and Gladioli; they are both in overupply in the poor grades. Good Asters are hard to find There is an adequate supply of Roses, with the short grades predominating. Easter Lilies clean up daily, while the rubrums and auratums are in oversupply. Carnations are almost gone. There is little Valley and almost no Cattleya orchids. Tritomas and Cosmos are with us once again. Business was exceedingly quiet the entire week.

To Exhibit at the Convention

The following firms from this city will exhibit at the S. A. F. convention at St. Louis: Henry A. Dreer, Inc., the Robert Craig Co., the Joseph Heacock Co., the S. S. Pennock Co., H. Bayersdorfer & Co., and the M. Rice Co.

Franklin Ely, manager of the seed department of the Henry F. Michell Co., is on his vacation.

Wm. S. Gannon, brother to Martin Gannon, is among those mentioned in the casualty list as seriously wounded. He was hit by shrapnel.

ASTERS

In all lengths, assorted colors, same medium quality and same extra quality at $1.00, $2.00, $3.00 and the choicest stock at $4.00 per 100.

A Good Example

One of the daily newspapers has been publishing a number of letters received, condemning the use of flowers at funerals. It is noted with satisfaction that these letters did not escape the attention of Geo. C. Watson, who very aptly and pointedly retaliated in kind.

Fred Rowland of Henry A. Dreer Inc. is recuperating in the country after his recent illness.

Joseph G. Neidinger has his family at Atlantic City for the Summer. Geo. Hampton has returned from a very successful western trip.

Benjamin Gibbs states that September Morn and Prima Donna are two excellent Summer Roses.

Robert A. Craig takes a few week end holidays at the "City by the Sea."

Martin Reukauf and I. M. Bayersdorfer will represent H. Bayersdorfer & Co. at the S. A. F. convention at St. Louis.

Dennis Connor has completed the erection and rebuilding of the greenhouses at the J. J. Habermehl's Sons at 22d and Diamond sts. He is now engaged in the overhauling and erection of several heating plants among the florists.

Charles H. Grakelow expects to attend the convention at St. Louis. As far as can be learned, up to the present writing, no one else is going from this city aside from the trade exhibitors previously mentioned.

Word has been received from Lieut. David C. Boyle, formerly with the M. Rice Co., and who is now in France, that all is well with him.

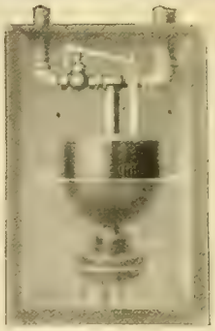
Buy Putty
Be Sure it is the Stay Put Kind

BUY it. Don't try to make it. No matter how good the oil and whiting you use, you can't mix it by hand the way our special putty machine does.

Every grain of whiting should be surrounded by a coating of oil. That is one of the reasons why our Stay Put Putty stays put. It is as smooth as velvet. Lays freely.

It may cost a cent or so a pound more than those other kinds, but what is a cent a pound when you want putty that stays put?

Order one of these kegs and give it a try. We have a big list of customers who buy nothing but putty from us.



Busy as a Bee
Automatic Cellar Drainer

NOBODY has to tell you when you are hungry, or what to do. When you are, you eat.

Nobody has to bother about turning on a pump to keep the water out of your boiler cellar. This inexpensive automatic cellar drainer drains your cellar before it needs draining.

It keeps it drained. Takes no steam to run it.

Be sure to send for a copy of our new 1918 Handy Hand Book.

Burpee's Sweet Peas

Fordhook Pink and White
Natural Size

NEW WINTER-FLOWERING SPENCERS

THE coal problem is one of great concern to the commercial florist, and there appears to be no alternative except to produce such crops as can be grown with the smallest amount of heat. Sweet Peas can be successfully grown under conditions that would not allow production of other popular flowers. We recommend to our florist friends that they sow Sweet Peas under glass for a commercial Winter crop. Sweet Peas are the logical paying crop for the coming Winter. They may be grown with very little heat.

The Burpee Winter-Flowering Spencer Sweet Peas are the result of crosses made at Fordhook Farms during the past ten years, and are great advances in the various colors. The seed is all grown on our Floradale Farm, "The California Home of Sweet Peas." The greatest care is given to their production, and all stocks may be relied upon as being true to type and color.

BURPEE'S SWEET PEAS during the past few years have been awarded seven silver cups, six gold medals, and innumerable certificates for new varieties; thus clearly demonstrating the great superiority of the stocks that we offer.*

Saint Louis Welcomes The Country's Florists

Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists

SAINT LOUIS, AUGUST 20, 21, 22

THE thirty-fourth annual convention opened in Moolah Temple, St. Louis, on Tuesday, Aug. 20, at 2:30 p.m., in the most beautiful setting that ever graced a similar occasion, thanks to the good offices of the park commissioners of this city, splendidly reinforced through the effective cooperation of the St. Louis Florists' Club. The temple itself is a beautiful structure, located in a quiet residential section, and its complete quietness afforded ideal hearing facilities. The stage setting calls for more than passing notice. Below the stage were palms, Boston and Holly ferns, flanked on either extremity with pyramids of other palms, Kentias 18ft. high forming the apex. On the stage, ranged the full length of the footlights, were Pandanus Veitchii and Whitmanii ferns. On the stage stood four large baskets containing principally Gladioli, all notable, one in particular containing Chicago Gladioli and purple Asters with Asparagus plumosus tied with ombre ribbon, a presentation to the president and the officers of the society by F. H. Webber of St. Louis. The galleries were most profusely decorated with the flags of the Allies. A large American flag floated above the president's chair and another guarded the ascent to the rostrum. All this was enhanced by the delightful effect of the background. A painted scenery of palms, cacti and mountain scenery, a blue sky and a soft diffused light mellowing the really lovely tout ensemble. The approach to the temple from the street was equally attractive, the stone balustrade being decorated with Boston ferns and Asparagus Sprengeri, and at the entrance doors stood pyramid and standard Box in tubs.

At the opening meeting we noted with much pleasure the presence of many old-time members who have been identified with conventions for years, among them Richard Vincent, Jr., White Marsh, Md.; John G. Esler, Saddle River, N. J.; A. L. Miller, Jamaica, N. Y.; John A. Evans, Richmond, Ind.; E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind.; Irwin Bertermann, Indianapolis, Ind.; W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J.; Jos. Manda, West Orange, N. J.; Frank Friedley, Cleveland, Ohio; Geo. Asmus, Chicago; A. F. Poehlmann, Chicago; M. Barker, Chicago; Fred Lautenschlager, Chicago; J. A. Peterson, Cincinnati, Ohio; C. L. Baum, Knoxville, Tenn.; Chas. P. Mueller, Wichita, Kans.; C. E. Critchell, Cincinnati, Ohio; J. T. D. Fulmer, Des Moines, Ia.

The first afternoon proceedings followed the schedule closely. On the platform, additional to the officers of the society and those of the local club, were ex-Presidents Hill, Gude, Asmus, Vincent and Kerr.

The mayor gave the keynote when he bid the visitors feel as though they were at home. The weather was warm, but not unduly so. At Pres. Totty's suggestion, the delegates uncoated and the business was put through without hitch, the audience having first joined in singing one verse of America, under the leadership of J. Fred Ammann. During the session Irwin Bertermann, given the privilege, made a telling speech on the effectiveness of our women in the war and paid special tribute to the mother of the S. A. F., Mrs. Richard Vincent, Jr., of White Marsh, Md., and the mother of the F. T. D., Mrs. Wm. F. Gude of Washington, D. C., both of whom were escorted to the stage and presented with baskets of flowers.

The convention was called to order by August H. Hummert, vice-president of the St. Louis Florists' Club. L. Jules Bourdet, vice-president of the S. A. F., upon being introduced by Mr. Hummert, delivered an address of welcome, followed by an address by Hon. Henry Kiel, Mayor of St. Louis, who extended a hearty welcome to the delegates. J. Fred Ammann responded to the mayor, praising St. Louis hospitality. He drew a picture of the great part floral offerings play on all occasions—births, graduations, weddings, sickness and death. He also outlined the great work to be done by the S. A. F. after the war period, and spoke of the sacrifices on the part of our florists in sending their sons into service.

Mr. Hummert now turned the convention over to President Totty, who proposed singing America. Mr. Totty then moved that the following resolution be adopted; it was unanimously carried:

Whereas, the S. A. F. being now represented in large numbers by its boys "Over there," desires to express appreciation of the Commander-in-chief of the Army and Navy, on whose unflinching patriotism and devotion to country they fully rely; therefore,

Be it Resolved, that in the thirty-fourth annual convention assembled at St. Louis, August 20, we beg to transmit to His Excellency, the President of these United States, Woodrow Wilson, our prayers for his continued success in wise leadership and pledge our most loyal devotion to the great cause of which he, more than any other American, is the far-seeing leader and exemplar.

A telegram was read from Ernest J. Sayward, president of the Canadian Hort. Ass'n, conveying greetings, reciprocating good will and fellowship, and expressing the sentiment that "shoulder to shoulder, like our gallant boys, we will work together for future good."

President Totty congratulated the St. Louis florists on the magnificent hall decorations which presented a bower of beauty, and he proposed a resolution of thanks to the florist. The president's address follows:

President Totty's Address

We are assembled today for the thirty-fourth annual convention, to greet each other as friends and fellow-horticulturists, and to derive mental and physical benefit from contact with associates all engaged in the same business of growing and distributing plants and flowers; a business which is one of the finest on earth since its sole and only mission is to elevate and improve not only its members but the world at large.

We are meeting today under the handicap of war—the old, happy, carefree note of previous conventions will be absent. Meeting facts face to face, with an earnest endeavor to keep an even keel on the troubled "Sea of Business" demands at this time much thoughtful and careful consideration.

Let us first of all, as good, loyal Americans, reaffirm our faith in the leadership of our splendid President, Woodrow Wilson, and let the world know that we, as florists, individually and collectively, are back of him so that "Government of the People, by the People and for the People," shall continue to flourish.

National League for Woman's Service

The times through which we are passing are momentous ones for the florists. In the eyes of some people, since war was declared, we have been regarded to a certain degree as "non-essential," our product not being considered necessary to the winning of the war. Physically, flowers are not necessary, but their influence on the soul of the people has been and will be of inestimable benefit during the coming Winter. In this connection, one of the finest illustrations is the work being done by the National League for Woman's Service, which works with and through the Red Cross. This movement was organized for the express purpose of presenting our wounded soldiers in the hospitals throughout the country with fresh flowers. Distributions have been effected on a large scale in the New York section for some months, and will be spread throughout the entire country as base hospitals may be erected in the different States. Wherever the National League for Woman's Service establishes a branch I trust the local [illegible] will organize to keep that branch supplied with f[illegible]. Could you hear, as I have, the stories told by Mrs. [illegible] President of the League, on the way the sick soldiers cr[illegible] fresh flowers, preferring them even to any delicacy in t[illegible] of food or drink, you would realize that here was a cha[illegible] the florists too old to fight to do their share toward alle[illegible] pain and helping out the country. Trust this conv[illegible] will go on record as officially endorsing this splendid [illegible] ment.

Labor Question

The question of help today is an important one. P[illegible] every florist establishment here represented has contr[illegible] by enlistment or through the draft some of his best [illegible] our splendid army. In some cases this will mean a [illegible] curtailment, while others are endeavoring to help out [illegible] use of other kinds of labor, but we will overcome this har[illegible] and others much worse, if our Government feels it [illegible] necessary on our part in order to win the war.

Coal Situation

In this connection the coal question is the momento[illegible] one for the florist. The original government order, limitin[illegible] s to 50% of our average annual consumption for the last [illegible] years, has since been modified to allow florists the use o[illegible] and fuel providing same does not have to be transpor[illegible] rail. The small florist, also is kept in business by per[illegible] him to get his entire quota of coal, providing same d[illegible] exceed forty tons, which convinces me that governm[illegible] only too willing to keep us in business if it is at all poss[illegible] do so. A coal expert will speak to us on the coal sit[illegible] later.

Our Washington Representative

We were fortunate indeed to have in Washington dur[illegible] past year such a representative man as Wm. F. Gude[illegible] report when you read it will be found to cover many [illegible] of close contact between the florists and the gover[illegible] notably on the questions of bulb importation from Jap[illegible] Bermuda, not to mention the importations from Eur[illegible] the seed stores; manetti and other products. Mr. Gu[illegible] given his time unselfishly and loyally to the S. A. F. [illegible] of you who have been to Washington to interview the di[illegible] Boards can testify to his work in this respect. Many or[illegible] tions which have not succeeded in doing nearly as m[illegible] Washington as the S. A. F. & O. H. has done, main[illegible] highly paid organization in that city. Mr. Gude di[illegible] work without any recompense—his only satisfaction [illegible] that it was work he could do and necessary for the wel[illegible] of the trade in general. I feel some more tangible reco[illegible] should be awarded him than a simple vote of thanks.

National Plant, Flower and Fruit Guild

Another organization that has done and will do a gre[illegible] of good for our soldiers is the National Plant, Flow[illegible] Fruit Guild, which has been operating in New York [illegible] or twelve years previous to the war, largely among the cr[illegible] tenements of the East side. This society has now unde[illegible] to beautify with flowers and plants—the cantonmen[illegible] camps in the United States. While it is too late now [illegible] much this Summer, it is planning to make a big start f[illegible] Summer. It will undertake to provide the funds neces[illegible] transport to the different cantonments plants and shrub[illegible] tributed and will see that same is properly taken care [illegible] planted. Any of the members of this society who ar[illegible] position to contribute stock for this purpose will please [illegible] touch with the organization at its New York office, 70[illegible] ave., and help out as much as possible with donati[illegible] growing plants and flowers. By the aid of this Guil[illegible] National League for Woman's Service, florists get in [illegible] contact with our troops. The government has no ti[illegible] look after what is called "the sentimental side" of the w[illegible] it is willing for other organizations to do this where po[illegible] Those of us who have been through the different canton[illegible] in the different States know what a wonderful improven[illegible] few plants and shrubs judiciously placed would make [illegible] appearance of the camp for the Summer.

Liberty Bonds and War Savings Stamps

The florists as a body are not of warlike tendencies. Th[illegible] business they are engaged in tends to induce a philo[illegible] state of mind rather than a combative one, yet every [illegible] can help his government, and I believe is doing it to the[illegible] fullest extent through the purchase of Liberty Bond[illegible] War Savings Stamps. Let us never forget our coun[illegible] entitled to our all, for, should the government fall, [illegible] certainly would be no need for florists, therefore every [illegible] we can possibly spare must be used to help our governm[illegible].

Flower Show

It is a matter of regret we did not have the convention [illegible] Spring in conjunction with the National Flower Show, a[illegible] inally planned. Circumstances, of course, rendered th[illegible] possible, but personally I would like to state to the flor[illegible] St. Louis that postponement of a flower show does not, [illegible] mind, mean abandonment as some of you seem to thin[illegible] I look to see the next Flower show in St. Louis just as s[illegible] times are propitious.

Cyclamen

If you are fortunate enough to have Cyclamen with a healthy growth don't spoil them by crowding the plants. You can't grow good stock in a crowded condition and when once allowed to suffer for the want of room, so that the plants make long drawn leaves, you will never get them back into shape again. A Cyclamen, no matter how plentiful or fine the flowers, is of but little use if the foliage is imperfect; on the other hand a plant with perfect foliage and which had all the room necessary to develop into a shapely specimen will sell even if a little short on flowers. The next important thing is to keep the stock clean. A dose of greenfly will not show the results on the large leaves at once, but you can soon tell when the young leaves push their way through. It is then that they suffer, and a plant with disfigured leaves due to insects just means money out of pocket for the grower. Not nearly enough attention is being paid by some growers in regard to obtaining perfectly shaped plants and foliage. The leaves of Cyclamen are every bit as important and attractive as the flowers, and there is more to the culture of the plant than to just find out how many plants can be grown in a given space.

Holding Freesias for Late Planting

As stated on several occasions before in these notes Freesias are becoming more and more important as a florist flower right along, and we no longer have to depend on Europe for our supply of bulbs. They are grown right here in America as they should be; not alone that, but just as good bulbs and at a reasonable price. Whether there will be Paperwhites or not, if you are a retail grower plant Freesias more than ever this year and have them come along from December until April. But take care of the bulbs which are to be planted late; left in the paper or cloth bags in a hot, dry place they suffer. A better way is to spread them out in flats and store away in a dark, cool place and the later you plant the better the results if they are grown cool until well under way. Many growers for the San Francisco market plant their bulbs just about this time into deep flats, after which they are placed outdoors or in frames and brought in as wanted. In this way well rooted plants are always ready for forcing. They plant their bulbs practically all at the same time because if left too long out of soil they will become soft, and while small bulblets will form at the base the usefulness of the bulb itself for producing flowers is gone. In sections having heavy frost by the end of October and during November, Freesias outdoors, even in a coldframe, is a risky business, but by properly taking care of the bulbs they can be kept in good shape into December. Get your requirements attended to now and what you don't want for present planting store away as suggested above.

The Coldframes

It isn't a bit too early to look over those coldframes. To the small grower in particular they are every bit of as much value as a greenhouse. In a well constructed coldframe, and properly protected, a lot of stock can be overwintered or stored away to be drawn from as needed for forcing inside. If you have no bulb cellar a deep coldframe is the next best place. There, with a good covering of soil on top of the flats, you can get at them at any time without having to work your way through a foot or so of ice and snow as we have it sometimes during the first two months of the year. Coldframes when emptied of their stock may again be used as hotbeds during Spring and after that may again be planted with a Summer crop. In that way they will pay for themselves as well if not better than a greenhouse. See to it now that they are put in first class condition; you will be too busy later on to attend to them; not only the frames but the sashes should be gone over. Perhaps you figure on carrying some perennials over Winter for indoor forcing? The frame is the place for them as well as for early Pansies.

Chrysanthemums

Cultural Notes

This is growing time with the 'Mums. If they don't move now they never will. Heat and moisture with everything else in good shape means that they will make their best growth now, especially the midseason and late kinds. The forming of flower buds with the earlier kinds has begun and those are already in full bloom and offered on the streets in the Western Coast cities, and that right alongside of some of the finest Dahlias and Asters on 3ft. stems. It makes the visiting eastern florist envy their climate if nothing more. Growing time with the 'Mums under glass means also staking time and the removal of all unnecessary growth along the stems. It means the pinching back of the bush plants, the shifting of the pot stock and the feeding of those which are not going to have a shift. Neglect now in any way which will stunt them or cause hardwood to form, means a setback. Watch the plants, look after their requirements and thereby keep them moving. When the buds once begin to form you can't expect much more growth. You can help along in obtaining a good flower but foliage and stem have to be developed prior to that time. Watch the weather conditions on cloudy, cool or rainy days; let up with late spraying—in other words avoid excess moisture.

Geranium Sensation, one of the newer varieties

Geraniums

With most growers Fall-struck Geranium cuttings are mostly made use of for the stock wanted the following Spring. You can root a Geranium almost any time of the year; even those taken out of the sand as late as March will make fair plants by Memorial Day but may prove shy bloomers while the early propagated ones with a little hardwood are, usually, best for early flowering. Plants with three to four good sized trusses of flowers bring the price and three times what the same sized plant without flowers will. At this time the tops of the plants out in the field can be removed and easily rooted in a frame, when a layer of sand about 3in. in thickness has been placed over the top of the soil in the frame. These cuttings if given just a little room can remain in the frames after they are rooted up to the time the early 'Mums leave the benches, and the plants from which you take the cuttings will inside of a month furnish another lot which can be removed and rooted inside. If weather conditions are favorable maybe a second lot can be had before frost comes. All this is of especial value for the man with limited stock and wishing to increase it as much as possible. Outdoor propagation at this time is preferable to indoor where cuttings at all soft will dampen off which is hardly ever the case outdoors.

Snapdragons

You may have among your seedling plants outdoors some desirable kinds well worthy of growing on more stock from and the present is a good time to root cuttings. Every healthy plant should be full of them and just a few days in the sand will root them. Plants benched by this time should also be pinched back—you don't want them to flower just yet; rather try to obtain bushy plants first. Always bear in mind the Snapdragons are cold house plants and don't do their best in a hot dry house. Do what you can to keep the temperature down and the plants clean in order to prevent disease.

Poinsettias

Rather late cuttings can still be made of Poinsettias. Frequently one has calls for small plants around Christmas, and the retail grower can't make much of a mistake to have a hundred 6in. bulb pans with three or four plants in each. Inexpensive plants are in as much demand around the holidays as those costing $5 to $10 each and it is wrong not to prepare for such trade. It is just as well to pot the late struck cuttings of Poinsettias into 3in. or 3½in. pots and let them remain in these pots until a few days before Christmas. Now and then we find a customer who is able to keep a Poinsettia in good condition for a couple of weeks, but usually three to four days finishes the best of them.

Preserving the Natural Green of Plants

As is well known when plants have been dried by any of the well known processes, such as under pressure, in hot sand, or by sulphur fumes, the foliage loses most of its natural green. To get anything resembling a life-like effect, the leaves have had to be artificially colored and this plan has not proved to be very satisfactory. The difficulty has been entirely surmounted, however, owing to the fact that it has been found possible to form a chemical compound with the chlorophyll which is permanent. The method adopted is on the following lines: A boiling solution of copper acetate and acetic acid is prepared. Into this the parts of the plants to be preserved are steeped. The acetate combines with the chlorophyll and forms a permanent coloring matter. Whatever the original shade of green may be this color is perfectly fixed. The drying process can then be carried forward. Where the particular method is that which preserves the form, as is the case when hot sand is used, the preserved plant is wonderfully lifelike. The steeping in the copper acetate appears to have no effect on the flowers. If the drying is carried out with sand or sulphur fumes the original hues are usually well preserved.

The plan described above has also been employed in the preservation of seaweeds with excellent results. For the brown seaweeds it has been found needful to add a little permanganate of potash to secure the best effect. With the red seaweeds certain stains are used but, when once the right color is secured, the copper acetate fixes it for all time. One great value of this plan is that the plants so treated do not suffer from exposure to light. After some months of standing in direct sunlight the treated specimens were as bright green as if they had just been freshly gathered.—Scientific American.

Strange Breads of Other Lands

Many plant products besides those which we ordinarily use for bread have been used in various countries at different times. In the early days of this country acorn meal was used for making bread and is still so used by certain Indian tribes. It is said that after being boiled several times the acorns lose their bitter taste, and become sweet and wholesome.

In remote ages the Egyptians of the Nile valley prepared bread from the seed of the Lotus flower which grew abundantly in the mud of the river bottom.

Early records of Northern Europe, particularly Scandinavia, shows that the poor subsisted partly on bread made of ground moss. This, however, had so little nutritive value that it was almost worthless as food.

Various substances have been used to eke out the shortage of grain supply. Potato flour has been used for this purpose and when mixed with Rye or Wheat is not unpalatable. The Italians and Spaniards are using Chestnnts, the Chestnuts of Italy and Spain being much larger than ours. In South America Banana flour has also been used and attempts have been made to introduce it into this country. It is said to be both nutritious and palatable. The Mexicans and South Americans grind Peas and Beans into meal, make them into little cakes and fry them. Of course, various cereals have always been used for bread making from time immemorial.—Condensed from the Mediator.

The harsh, strange, semitropical, dry climate of California, to a marked degree affects the nature and health of humans, animals and plants. With humans and animals, especially the females, it creates changes of temperament and irritability and excessive nervousness. Not every one of the recent comers, particularly those in middle life, can endure the climate. The writer had a personal intimate acquaintance with two women, sisters, who, after a residence within two years, died recently from these named causes, and who he is sure would be living today had they remained in their former homes in the eastern temperate climate, where they were born and raised.

Now that the Government has taken charge of the railroads, the flippant railroad advertisements in the magazines, shall cease; overdrawn, grossly exaggerated, misrepresentative, done for the purpose of selling railroad tickets to the railroad's profit.

In the foregoing table, Lettuce is observed as a short crop, due both to prolonged drought and destruction of plants by worms and slugs. Onion was affected disastrously not only by the drought but during the past six weeks the entire crop was burned by the excessive heat. Radish, Salsify, Spinach and Swiss Chard were shortened also by the prolonged drought. The aphis again has ruined the crop of Sweet Peas as above estimates indicate.

But it is curious about Beet. A few years ago the writer was informed by an old prominent firm of California seed growers that they had given up the growing of Beet for the trade after they had practised it for a number of years, because they had had too much continuous complaint in regard to purity, and they had therefore decided that it was impracticable to grow pure Beet seed in California, even with the very best care given it. Now, all of a sudden, in these speculative war times, California has undertaken again the growing of Beet seed. These "young" growers (by young is meant new and inexperienced at Beet seed growing) who have launched out on a large scale, as just said, are using French "commercial" seed for the purpose, as if that were a surety of success. Lands of mercy! Are they in ignorance of the fact that French Beet seed growers never use "commercial" seed for the growing of Beet seed? It would be regarded as unsafe. The seed these French growers use is known as "stock seed," which they had themselves produced from several years' careful selection of Beet roots, and which seed they will not permit to pass out of their hands, nor even to sell it if offered $25 to $50 per pound for it. Then, after using this fine stock seed, the roots or Beets raised therefrom are, before replanting, carefully selected as to form; each bulb or root is also carefully cut open for interior inspection as to purity. Thus it is a matter of wonder, with the exceeding short supply of labor in California (foreign labor at that, which at heart is distrustful of the money-making—it says unchristian—white man) whether these minute matters of detail related of the French practice, were practised with the California crop this season. Beet will mix a mile apart. The utmost care must be used to avoid mixture at blossom time. To mention one case in France: A crop of a certain variety which had been raised with all the care described above was found in due course after sale to be badly mixed. After much detective work the riddle was solved by the discovery that on another farm, a half a mile away, a small crop of another different variety, a very light colored Beet with many white rings, had also been grown the same season, and had caused the mixture with the dark colored, different shaped Beet complained of

To touch upon another point, vitality, it must be said that the "young" seedsman of today is very keen in that respect, demanding 90 to 100 per cent. vitality, and apparently indifferent as to purity. He seems to be reckless to the fact that Wild Carrot, Wild Parsnip, Wild Radish, and everything else that grows wild, produce seed of 90 to 100 per cent. vitality; that humans, wild Indians and those raised in squalor and filth are prolific in children. Per contra, that genius, a high order of mentality, reproduces but faintly or lightly, notably Shakespeare, Carlyle, Washington, Napoleon. Ergo: high germinative power in seeds and high grade purity are not always insured in combination.

H. W. Kruckeburg has ably presented both sides of the Asiatic labor question, in your issue of Aug. 3; one, the great majority or preponderating view of the masses, the other, the smaller or minority view of the malcontents, the kickers, those who fail to accept the exigencies of the war, and who would unwittingly sacrifice their country's future rather than make personal sacrifices. It goes without saying that the Chinese Exclusion Act will never be abolished during this present war. Thank Heaven! We have at the head of our Nation a President who in wise statesmanship already stands as the ablest leader of all the present leaders of the world. President Wilson may thus be counted upon that he will not "soften" or permit the bars to be lifted ever so slightly, under any pretext or subterfuge whatever, for the entry of Asiatic labor for employment on our farms or otherwise. Our good Christian Colonial fathers unfortunately permitted their hearts to "soften" in favor of slavery to obtain cheap labor in their time, and therefore unwittingly, regretfully, laid the foundation for the Civil War.

The statement that France has imported Chinese labor for service in that country's domestic affairs is camouflage; a figment of the imagination. That story must be a portion of the Hun propaganda upon which $50,000,000 is said to have been spent to form popular opinion in American in favor of the Hun. If France ever desires to import foreign labor it has Algiers, close at hand, to fall back upon.

Our seedsmen may find an instructive lesson in race and religious prejudice, appropriate in these present discussions of Asiatic labor, by witnessing the latest screen picture, a weird, thrilling play, "The City of Dim Faces," in which the chief character is borne by that capable Japanese actor, Sessu Hayakama, who is believed to have white blood in his veins.

New York Seed Trade

Up to this date, Tuesday, the following information has been received in regard to French and Bermuda bulbs: The Steamer Fenchurch arrived at an Atlantic port today. She brought very few French bulbs, because, on account of lack of railroad transportation facilities from Ollioules to Marseilles, France, bulbs, en route failed to reach the pier before the Fenchurch sailed. A considerable portion of the French bulb crop is expected to arrive on the next steamer, which sailed later and the bulk of this crop is expected to follow on the steamer which will sail the last of August. The steamer Charybdis arrived Monday from Bermuda, bringing the crop of Lilium Harrisii bulbs, which is only one-third as large as usual, and for which the growers are demanding twice the usual price, both because of the short crop, and on account of the restriction on the importation of Japanese Lily bulbs. As regards the Dutch bulbs we are reliably informed that some are already on the way to this country, but in what way they are coming, whether direct from Holland or via England, no one seems to know.

Vaughan's Seed Store, 41-43 Barclay st., reports that it has been moving American Daffodils, Freesias and Winter Onion sets. This store is also moving Paperwhite Narcissus this week. New seed of Winter flowering Sweet Peas are coming in from California almost daily. Their travelers report trade fairly good.

At the sale in bankruptcy in the matter of The MacNiff Horticultural Co., on Monday of this week, at 10:30 a.m., the merchandise and fixtures, etc., were bought in by parties who will continue the business at the present location of this company, namely, 52-54 Vesey st., under the name of The MacNiff Horticultural Co., Inc., Robert W. MacNiff is retained as president and manager of the new company.

Chicago Seed Trade

J. C. Vaughan, Vaughan's Seed Store, who has been spending some time in New York expects to be back in time to attend the S. A. F. Convention at St. Louis this week. T. D. Long and Geo. Mohn will go from the Chicago store. John Fuhlbruegge a former salesman of the store, who is at present manager of the Miami Floral Co., Dayton, Ohio, was a caller Saturday en route to the convention. Carl Cropp is making a tour of the seed growing districts in California.

C. M. Jackman, formerly of Vaughan's Seed Store, and otherwise well known to the seed trade, is now with the Nebraska Seed Co., Omaha, Neb.

A Golden Star

Vaughan's Seed Store now has a gold star in its service flag. Harry Dale, a former employee, who left at the beginning of the war to join the British Army, is reported to have been killed in action.

Wm. J. Smart, recent Chicago representative of Weeber & Don, New York City, who joined the Army a few months ago, writes from an eastern military camp that his company expects to go overseas in a few days.

Edward Goldenstein, well known to the seed trade of the city, who is at Camp Grant, Rockford, writes to friends in the city that he expects to leave for the front in a very short time.

A. J. Brown, of A. J. Brown Seed Co., Grand Rapids, Mich., was in the city the past week returning from a three weeks' inspection trip of the seed crops in California.

A. H. Smith, treasurer of the Leonard Seed Co., celebrated his 44th birthday on Aug. 16.

Winterson's Seed Store is moving American grown Narcissus bulbs. Advice has been received here that Holland bulbs will come through England.

John Degnan, manager of Winterson's Seed Store is enjoying a two weeks' vacation in Wisconsin.

A. Miller of the American Bulb Co. has returned from a trip to the Twin Cities. He says the trade in Minnesota and the Northwest is prosperous.

C. O. Wilcox, of the W. W. Barnard Seed Co., came in for a week-end rest. He reports a large demand for fill-in orders for Turnip seed. Farmers and truckers are planting more extensively than ever.

Our Advertising Man's Corner

We went to the drug store together. He had a little ear trouble and intended to try some advertised remedy.

Two or three days later we met and he told us that the oil hadn't helped a bit.

It looked like one of those occasional "black eyes" which advertising is subject to.

Then a week or so later we met again and he told us that the ear medicine had benefited him quite some.

"Why", we said, "you told us that it wasn't any good recently". "Yes; I know I did, but I thought that I would stick to it and give it a fair trial, and it's all right."

Simple story, we admit. You know why. That kind hits home hardest.

All of which leads up to the point as to whether you have "stuck" at advertising long enough to give it a chance to make good?

Do you know that some men begin to worry about results before they have prepared the ad? Not you, of course.

On the other hand, a medium in the hands of a large number subscribing for the assistance which the paper gives them in innumerable directions does not ask for an abundance of time before results evidence themselves, as witnessed in the quick "clean ups" indicated in the testimonials at the foot of this column each week.

Some advertising, because of its nature, however, has a longer road to travel, but the choice of the right road always means the shortest and safest route for the advertiser.

You know personally how you regard THE EXCHANGE, and the compelling resons also fit in with the opinions of the rest of our field. Surely that augurs for a good advertising medium.

When are we going to be given the opportunity to discuss this proposition with you in all its phases?

John Scheepers Co.'s Gladioli

John Scheepers Co., 2 Stone st., New York City, showed at the recent exhibition of the American Gladiolus Society at Buffalo, N. Y., 700 spikes of Gladioli flowers embracing 46 of the first varieties, and, besides these, blooms of a number of seedlings to be passed upon by the society. These Gladioli were grown on the estate of T. A. Havemeyer, at Brookville, L. I., where the John Scheepers Co. tries out new varieties of Gladioli and other bulbs.

It was our privilege to inspect at the office of this company last week specimen blooms of just a few of the many new varieties which were shown at Buffalo. Among these we especially noted a light pink seedling with flowers 5in. across on a long spike; a beautiful yellow variety, a Kelway seedling, named Golden Measure; Baron L. Smith, with blooms of a beautiful light Cattleya orchid shade; two fine blues, namely Muriel and Badenia, the latter, though usually a rather poor grower, reported to be doing well this year; Alice Tiplady, one of Kunderd's varieties, said to be the finest named Gladiolus of the Primulinus type; some exceptionally fine spikes of Mrs. Austin's Mrs. Dr. Norton and Mrs. Evelyn Kirtland, and of Kunderd's Purple Glory and also of Pfitzer's beautiful white variety Europa, as well as Schwaben. Others equally fine were Madam Mounet-Sully, a creamy white with a red blotch; Kunderd's Giant White, a white with purple blotch; Red Emperor and Mrs. Veetbuys, both fine reds, and several very promising white seedlings, and a large Primulinus seedling of a Narcissus yellow shade. In Gladioli good blue varieties are scarce, but Muriel, Badenia, Umbertus, Nora and Catherina seen in the Scheepers' collection are among the best.

Therkildson is Ready

An item in the Philadelphia Inquirer of Aug. 14 calls attention to the large number of business leaders in that city who would come within the age limits under the proposed new draft law. Among these is given W. F. Therkildson, advertising manager of W. Atlee Burpee & Co., who is quoted as saying, "If the Government needs 'Therk' anywhere along the line, he will be there, prepared to stay as long as is needed."

License Requirements for Seedsmen

The Aug. 10 issue of the Seed Reporter, published by the Dept. of Agri., Washington, D. C., contains information concerning the requirements of the U. S. Food Administration as to licenses for seedsmen. It is suggested that those in doubt on this subject procure a copy of the Seed Reporter referred to.

The L. B. Brown Seed Co., of Medford, Ore., has been bought out by Waldo Elden, who took over the ownership and management of the business on Aug. 6.

Amount of Seed from One Snapdragon Plant

Can you give us some idea how much seed one Snapdragon plant will produce—is it something like one-sixteenth of an ounce or less.

—C. & S., N. Y.

—This query could hardly be answered intelligently without knowing the variety or type of antirrhinum. A plant of the tall or maximum varieties will naturally produce more seed than a plant of the nanum or semi-dwarf type. Some of the older kinds, with a pronounced weedy growth, produced more seed than will the best modern varieties. Last season we grew in the greenhouses about 2000 plants for seed. This seed was all hand-picked and we harvested about 6 ounces. The varieties were Nelrose, Pheips' White, Enchantress and Bronze Beauty. According to this we obtained an ounce of seed for each 22 plants.

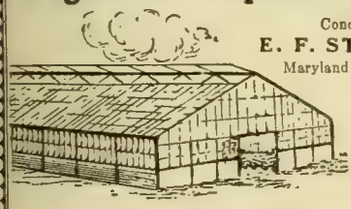
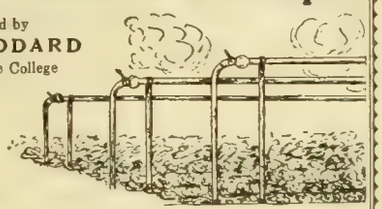
Vegetable Crops Under Glass and in the Open

Conducted by
E. F. STODDARD
Maryland State College





This article gives useful and practical hints on growing cool vegetable crops, thus enabling the grower not only to save fuel but in many cases to make use of houses which would otherwise lie idle. This, and other articles in succeeding issues, which will take up other cool crops, merit careful reading and we suggest that they be filed for future reference.

Saving Coal by Growing Cool Crops

It requires practically twice as much radiation to keep greenhouses at a temperature of 70 deg. to 75 deg. as to maintain the temperature at 45 deg. to 50 deg. In other words nearly twice as much fuel is necessary to grow crops which require a high temperature as it would take to grow those which need only the lower temperature. Therefore, one way to save coal this Winter is to grow crops which do not require high temperatures. Warm crops like Tomatoes require a temperature of 60 deg. to 70 deg., and Cucumbers need 65 deg. to 75 deg. Thus much more heat will be needed for these crops than for Lettuce, which is grown in commercial greenhouses at temperatures of 48 deg. to 60 deg. Lettuce may be grown at temperatures somewhat lower than this, about 45 deg. to 55 deg., but it takes two to three weeks more time to mature the crop than it does at the higher temperature. Head Lettuce grows better at the lower temperatures, while loose leaf varieties like Grand Rapids are grown usually at temperatures of 48 deg. to 60 deg.

In the early Fall Lettuce could be planted in a house which would otherwise lie idle this year, and in a great many sections the weather will remain warm enough for the crop to become more than half grown before artificial heat is necessary. From this time on the lower temperatures could be maintained. In another house where Lettuce was planted at the same time, the higher temperatures mentioned will produce the first Lettuce to cut and this crop will be followed closely by the crop growing more slowly at lower temperatures. In this way idle houses may be used early in the Fall for other hardy vegetable crops.

In the last two issues, Lettuce was discussed in these columns because the writer believes that this vegetable is the most important cool crop. It is possible that markets which are near several greenhouses may become overstocked with Lettuce if every greenhouse is planted with this crop. There are also a great many towns and cities near which there are only a few greenhouses. These markets are not likely to receive a surplus of greenhouse Lettuce if the crops are planted in succession, and care is taken by the grower to see that his product is distributed well in different parts of the city so that it will reach more consumers in a fresh condition. Each grower must study his own market and arrange his plans accordingly. As the railroads are needed for the transportation of war materials, smaller quantities of Lettuce will be shipped from the South, and for this reason locally grown products will be in demand.

Other cool crops which may be grown instead of vegetable and flowering crops requiring high temperatures are, Cauliflower, Radishes, Beets, Parsley, Cress, Dandelion, Mint and Swiss Chard. These crops may be grown at about the same temperatures as suggested for Lettuce. Beets grow better at temperatures a few degrees higher than for Lettuce. Beets are better for Fall or early Spring crops but are not as good for a Midwinter crop as the others mentioned.

Growing Cauliflower Under Glass

This vegetable has become more popular in recent years, particularly in the eastern part of the country. It is being grown profitably in several sections under glass and there is reason to believe that a great many growers will find Cauliflower a very good crop in their section.

It is very important that the best seed obtainable should be used. Poor seed produces weak plants, many of which will not produce heads at all. Experienced Cauliflower growers will never use anything but the best seed.

Occasionally some writers will say that Cauliflower plants are started in the same way as Cabbage. The fact is that Cauliflower requires more care and different methods of handling the plants than those commonly used for Cabbage. Cauliflower is less hardy than Cabbage and is more easily attacked by the damping-off fungus in the seedling stage than is Cabbage. For this reason, it is best to use a soil for seed sowing that is porous enough to prevent water from standing on the surface after watering. Some growers steam-sterilize their soil to destroy any fungus that may be in it.

Cabbage is often sown in rows 2in. apart but Cauliflower should be sown in rows about 3in. apart so that watering may be done between the rows, keeping the plants dry if possible, and thus prevent injury from damping-off. Cauliflower should be sown a little thinner than Cabbage, so that the seedlings will be strong and stocky. Good ventilation is also important. When the seedlings are about ⅝in. tall they should be transplanted to flats 2in. or 2½in. apart. When they are 3in. to 4in. tall, they should be shifted to 3½in. or 4in. pots where they will remain until the soil in the pots is nearly filled with roots, but they should never become pot-bound.

They are now ready to be planted where they will mature.

It is very important that the plants should never dry out at the roots. Two things which cause Cauliflower to "button" or bolt, that is, to break and go to seed before a good head is formed, are (1) poor seed, (2) a check in growth. Drying out at the roots causes a serious check in growth. On the other hand, overwatering should be avoided. The plants simply need a moist soil constantly.

The flats and pots should be placed on ground beds, if possible, while the plants are growing. Plunging the pots will help to prevent drying out at the roots. It is a good plan to grow more plants than will be needed so that a selection of the best plants may be made. Plants started about Sept. 1 will be ready for planting in the greenhouses about Nov. 1, and the first Cauliflower should be ready for cutting about Jan. 1 in the North or a little earlier than this in warmer sections where there is more sunshine in November and December. This subject will be discussed again later, and growers desiring information may receive it through this column.

The soil used in flats or pots for the young plants need not be rich, but the greenhouse soils should be very rich to produce a good crop. Lettuce may be used as a companion crop with Cauliflower when the plants are first set out, but Radishes are not always grown successfully between the Cauliflower. Soils which are well manured, as they should be for Cauliflower, are too rich for Radishes and cause them to grow mostly to top, with practically no edible roots. Lettuce requires a rich soil and for such companion cropping the loose leaf varieties of Lettuce are better, because they mature in less time than head Lettuce and may be removed when Cauliflower need all the space.

The varieties commonly grown under glass are Erfurt and Snowball. The first variety may be planted 15in. x 15in., and Snowball about 18in. x 18in. or 16in. x 20in. The planting distances will depend upon whether or not a companion crop is grown with the Cauliflower. The heads produced by Erfurt are smaller than Snowball when grown under similar conditions.

Southern States

Houston, Texas

The store of Kerr the florist had a narrow escape from being destroyed by fire. Mr. Eichling, sales manager, says that the only thing that saved it was the fact that the greenhouse upstairs has a concrete floor. The only loss was portion of the rear of the greenhouses, a few palms and decorations, this loss being fully covered by insurance. Mr. Kerr left on the 14th for Kansas City on his way to the convention at St. Louis. He will very likely have some good matter to bring before the convention on the subject of credit.

Mr. Schwenke of Reichardt & Schulte says that the seed business is beginning to show signs of life, but nothing much is expected until after a good soaking rain. He expects the season will open briskly within the next 10 to 14 days.

The spacious grounds of the city greenhouse indicate what can be done with shrubbery in the South. The cuttings planted a year or two ago are now large and dignified and most of them are blooming luxuriantly. The 'Mums planted there for the first time this year are doing excellently and promise to develop good blooms. Mr. Brock has been complimented for what he has done with these grounds in a short time.

Mr. Kofahl, vice-president of the Houston Hort. Club, is making experiments as a grower and expects to furnish a lot of stock for his store this season.

S. J. Mitchell, president of the club has returned from his vacation trip. He looks well, and will likely call a meeting of the club at an early date.

Paul M. Carroll has not given much personal attention to flowers this week, as he has been out selling Thrift Stamps.

C. L. B.

Louisville, Ky.

As in other lines of business, the florist's business has suffered from the extremely hot weather.

At New Albany, Ind., the matter of the cottony Maple scale has become a serious one, and J. H. Wallace, Indiana State Entomologist, has been called to consult with Capt. J. P. A. Hertlein, landscape architect, who has charge of the work, to devise means to save the fine shade trees.

At Lebanon, Ky., a severe electrical storm recently did considerable damage to fruit and shade trees.

New Delivery System

At a meeting held on the night of Aug. 17, the Louisville florists agreed to the one delivery system outlined by the Commercial Economy Board.

Eugene J. Straus, chairman, addressed the meeting, which was held at the establishment of August Baumer, and the matter of curtailing deliveries, with all its attendant problems of giving good service to the public as well as meeting the war needs of the Nation, was freely discussed by the florists present, who included practically all members of the Louisville Florists' Ass'n as well as a number of other florists.

Mr. Straus praised the whole-hearted and splendid cooperation on the part of the Louisville florists.

Among the problems to be solved was how to insure fresh flowers promptly for weddings, funerals or other special occasions, and after a number of talks had been made, Mr. Straus suggested the plan of cooperative delivery in different sections of the city. The plan is that all the florists in the eastern, central, western and southern sections of the city pool their equipment and have one cooperative delivery. Thus, if a number of florists have orders for flowers for a wedding,

Order early, so we may reserve your plants for September and October delivery. We offer the following sizes at but little increase in price, although cost of production is much greater:

Washington, D. C.

Members of the Florists' Club of Washington are keeping the wards of the Walter Reed General Hospital bright with flowers. Following an appeal for flowers for the Red Cross convalescent huts, which are situated in 44 army camps and cantonments, the club conceived the idea of getting the flowers right to the beds of the men who have been brought here from other points and from France, wounded and ill. In a report which he is preparing, the secretary of the club tells of how other organizations are cooperating with the local florists to the end that with the flowers that are being sent to the institution there are added quantities of cigarettes, games, etc. Three visits resulted in the patients receiving about 3000 Roses, Asters, Zinnias, Coreopsis and Gladioli, donated by the Washington Floral Co., Theodore Diedrich and George C. Shaffer.

If there are any members of the trade who have relatives or friends among the sick soldier boys at this hospital, desiring to have delivered personal messages or greetings, the Florists' Club committee will be glad to undertake such a service, it is announced.

G. N. Prokos, manager of the Z. D. Blackistone store, has put in a very attractive window display, the chief figure of which is a watermill in operation. Water displays are always good advertising propositions in this city, but this one was made all the more effective by the use of a sign stating that because of the scarcity of water in Washington the mill had been forced to suspend operations.

The vacation list just now is very heavy. Frank Weaver, assistant to Man-

Otto Bauer and family have just returned from Atlantic City, where also Mr. and Mrs. J. Harper Hetherington and Mr and Mrs. J. Louis Loose have been staying. Canadian Horticultural Association

The convention of the Association which was held at Ottawa, Canada, on Aug. 13, 14, 15, and 16, and which was noted in The Exchange of Aug. 17, was a great success and everybody had a delightful time. The following officers were elected:

President, Geo. Douglas of Toronto; first vice-president, E. B. Hamilton of London, Ont.; second vice-president, James MacKee, Ottawa, Ont. H. J. Eddy of Westmount, Quebec, was re-elected secretary and treasurer.

Ex-president E. J. Hayward of Montreal was presented with a beautiful watch by the members of the association at the banquet held at the hotel Chateau Laurier and Mrs. Hayward, his wife, received a very handsome lavelliere. The presentation speech to Mrs. Hayward was made by Roman J. Irwin of New York City.

Pres. Chas. H. Totty of the S. A. F. & O. H. sent a very cordial telegram of congratulation to the association, which was received with great enthusiasm. It was the general opinion that this was the best convention the association had held in its history, for which much credit is due Mr. Hayward, who worked very hard to make the convention a success.

The Middle West

Cincinnati, O.

Roses are in a fair supply which seems sufficient for present needs. A few Carnations cut from the field are coming into the wholesale houses. Easter Lilies are plentiful and are selling well. Rubrum Lilies are fairly plentiful. Many excellent Gladioli may be had. They are finding a better market than at last writing. Hardy Hydrangeas meet with a weak market. Dahlias have made their appearance. Cosmos is available at times. Ferns are meeting with a strong demand.

Funeral of British Ace

Among Cincinnati florists to march in the military funeral procession of the late Captain James Fitz Morris the British Ace, who was killed when his machine fell at the Western Hills Country Club of this city were Chas. H. Hoffmeiske as a member of the Military Training Battalion of the University of Cincinnati, Wm Mayhall as a member of the U. S. Military Training Battalion; Ed. Bossinger of C. E. Critchells, as a member of the U. S. Military Training Batallion and E. G. Gillett as a member of the Home Guards. Mr. Mayhall was the first man to reach Capt. Fitz Morris when he fell.

Al Honning has gone to Toledo, O., for his vacation.

Chas Baum of Knoxville, Tenn. stopped in this city on Sunday on his way to the convention at St. Louis.

I. Bayersdorfer, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, called on his trade.

TEDDY.

Kansas City, Mo.

Asters and Gladioli are plentiful just now, growers say, in spite of the very warm weather prevailing the greater part of the month. August has been unusually warm in this part of the country, and although the gardens have suffered in a great many instances, the wholesalers are feeling pretty good about their stocks. Roses are only fair, but are as good as may be expected for the time of year; they are selling from 3c. apiece up. Lilies are good, and are selling at 12c. apiece. Gladioli are 5c. and 6c. apiece, and Asters 4c. and 5c. apiece.

Among the visitors in Kansas City this week were Mrs. Lord of Topeka, Kans.; John Furrow of Guthrie, Okla., and R. C. Kerr of Houston, Tex.

Walter Newell, who has completed his course of training at the aviation school in Champaign, Ill., and is now ready for flying, spent a few days this week with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Newell. Mr. Newell and one other young man were the only ones who passed the tests given in a class of 15.

At a meeting of the Amateur Gardeners' Ass'n in the ballroom of the Muehlbach Hotel, Aug. 15, it was decided to abandon the plan for the Autumn flower show of the association. The decision was reached on account of the condition of local flower gardens, most of which have been destroyed by the protracted hot weather. The Autumn flower show, under the auspices of this association, has for years been an interesting event in Kansas City. The proceeds were always devoted to some worthy charity, and great interest was always displayed by the exhibitors. The flower show held in the Spring was successful from both a floricultural and financial standpoint, and the fund for the blind soldiers of the Allies was enriched by $500 from the proceeds.

Cleveland, O.

This market is glutted with Gladioli, choice stock being sold at any price to suit the purchaser. Vegetable growers, gardeners and amateurs, in addition to the regular commercial producers of this flower are consigning vast quantities of all grades, resulting in a decidedly stagnant market condition. Plenty of Asters are to be had but the better grades are far from plentiful. Roses continue very scarce. Limited arrivals of Valley are reported but there are frequent brief intervals when it is impossible to secure it locally, due to the irregular coming of the pips. A few Cattleyas are being offered and are readily picked up. Greens are in adequate supply from local sources. Wild Smilax is again ready for the market, a number of shipments having arrived from the South last week.

Business is normal, sustained largely by an active out-of-town demand. Counter trade has been quite dull of late, rendered so by the excessive heat, but the change to cooler weather the latter part of the week of Aug. 11 to 17, imparted new stimulus to retail trade. Funeral orders as usual absorb the bulk of the stock, except the large quantities moved at the week-end sales. Wedding decorations still exist but they continue of infrequent occurrence.

Annual Club Meeting

The first Monday of September falling on Labor Day, the regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Club will be held Sept. 9, at the rooms in the Hollenden. At this meeting the financial report of the year just closed will be read and installation of officers for the new term will take place. Plans for the F. T. D. convention in October now being worked out in committee, will be submitted, and reports from the S. A. F. and O. H. convention in St. Louis, Aug. 20, 21 and 22, will be heard from members who attended.

Express Claims

Claims on the express companies previous to July 1 are not being settled any more promptly than formerly. A prominent florist who has claims amounting to more than $1000 recently expressed a fear that he would be compelled to bring suit in order to expedite settlement.

Charles J. Graham, of A. Graham & Son, spent Aug. 16 and 17 in Mansfield, Ohio, executing a large wedding order, the materials for which were transported by auto trucks.

Mrs. C. A. Musser, of Doylestown, Ohio, made a business call at the wholesale market, Aug. 17.

Value of Auto Transportation

New evidences of the value of the auto truck in facilitating business are noted daily; on Aug. 11, J. L. Schiller, of Toledo, Ohio, forwarded a large shipment of Hydrangeas by truck to Carl Hagenberger, Mentor, Ohio, the stock being transferred from the Schiller to the Hagenberger truck in Cleveland, the latter relaying it to its destination.

O. E. Reisch, formerly of Alliance, but now of Beloit, Ohio, spent Aug. 17 in this city, purchasing florist's supplies. Mrs. H. B. Fearn, of Elyria, Ohio, accompanied by her assistant, Miss Flora Williams, motored to the wholesale market, Aug. 17.

In his campaign to boost the local membership of the S. A. F., Frank Friedley has secured approximately 50 new members and is confident of winning for the Florists' Club a seat upon the directorate of the national society.

Anton Stretter, shipping clerk at the J. M. Gasser Co. wholesale store, has enlisted in the Army and expects to don the khaki on Aug. 28.

Walter Rokusek, formerly of the Cleveland Florists' Exchange, has joined the sales force of the Cleveland Cut Flower Co.

J. W. Grullemans, of the Grullemans Co., Avon, Ohio, had a generous exhibit at the Gladiolus show in Buffalo, N. Y., capturing a number of prizes and awards of merit. J. McL.

Fort Wayne, Ind.

There is a marked shortage of outdoor flowers, due to the dry weather, which has continued for several weeks, accompanied by temperatures ranging around 100 deg. Business has not been as active as it was the first week of August, and the shortage is not so keenly felt as it otherwise would be. Funeral work has slackened and there are a few scattered wedding orders, which, aside from cut flowers and baskets for the sick, is all that keeps the florist on the move.

The quality of most varieties of flowers leaves much to be desired. There is a moderate supply of hybrid tea Roses, most of which show the ravages of the heat, and prices are low. Kaiserin, Russell and Ophelia are holding up best under the adverse conditions. Several retailers report that they are receiving Carnations from the young stock, and that, although the blooms are small, they are fairly good and help out greatly in set pieces for funerals. These are selling for $1 and $2 per 100. Asters are holding up better than any other outdoor flower, and are more plentiful than Gladioli, which are decidedly scarce this season, due to the fact that most of the Gladioli are grown in acre tracts, or larger, and there are not sufficient facilities for watering them during the drought.

Snapdragons are coming to the front, in the absence of Sweet Peas, which have been practically "finished" by the hot, dry weather. Snapdragons are used to a great extent in basket work, and in combination with other flowers. White and pink Lilies are in fairly good supply, and move very well for funeral work. There are some good, full Aster plants offered on the market, for 75c to $1.50 each, and they sell extremely well. Celosia in pots are bringing 50c. to 75c. each, and Begonia and Lily plants continue to meet a god demand. The sale of ferns, especially Whitmanii, has been excellent.

Because of the ice famine, several of the florists have had difficulty in keeping their stock. Private consumers were limited to 25 lbs. of ice per day, and business houses were also limited last week. Roses especially were hard to keep, as many open as soon as they are received at the stores.

Word has been received in this city that Private George Doswell, who was drafted for the National Army in June, and who has been stationed at Camp Benjamin Harrison, Indianapolis, has been transferred to a technical school in the same city, to take a three months' course in motor mechanics. Mr. R. W. Doswell has two brothers in the service in France, who are now at the Front. One is in the Medical Corps, and the other with the Aviation Corps.

Shortage of Crepe Paper Predicted

Mr. Nelson, representing the Poehlmann Bros. Co., Chicago, called on the trade recently, taking orders for Fall business and holiday delivery. Mr. Nelson states that there will be a great scarcity of waterproof crepe paper this year, as only what the wholesalers have on hand, will be offered for sale, due to the fact that the Government has taken over the factories where the crepe paper is manufactured. Other imported goods, especially Immortelles, will be obtainable only in limited quantity, according to Mr. Nelson.

P. J. McCarthey, representing M. Rice & Co., Philadelphia, was a visitor to the trade with a fine lot of holiday supplies, baskets, etc., to choose from. Mr. McCarthey reports that the country is rapidly becoming adjusted to war conditions, and that there is a fine demand for "made-in-America" products, rather than the heretofore coveted importations.

Miss Mayme Wenninghoff is spending a couple of weeks vacation from the store of her brother, Edgar Wenninghoff, at the lakes in Northern Indiana.

The demand during the first half of August has been splendid for this season of the year, and wholly unexpected by the local florists. Business has been on a par with July and if these conditions continue throughout the month—and there is every indication that they will—the florists here will have nothing to complain of in the way of "Summer dullness."

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Lanternier and their sons Clem and Ed. Lanternier and families motored to Lake James and spent a week's vacation Aug. 11.

The representatives from the Ove Gnatt Co., La Porte, Ind., and Cohn & Heller of New York City, called on the trade.

Mr. and Mrs. R. W. Doswell and their daughter Charlotte have returned from a week's vacation trip at Coldwater, Mich., and Lake George.

Miss Georgia Alice Flick and Mrs. Mary Patten have returned from a two weeks' trip to Toledo, Ohio, where they visited Miss Helen Patten at Point Place, on Lake Erie.

Lanterniers are having a fine sale of their new variety Anthony Wayne ferns. D. B.

Sewickley (Pa.) Hort. Society

The Sewickley Hort. Society held its August meeting on the 13th, and judging from the display of vegetables exhibited, it was difficult to believe that we had experienced the driest season on record.

For collection of vegetables which testified to the good results obtainable through the Skinner irrigation system A. E. Etherington, gardener for E. A. Woods, was awarded a cultural certificate. John Barnet, gardener for Mrs. J. D. Lyon, also put up a display of vegetables of high quality. Other exhibitors were Wm. Thomson, Sr., A. E. Bonsey and S. W. Black.

At the September meeting a lecture will be given on Asparagus culture. JOHN CARMAN, Sec'y

Heating Five Greenhouses

Please let me know at once if a 2in. flow with 1½in. return on each side will keep five greenhouses, all connecting, between 45 deg. and 50 deg. during zero weather; steam heat. The houses are 70ft. long, 16ft. wide and 10ft. 3in. high. —C. H., Md.

—I have figured that the roof glazing bars are 10ft. 6in. long each side of ridge. If this is correct, a 2in. steam main and two lines of 1½in. returns would scarcely keep the frost out, when the mercury outside is at zero. To keep a temperature of from 45 deg. to 50 deg. at night, when the mercury outside is at zero, each house will require one 2in. steam main and four 1½in. returns.

Questions for Answer

Crude Oil as Fuel

I am thinking of burning crude oil in my furnace this Winter instead of coal. Will one of your readers, who has had the experience, tell me if the crude oil will answer as well as coal, and what kind and size of heater I need for a house about 20ft. by 50ft.?—F. R. F., S. C.

About Fire Clay

Will one of your readers advise me how to mix and use fire clay. I made a repair in my firebox and it did not hold. After the bricks and fire clay are set, is it necessary to burn it in by starting up a fire in the boiler?—L. H. H., Ohio.

ROBT. B. CRIDLAND

Never has any technical book been so heartily appreciated by florists and nurserymen. Read what W. F. Webb of the Guaranty Nursery Co., Rochester, N. Y., said of it:

"I have looked this book through carefully and it seems to me that it fills a long felt want which our salesmen would appreciate. While it is true that not all nursery salesmen may be able to grasp the essence of this book, still it is the exceptional men who really do want to learn what there is to landscape gardening and who lay the foundations to our business. I would like to be able to furnish every man on my force with one of these books. It is the best book on the subject I have ever seen and I try to keep familiar with all the literature published on landscape gardening."

Second Edition Just Fresh From Our Presses

Magnificently illustrated with 91 photographic reproductions—pictures which teach—67 sketches and 33 plans with planting keys. The book is not only at your command for the information desired, but it is as well a splendid book to interest your customers in. It encourages them to buy your products, for they feel they must emulate at least some of the good landscape features they see scattered so freely throughout its 266 pages. NURSERY DEPARTMENT

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN—President, J. R. MAYHEW, Waxahachie, Texas; Vice-President, J. EDWARD MOON, Morrisville, Pa.; Treasurer, J. W. HILL, Des Moines, Iowa; Secretary, CURTIS NYE SMITH, 19 Congress St., Boston, Mass. Next Annual Convention to be held in Chicago

When and How to Prune Evergreens

When the average land owner allows the average incompetent who just "happens along" to prune his trees and shrubs the verdict on the results which follow the operation is most often expressed in "cuss" words. Following the advice given by Edwin Matthews in this article the florist grower will reap the benefit and be accorded commendation and—more orders from a satisfied customer.

There is always danger that trees and shrubs will be pruned at the wrong time and by wrong methods and this happens often with evergreens, to the detriment of the plant.

Like every horticultural operation, there are broad underlying principles and reasons for the work of pruning and these will be supplemented by more specific reasons to meet certain conditions that arise. Broadly speaking, it would be safer for the nurseryman and florist to advise the uninitiated not to prune their evergreens than to tell them to do so and then leave them to do the work when and how they think best.

One could well divide evergreens into three classes: A.—Those that practically need no pruning (except for some special reason), represented by the Firs, Pines and Spruces. B.—Those, like many of the Junipers and Retinisporas, which need annual attention. C.—Those that need attention at infrequent intervals, in which class are the broad-leaved evergreens such as Rhododendrons, Yews, Laurels, Box, etc.

The pruning of evergreens is done most frequently to the young growing plant in the nursery, to help develop the best shape and form, which, like correction in a child's early training, lays the foundation for the future. Evergreens, such as Retinisporas, often form several leaders which, if allowed to grow uncorrected in the early stages, will later in the plant's life prove a serious defect and a weakness by reason of the breach formed. In maintaining only one real leader and holding the others in check by the knife at the right time, the tree is saved the danger of becoming injured by splitting in a wind or snow storm.

With such as are mentioned in class A, little or no pruning will be needed, excepted perhaps the cutting out of a duplicate leader which sometimes follows an injury to the central bud. Or again, it may be desirable to make a more compact growth to a sparsely furnished plant, this being done by pinching back, while it is still growing, the young, tender growth that is formed in the Spring.

Such pruning as is done to class C, will consist mainly in keeping the plants in conformity with the position they occupy. In the case of Rhododendrons and Laurels (Kalmias), pruning is resorted to only through sheer force of necessity as, for example, where the plants have or are likely to outgrow their usefulness in becoming too high for certain positions. Then it is we may gradually, rather than in one operation, use the knife to reduce the height of the most rampant growth. Directly after the plant is through blooming will be a good time to prune, and in doing this, it is best to cut back as far as possible, without denuding the plant, so that new growth may be looked for that Summer which will take the place of that to be pruned the following season.

If the position is the one that requires formality, as in the use of Box or Yew, a slight shearing in June or early July of the unruly growth is all that is needed. In this, as with Evergreen Hedges, we have a specific reason for pruning more frequently than otherwise would be necessary.

Hedges of Norway and Hemlock Spruce, Arbor Vitæ, and Japanese Cedar, by virtue of their use as hedge plants, must necessarily have their growth curbed and reduced at least every other season. With evergreens, however, used in porch beds or similar positions where, for immediate effect they are planted rather close together, the knife or shears must be used annually; otherwise the plants would quickly lose their individual identity is one smothered mass.

The time for pruning an evergreen hedge, group, or specimen is best decided by the nature of its growth. Those like Hemlock, Arbor Vitæ, and Retinisporas, which continue to grow some seasons up until August and September, it will be all right to prune as late as July and August. On the other hand, those like Norway Spruce, which makes the season's growth in a few weeks, should be pruned in the midst of their growing season.

This principle of pruning before the season's growth is completed, holds good with all evergreens, thus affording them an opportunity to make some slight growth before the stage of apparent inactivity arrives.

Aster tataricus

Coreopsis

Probably few flowers are better known in gardens than the Coreopsis as it has been in collections for many years in both the annual and the perennial section. Their flowers are usually considered as yellow, as this color most always predominates, the ray flowers being this color, the disk ones often purplish.

Of perennial sorts the following appear the most common, C. lanceolata, senifolia, rosea and grandiflora, and tripteris is also in many collections. Lanceolata is one much used for cut flowers. It grows to about 2ft., flowering from June until August. Grandiflora is not unlike the last. It is its southern representative, and is as much a favorite as lanceolata, flowering at the same time. Rosea differs from the others in its lack of yellow as the predominating color. The disk is yellow, the rays rosy purple. It is of more diffuse growth and not as tall growing as the others, preferring moist ground. Its growth is from 12in. to 18in. only. It is a good plant for rockwork when the soil is not too dry.

Tripteris is a tall growing species, useful for planting at the background of herbaceous plants. It grows from 5ft. to 7ft. tall, and is smooth of growth. Its flowers are numerous, large and showy. It is a native of both Southern and Northern States. In many lists it is found under the head of Chrysostemma triptera.

Altogether the Coreopsis family is a most useful one. Even the annual sorts, taking tinctoria as a representative, do much toward beautifying the garden. Both the perennial and the annual sorts are of easy propagation by seeds and by division of the plants.

JOSEPH MEEHAN.

Aster tataricus

(Subject of this Week's Illustration)

Probably there is no Aster more valued among those of a hardy character than the A. tataricus. Few other species have so much to recommend them. No other one grows to the height this does, nor is there any other one flowering so late in the season. In fact, as to its lateness, the most of the vast collection of herbaceous plants have long since passed out of flower before this Aster commences to bloom; often the first freezing of early Winter catches a belated head or two of its flowers.

Many florists know of this Aster from seeing it used in cut flower work. In damp ground it makes a growth of 7ft. or more, strong and upright, bearing along the upper part of its growth light blue flowers, while the lower leaves and, in fact, all its leaves are so very large as to suggest any plant but an Aster to those unacquainted with it. Coming from Siberia, the hardiness of the plant is guaranteed.

Those who miss flowers in their gardens when Autumn wanes should get this Aster—a good lot of them to make the grounds cheerful; a good plant or two would soon give more, while to the florist who looks for a plant to recommend to his customers he can name this one in perfect confidence of pleasing.

JOS. MEEHAN.

On Growing a Few Desirable Trees

By a Veteran Nurseryman

It will be found of great help by almost any retail florist growing bedding and vegetable plants for local trade, if he has a small available space, to devote it to growing a few desirable trees. Such stock when well grown will always find a ready sale at a paying price, thus, not only adding to the grower's profits, but also giving him the satisfaction of knowing that he is helping to beautify the home surroundings in his vicinity. Rare trees, expensive on account of their scarcity, are not necesarily required. The uneducated customer will take anything that appeals to the eye, provided that it is big, but we need not ignore beauty nor utility for novelty.

One of the most desirable trees for avenue planting or shade is the Sugar or Hard Maple, native from Maine to the Far West, a beautiful tree, easily transplanted, growing in all soils, and without any objectionable features, as sprouting from the root, attracting insects, etc., and is a reasonably rapid grower. I consider it more beautiful and majestic than the Norway Maple. The commonness of the tree does not detract from its desirability with sensible people.

The Elm in its varieties is also almost universally admired for its beauty and adaptability.

The Tulip Poplar (Liriodendron) or Tulip Tree, near kin to the Southern Magnolia, is beautiful in outline and foliage and magnificent when in bloom. It flourishes from Minnesota to Florida. Although it is a little difficult to transplant, with care it succeeds admirably, a joy forever to those who possess it. In all communities there are people who want trees planted; they are anxious for suggestions and are desirable prospects.

No More Shows in Grand Central Palace

The U. S. Government will take over the Grand Central Palace, New York, Sept. 15, using it as one of the chain of army hospitals now being established in that city. Six splendid flower shows have been held consecutively in that building, all of them successful artistically, satisfactorily to the trade, and abundantly successful financially.

A Questionnaire to Florists

The President of the United States, under date of April 8, 1918, issued an order to the Secretary of Commerce authorizing him to have the Bureau of Census collect such statistical data as might be needed by any branch of the Federal Government in connection with the conduct of the war.

A number of florists have received a questionnaire in connection with this letter from the Census Department which calls for confidential answers to the following questions: Name of owner, location, square feet covered by glass, value of product, fuel used specifying coal, coke, oil, wood or gas, number of males (18 years of age and over) continuously employed, fertilizers, insecticides and fungicides used and in what quantity.

Considerable speculation is being indulged in as to the object of this census, some going so far as to wire the indefatigable Wm. F. Gude at Washington to inquire whether its purport was in connection with the growing of poisonous plants for the manufacture of poison gas! The probabilities are that this questionnaire is but one in a series put out by the Government in its endeavor to be fully informed as to the scope of the country's industries.

More on Practical Generosity

A subscriber, a dealer in ornamental nursery stock, writes us that he has with mingled feelings read our paragraph entitled, "Practical Generosity".

He tells us of the appeals which have been made to him to buy Liberty Bonds, subscribe to Red Cross, Y. M. C. A., K. of C., and other benefactions. He says he has done so as fully as he could within his means, and questions why he should be asked to supply nursery stock to cantonments free when, as he puts it, the Red Cross would not ask lumber companies to supply lumber free, or a medical supply house to furnish medical supplies free.

He also makes a point that it is his belief that promiscuous planting would never beautify the grounds surrounding the houses to be planted. "Promiscuous planting of a hodge podge selection of nursery stock could not possibly be attractive," he says.

We are inclined to the belief that our correspondent misses the point. Lumber and medical supplies are necessities and so have to be purchased. Trees and shrubs are on the sentimental side, and while the government is quite willing that these should be donated, it is too taken up with war matters to have the time or facilities to recognize these as factors necessary to the winning of the war, although we personally hold that they are such to a great extent, for the reason that beautiful surroundings undoubtedly are of value to the morale of our soldier boys. Ultimately, if the war continues long enough, our government may take these matters in hand, but not today, and so it is left to those of us who can afford it to give what we can. In very truth, it is not so much a question of having an artistically arranged landscape effect as it is to have here and there a piece of inviting green on which to rest the eyes and, whether the tree is straight or curved, or perhaps undersirable from the point of view of the artistic landscape architect, all these considerations do not trouble the soldier boy. The welcome shelter of any kind of a tree is grateful to him, and in turn he is grateful to the giver.

Our S. A. F. Convention Report

The convention at St. Louis of course overshadows all other trade news for the week. Having in mind the importance to the trade generally of this convention, above all others, we have gone to special pains and expense to make the report as complete and valuable as possible. The report will be complete "up to the minute" of going to press. Many of us may be prevented, through the unusual conditions of today, from attending the convention but every florist, whether he attends or not, should read carefully the reports of the convention in this and succeeding issues. There is no doubt that the 1918 convention will go down in the history of the trade as perhaps the most important the S. A. F. and O. H. has so far held since its birth.

Anthracite vs. Bituminous

When a grower who has hitherto used anthracite is compelled to accept bituminous, the latter having only one-half the heating capacity, is he entitled to a sufficient supply of this latter to make up the 50 per cent. allowance of the anthracite coal he had previously been using? We would like to hear from such of our readers as have had experience with their local fuel administrators along these lines.

In The Exchange of Aug. 17, p. 251, there appears an article on "Fuel Restrictions in Russell, Mass.," in which the local fuel administrator is quoted as stating that "Commercial greenhouses are classed as manufacturers; therefore they cannot have any anthracite larger than No. 2 buckwheat. They may have bituminous coal up to 50 per cent. of their average, etc.," Alfred B. Copeland, grower of Russell, commenting on the foregoing, said: "Most of the smaller florists are outfitted to burn anthracite coal, but not screenings or soft coal, and to do so successfully an entire and expensive addition to the present heating units would be required," etc.

A clipping from the Milton (Mass.) Record quoting the chairman of the local fuel committee there shows that it has received the same ruling, in regard to the use by florists of anthracite and buckwheat coal.

Mr. Copeland is quite right in his contention. If a man cannot use anthracite larger than No. 2 buckwheat and is forced to burn this he may have to use a special grate for that purpose. If, however, he elects to take bituminous coal the question presents itself: Can he have the equivalent of the bituminous coal in anthracite, the general understanding being that bituminous coal, as we have already shown in our columns, has only half the heating capacity of anthracite?

Horticultural Hodge-Podge

The movement on foot to wipe out German names given to some of our finest Roses would, if carried out, work endless confusion. Would it not be well to "bide a wee" and see whether we are to enter into friendly relations with a regenerated Germany or to commence commercial ostracism against the Hohenzollern Huns when the final decision on the battlefield is obtained?

Some men are born rich, others wise—but anybody can be a d—n phool! Get the hook! Get the hook!

Elbert Hubbard said: "Don't be a villager, be universal, no matter where you live," which, horticulturally interpreted, means "Subscribe to the S. A. F. and O. H. Publicity Fund."

The daily news items tell us that Kaiser Bill has retired some of his generals because they failed to capture the marines. We humbly rise to inquire why he does not start the "Clown Prince" homeward with a vigorous kick. "Say it with flowers": "Aster" him home!

It will be well to remember that in the New World in which we are to live in the future cooperation, not competition, will be the slogan. Today we are fighting the idea that one man ought to hog it all, whether as a government or an individual. If you are still possessed with the old idea—forget it.

The school garden is doing a noble work. The remark of a noted ecclesiastic was: "Give me the child until he is ten and I do not care what you preach to him after." The wise florist with an eye to the future will absorb this saying and act accordingly.

When a Lawn Mower is a Rake.—"Lady, kin I cut your grass for a meal? I'm a first-class lawn mower," said the red nosed tramp.

"Go away! You look more like an old rake," said the lady.—Boston Transcript.

American Gladiolus Society

Annual Meeting and Exhibition, Buffalo, N. Y., August 14, 15, 16, 17

"The essentials of the field were intended not only for food, b for flowers, to give us cheer; and when was man ever in such need cheer as now?"

This was the keynote of the annual address of A. I Kunderd of Goshen, Ind., president of the America Gladiolus Society. The sentiment expressed by Pres dent Kunderd stirred a responsive chord. The atten ance surpassed expectations. In size and quality t exhibit compared favorably with previous displays the society, despite the hot weather. "Considering t time and conditions, we had a very successful show said President Kunderd, "and the exhibitors did then selves credit to assemble such a fine collection. T results were even better than I expected. The loc growers did splendid work in filling out the exhibit even if they did not make any entries or expected ar financial benefits. Emphasis should be placed on t hearty cooperation extended by the members of t Buffalo Florists' Club, who contributed their tim thought and enthusiasm in helping to make the exhib a splendid success."

At the annual meeting, Prof. A. C. Beal of Corn University, Ithaca, N. Y., was elected secretary to su ceed the late Henry Youell of Syracuse. A committ consisting of Wilbur A. Christy of Ravenna, Ohio; M A. H. Austin of Wayland, and Madison Cooper Calcium, N. Y., was appointed to report resolutions the deaths of two members of the society: Matthe Crawford of Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio, and Henry Youell of Syracuse, N. Y. Mr. Crawford was know as the "Dean of the Gladiolus Fraternity," and collabo ator, with Dr. Van Fleet, of "The Book of the Glad olus." He was perhaps the most widely known and l loved of America's growers of the Gladiolus. Mr. Youe was secretary of the American Gladiolus Society for number of years and one of the most widely known ar active of its members.

A timely note was struck by President Kunderd his annual address when he laid particular stress "the vast importance of floriculture as the handma of the agriculturist and the grower of the prima neecessities." President Kunderd brought out by apt i lustration, the great value of flowers as an inspiratio to the worker, the soldier and the man of affairs, e pecially emphasizing the comfort and encouragemer flowers bring to the wounded fighter while he is conv lescing. He praised the exhibitors for their spirit i exhibiting without hope of financial gain and urged a Gladiolus lovers to join the society. He also had word of praise for all who had helped to make the sho a success, specially singling out Secretary Beal an Madison Cooper, publisher of The Flower Grower.

The sentiment of the society was that the next mee ing would be held at Detroit. Provision was made fo the disposition of the flowers exhibited, it being decide to distribute as many as possible among the variou hospitals of the city.

Report of Secretary A. C. Beal

This is the ninth annual meeting of the American Glad olus Society and it is our hope that it will be productiv of plans and measures for making the tenth year the mos effective in results of any year in the history of the society Let us one and all lend our efforts in making the comin year yield great results in the advancement of the Glad olus. If we look back over the past 10 years we can se the very considerable advance that has been made. Ther is a greater work for this society to do. We should do a we can to stimulate interest in the Gladiolus Society b offering our medals and certificates to the local shows The question is sometimes raised whether it is desirabl to offer the medals without restrictions, as is the case a present. If a local society could affiliate in some way wit our society, it should be helpful to both. We might als offer our medals through such State fairs as have a worth flower exhibit. It would seem as if no award should b made unless the winning exhibitors are members of our soc iety.

Supplying the Flower Grower to the members appear to meet the very apparent need of an official organ for th society. No doubt it can serve a very useful purpose i keeping in touch with our members. To accomplis this purpose, the advisability of having a column in th Flower Grower for the publication of items of special interes to the members is something that may appeal to you.

If the society had the necessary financial support, it coul do many things not possible to carry out now. A complet catalog of all varieties, with name of originator, intro ducer and year of introduction, with a brief, clear-cu description would be very useful to our members. Thi is a work for the future.

At the last annual meeting action was taken toward the appointment of a publicity committee. J. J. Lane, who became chairman of this committee, conducted an active campaign for new members. Although operations were not started until too late to get much publicity for the society through the catalog circulation of the commercial growers, and notwithstanding war conditions, we have received 165 new members. Several of these are in Canada, New Zealand and Australia.

The late secretary reported 10 new members last year. When I took over the secretary's office I found 83 paid members on the roll. Since that time 16 old members have paid up. Some of those living abroad have paid two years' dues. The total membership at present is 264. This is a very substantial gain, but it would seem that we ought to be able to have a society of at least 500 members and I have faith to believe that when the war ends it will be possible to build up the membership to that number. The credit for the increase in new members is largely due to the excellent work of the president, Mr. Kunderd, Mr. Lane and Mr. Cooper, editor of the Flower Grower. The society certainly owes them a debt of gratitude for their good work, which brought such excellent results in these difficult times. The fact that the society makes a return to its members by sending the Flower Grower has been a material aid, I am sure.

The American Gladiolus Society sustained a severe loss in the death of its secretary, Henry Youell, who had been an officer in the society from its inception. His extensive knowledge of the Gladiolus gained during a lifetime made him an invaluable member in the councils of the society.

Another veteran in the gladiolus world, Matthew Crawford, passed away during the year. As a writer on horticultural subjects as well as the pioneer grower of Gladioli, he was favorably and widely known. These men did much to advance the interest in the Gladiolus as a garden flower and as a florist's cut flower. Their passing leaves it to us to "carry on."

The members of the American Gladiolus Society owe it to themselves as well as to the society to rally against the foolish sentiment found in some quarters that flowers have no place in our lives during war times. We are organized to promote the interests of a flower suitable to every home garden, where it can send out its message of peace and hope and even joy to anxious hearts that long for loved ones far from the home scenes. Let us then, while doing our part in this struggle, seek the consolation and the joys of growing flowers.

The Exhibition

The principal prize winners were John Scheepers & Co. Inc., New York City, C. Zeestraten, Bemus Point, N. Y., Madison Cooper, Calcium, N. Y., the Grullemans Co., Avon-on-the-Lake, O. For the best seedling never before exhibited John Scheepers & Co. Inc., won the silver medal; Austin Coleman Co., Waylands, O., the bronze medal, Scheepers' also won the Burpee silver cup awarded by the society, for the best and most distinct seedling, H. E. Meader, Dover, N. H. coming out second, and receiving the cash prize, Madison Cooper was also awarded first for the best display of 100 vars. and H. E. Chriswell first for the best display of Kunderd vars.

Awards of Merit were given as follows: Austin Coleman Co., for three seedlings; the Grullemans Co., for general display of stock; Scheepers' for display and arrangement of stock; C. Zeestraten for general display; the W. E. Kirchoff Co., Pembroke, N. Y., for general display. The last named exhibit was well staged by W. J. Palmer & Son of Buffalo. Special mention was made by the judges of the high quality of the Primulinus Hybrids shown, which illustrated the remarkable advance that has recently been made in this class.

Among the meritorious seedlings were those exhibited by W. E. Kirchoff Co.; Glory of Pembroke, a fine yellow; Mrs. W. J. Palmer, large white, blooms nicely arranged, tinted a very pale blush; Prof. A. C. Beal, dark red; Mrs. W. E. Kirchoff, white with very faint markings in throat.

In the Grullemans Co.'s exhibit was noted a new Primulinus variety, General Pershing, a lavender, with a yellow throat.

The seedling never before exhibited which won the silver medal for John Scheepers & Co., was a perfect spike of very light flesh-pink, growing slightly darker towards the ends of the flower petals. The bronze medal in this class was carried off by a beautiful pink variety.

The Scheepers' seedling that carried off the Burpee trophy was a remarkably fine specimen, consisting of six spikes of a delicate silky white, suffused light pink toward the end of the flower petal. The seedling was named "Miss Edith Cavell."

The Austin Coleman Co., Wayland, O., showed an excellent pure-white seedling, which received an award of merit. This variety would have won the society's silver medal except for the fact that it had been shown elsewhere.

The judges were J. J. Grullemans, E. A. Slattery and Joseph Coleman.

Growing Carnations and Roses at Low Temperature

The proceedings of the American Carnation Society for the last meeting, held Jan. 30 and 31, 1918, at Boston, and which have recently been published, contain an account of an interesting discussion that took place there on the subject of growing Carnations and other stock at low temperatures. A restatement of the facts brought out in this discussion will undoubtedly prove of great interest at this time, when the florists are trying to solve the trying problem of how to run their greenhouses on a 50 per cent allowance of coal. The discussion is of special interest because those who took part in it are among the leaders in the trade, being successful growers of many years' experience.

The chairman who presided—Vice-President Strout, by the way,—said that he wished to bring out facts as to how the growers could reduce their coal consumption by lowering the temperature and how far it was safe to go in this respect in growing Carnations.

Wm. R. Nicholson, Framingham, Mass. stated that it was perfectly feasible and safe to drop the temperature down to 45deg. or lower, and if necessary, later bring up the temperature: in fact, if it were a question of conserving coal and still retaining good quality it would do no harm to go down to 42 or 43deg. Mr. Nicholson said further: "You would want to start in early in the season and work gradually right through October and November and the fore part of December. You want to start in early and keep going down. I would keep an even temperature and I would keep right along until the Spring of the year. I would not advise anyone to start in and then change."

Mr. Dailledouze of Brooklyn, N. Y., said, in reply to a question asking what per cent of coal would be saved lowering the temperature five or six degrees right through the season, that is from 52deg. to 46deg; or in other words how much less coal it would take: "I would say that a temperature of 50deg. for Carnations and 60deg. for Roses is best. That has been our basis and I think it is inclined to be a little bit more than double, so you can figure at least double on ten degrees. There isn't any reason why you should not go back as well as go up. It probably will cost a little more to go up than go back, but it works out pretty nearly right, I think.

J. Geo. Jurgens of Northport, N. Y. gave his experience: "We ordinarily run 300 tons of coal a year. During the month of December we never figure on burning more than 35 tons, but we got away with very nearly 100 tons; consequently between Christmas and New Year's we cut the temperature. We started with fifty, going down two degrees every night until we reached forty—that does not mean the whole house is forty, that is the extreme ends, and the middle would be possibly forty-five. Up to the time I left home we had barely used fifty tons, while for the month of December we used almost one hundred, so comparing December and January, we almost cut it in half. We are cutting it ten degrees at night and we are cutting it correspondingly in the day time, because we do not allow the house to go above fifty-two, and in that way we are effecting quite a saving. On sunny days we are taking advantage of the sun heat as much as we can, and I would say we have saved fifty per cent in coal consumption in ten degrees lower temperature. I have not found it affected the vitality of the plant. I will say they are not quite so productive, but the quality is increased."

The remarks of S. J. Goddard, Framingham, Mass., were as follows: "I have been up against the coal proposition about as hard as any one, I think, this Winter. Since the first of December I have been getting it from hand to mouth—one day to the other. Until the first week in January I have kept my houses, as I always have kept them, at 52deg. I think that is the ideal temperature for Carnations. After that, when the coal got short, I cut them down to 45deg. and then have run them up in in proportion; some days they got 52deg. keeping them the sun heat. This week I have been shorter than ever; they told me the day before yesterday that they did not think I would get any more coal, and last night my temperature went down to thirty-eight, but I see no difference in my stock by running them cold, only in the development of the flower; they don't develop so nicely in the centers, and they do not look so well, the outside petals lose the the color and lose substance."

Peter Fisher, Ellis, Mass., put the case in this apt fashion: "In regard to reducing temperatures, I think there is a limit to that, like the fellow with his donkey—he got him down to one straw a day and then he died. I don't think we could go much below 45deg. and retain the quality of our stock. I agree with Mr. Nicholson that if you are going to start reducing temperatures start in the Fall; don't wait until a night when it drops to zero and then reduce from 52deg. to 40deg. or 45deg.

"We have grown part Roses this last year or two, and after the coal shortage we reduced the temperature in the Rose house running back to about 44deg. and then reduced gradually, getting down to 34deg. or 36deg. at night, but even as late as two or three weeks ago we got some of the nicest Ophelia Roses I have seen for some time. We sent some to a golden wedding and I never got so many compliments; they said they were the best they had ever seen. They were really good flowers, and it shows what can be done. I actually believe if we had put Carnations in one part of the house and the Roses in a part that is taken up in Chrysanthemum plants those Ophelias would have produced. I think we can reduce our temperatures to 42deg. or 45deg. and do first-class with the flowers, although you will not get the quantity, but don't begin with high temperature and reduce suddenly."

Taking a Splinter Out of the Finger

To remove a splinter from the hand, fill a wide-mouthed bottle nearly full of hot water; thrust the inured part over the mouth and press it slightly. The flesh will be drawn down, and shortly the splinter will be exposed under the action of the steam. This method, says Popular Mechanics, is far better than the common and dangerous practice of pricking the flesh with a pin or knife point. The usual antiseptic solution should be applied.

Probably florists and their workers suffer from splinters getting lodged in their hands as much or more so than other classes of industry, and the above suggestion may be considered worthy of a trial when next in trouble of this nature.

S. A. F. and O. H. Convention in Saint Louis

August 20, 21, 22

President's Address

Publicity Campaign

Undoubtedly the biggest thing undertaken by this society the past year is the publicity campaign, which was launched so auspiciously in New York at the last convention. The work of the publicity committee, under the leadership of Messrs. Penn and Asmus, has been, with the limited amount of funds at their disposal, simply phenomenal. It would be the greatest of pities if this work should be permitted to drop or drag, at this season. Let us make plans at this convention for a vigorous fall offensive in advertising so we may not lose the benefit of the work already done. One thing alone, the connection of the florists directly with the war and the adoption of our publicity slogan, "Say it with Flowers," by the League for Woman's Service is worth more money as a cash proposition to the florists than the whole of the publicity fund. This League will use over 20,000 signs in its work and, "Say it with flowers," before another year has passed, will be a household word in every home in the country. You have all seen the good work done by this committee in the Saturday Evening Post and other national publications, and the report which the committee on publicity will make will be interesting.

The New York Office

The New York office of the publicity committee seems to fill a long felt want. Every member of the organization who drops into New York stops into the office, to receive the latest news, to get mail and, if necessary, to have a conference with other fellow members on business matters. It also furnishes a dignified place for committee members to hold committee meetings when conferring with other interests. It is being used also to an increasing extent by newspaper men for verifying reports relating to our business and for acquiring knowledge along horticultural lines. From individual personal contact I can testify to the usefulness of this office. The joint publicity and finance committees in session last March decided that the secretary should travel around to see members personally. This necessitated the employment of an office manager in Mr. Young's absence, which office has been competently filled by J. H. Pepper. No one not personally acquainted with the New York office has any idea of the enormous amount of detail attached to the secretary's office, particularly since there has been added to it the work of the publicity bureau. In this connection the secretary's report will doubtless speak for itself.

Credits and Collections

Another committee whose work is of special value at this time is that on Credits and Collections. Trust this committee will be in shape to formulate some definite plans of credits and collections so that the florists' business may be put on the plane where it rightfully belongs. In this connection I would like to call the attention of this committee to the system of trade acceptances which so far seems to have gained very little headway in our business. It has been estimated there are four billion dollars annually tied up in credits, which could be released by the operation of trade acceptances The other day I noticed in the papers that fifty million dollars in credits would be released on that day, which were drafts drawn under that credit by merchants in France on American banks for goods purchased in America. It would have been impossible without the use of these credits to finance the war in its colossal proportions. Someone may ask, what is the difference between a trade acceptance and a note? It must be borne in mind that a trade acceptance is given in return for goods actually sold whereas a note may represent money borrowed for any one of a thousand things. Trade acceptances are only given in exchange for merchandise. In the case of a trade acceptance, the local bank can rediscount that acceptance through its federal bank and thereby keep its funds liquid and relieve the congestion at all points. Beverly Harris, in a recent address in New York, said: "Here let me impress upon you the fact that in our open-account system, merchants, in borrowing to carry their credit customers, are usurping the functions of bankers and carrying an unnecessarily heavy load. Is there a means at hand to remedy the situation and transfer the load where it belongs: to the bankers and through them, to the Federal Reserve Bank? There is—the trade acceptance." I trust this convention will go on record as approving this method of financing.

Florists' Bank

Continuing on the subject of finance, the day should come when the florists should have a bank for themselves. The average bank little understands the florists' business, and sometimes applications for loans from worthy applicants are turned down where other applications, not nearly so secure, go by and are allowed by the bank, to its future loss. If the florists had a bank of their own, with men high in office, thoroughly familiar themselves with the florists' business, I am sure it would be a good thing for the trade in general. Some of the largest banks today have been built up in such a way, instancing the Chemical National, Shoe and Leather and Corn Exchange banks and others, organized originally to take care of some particular line of business. I presume the charter of this society would not permit it to go into the banking business but it is a matter that may well receive your earnest attention.

A Society Publicity Organ

I am of the opinion that the time has come when the society should have a medium of its own for the publication and circulation among its members of such news, announcements and other matter, as may be of interest to them. Few organizations having as large a membership as the S. A. F., are without a publicity organ, or some medium or means by which the views of members may be circulated within the membership fold. We have for a number of years expended large sums of money on the publication in book form of the proceedings of our annual conventions, and our own organ could very well include these proceedings in its own columns and the numbers bound into a yearly volume where any member cared to go to this small expense. The publication could be made very useful to the society. Properly managed, it would be likely to increase our membership, for it certainly could be used for missionary work, and I am sure that the society's work would be constantly before the members, and the other matters which could be carried in the columns would tend to keep up individual interest in all our undertakings The organ could be made of especial service to the F. T. D., and to our promotion bureau in its publicity work. We could have heart-to-heart talks through its columns every month and it could be made a medium of communication between members. In making this recommendation, I am not belittling the very great service rendered the society by the trade papers which have always shown a willingness to publish anything that might be sent to them; but there is much that could be published for members alone and not scattered broadcast to those who do not feel that they should support the society to the extent of taking out a membership—and there are many such. My own idea of such a publication would be a paper of convenient size, say 6x9 in., something easily accommodated on an ordinary bookshelf. It need not, necessarily, carry any advertising although I do not see why it might not include a few cards provided they did not encroach too much upon the reading space. The income from such cards, with the money saved by running our proceedings through the publication, would go a very long way toward meeting the entire expense and the management of the paper could, perhaps, be well placed with our promotion bureau. Such a publication could, I understand, be mailed to our members at regular newspaper rates, and it seems to me it will eventually become necessary to our publicity campaign.

Membership

While the increase in membership is satisfactory, perhaps, in comparison with recent years, it is nothing compared with what it should be, when one considers all the society has done for the florists generally. An organization to keep virile must keep taking in new blood and if we can devise some means of going out into the "highways and byways" and compel the florists who are not members to come in, it would be as much or more for their own benefit than it would be for ours.

Conclusion

Meanwhile, let us all "pull together" and use every honorable endeavor to increase our business, to help each other, and stand shoulder to shoulder as florists and citizens in this great country, serene and confident that the present clouds will pass away and that the future of the florists is certain to be a glorious one.

Geo. Asmus, A. T. De La Mare and Guerney Hill were appointed as a committee to report on the president's address.

The minutes of the executive board were then read and approved.

Secretary Young next presented his report as under:

Secretary John Young's Report

Secretary Young reported that substantial progress had been made during the year; in fact it might be said that remarkable headway had been made, in spite of conditions.

Membership

Mr. Young's report, made in Aug. 1917, showed that, presuming that all those members in good standing at the close of 1916 would qualify for 1917, the total membership might be taken as covering 1694 annual, 496 life and 25 pioneer members, a grand total of 2215. Early in 1918, however, it was found that the lapses were more than ordinarily large, so that, with the same presumption applied to the 1918 list, the society has 31 life, 1780 annual and 24 pioneer members, a total of 2335. Mr. Young stated further: "Since last convention we have taken in 568 new annual members and 35 life members, a rather remarkable influx, but sadly needed to make up the loss through lapses. As explained, our strength can only be reported year after year on a presumptive basis and our increases must be shown in that way. A member is not in good standing unless he has paid the current years' dues, so we are obliged to assume that it is the intention of all in the list of members in good standing for the year previous to qualify for the current year."

Mr. Young estimated that perhaps nearly half the addition to the membership was due to his trip across the country in the interests of the publicity campaign fund, and, although the total increase has been highly satisfactory, the society's roster represents only a small part of the trade in this country. Mr. Young touched on the fact that the work of the society is for the benefit of the small florist as well as for those with larger interests citing what it has been able to do for the former in the matter of fuel allowance. This matter has been treated more fully in the reports of other committees. Mr. Young also suggested that the State vice-presidents might do much toward increasing the membership by personal contact, taking advantage of the wide use of the automobile, especially to reach florists within the radius of the vice-presidents' home town.

The Administration Offices

Secretary Young referred to the establishment of the society's new administration office at 1170 Broadway, New York City, and the advantages of having quarters adequate for the work of the publicity campaign, the meetings of various committees, etc. Any member visiting New York is invited to use the society's offices as his business headquarters during his stay.

The Trade Exhibition

The trade exhibition at the convention has of course suffered through conditions which have affected the whole country, but extraordinary efforts were made to make the trade exhibition at least representative and under the circumstances the results are gratifying, thanks to the support of the exhibitors.

The Fuel Situation

This is treated in full in the report of the Washington representative and elsewhere, but Mr. Young emphasized the necessity of making the organization as strong as possible and the membership as large as possible in order to prepare for any future contingencies.

The Publicity Campaign

Mr. Young commented briefly on the publicity campaign which is treated more fully in the report of the publicity committee and the promotion bureau. Mr. Young felt, however, that when all the florists clearly understood the society's plans, there would be little difficulty in doubling the $50,000 now aimed for to be spent annually in this work.

The National Flower Show

While the preparatory work connected with the Fifth National Flower Show proposed to be held last Spring in St. Louis had gone on actively until it was found necessary, because of conditions, to postpone the show indefinitely, it is hoped to resume this preparatory work in the near future.

Maintenance of Membership

The necessity of removing the names of many members who had allowed their membership to lapse was regretted by Mr. Young who pointed out that it was a great waste to send several notices, and he urged members to be more prompt about paying their dues.

The Trade Press

The great help rendered by the trade press in cooperating in the publication of notices and in services rendered the society and the trade generally was attested to by Secretary Young.

Plant Registrations

Since the last convention 22 new plant registrations have been recorded, full notices of which have appeared from time to time in The Exchange Mr. Young called attention to the amendment to the bylaws covering plant registration, which was to be voted on at the convention.

Wm. F. Gude as Washington representative followed :ith his report:

Report of William F. Gude, Washington Representative

Mr. President and Ladies and Gentlemen:

Twelve months seem a short time (when we get along in :ears). However, when I addressed you in New York City , twelve-month ago I then indulged the hope that ere this con-:ention in St. Louis took place the whole world would be t peace, and we, who in our profession produce and exemplify he peaceful and the beautiful, would be running our business gain on a normal basis. Fate has decreed that this hope vas not to be fulfilled; the nations are still at war, a war, we :elieve, for a better and higher cause and the uplifting of :umanity throughout the world.

Yet, through all the misgivings and forebodings, flowers, .s from time immemorial, have seemed to be an essential, and iot a "non-essential" as one of our officers (well meaning but ll-advised) would like to have the public believe. Our business ias gone on, and has been a wonderful adjunct to the war. They give a spirit of encouragement, because flowers by a vounded man's bedside—no matter where—remind him of mother and home," and, to my mind, speak louder than any vords penned by prophet, poet or peasant. It behooves us, herefore, to do all that we can to assist our Government in naintaining a business that buoys up the spirits of the soldier t the front, because the message expressed in flowers cannot ie expressed in words.

During this last year, notwithstanding all the obstacles hrown in our way by the everlasting word "non-essential", am happy to report to this organization that the florists of he District of Columbia have had the most successful year n the entire history of their business careers. While we iave had heatless Mondays in Washington as frequently as iave others, we found, after a rigid adherence to the ruling, hat the business did not suffer to an appreciable degree. There may have been a few patients in hospitals who would iave liked, but were unable, to have flowers sent them by riends, there may have been burials which were flowerless hrough neglect to order on Saturdays (Sunday being a holiday) till with all this there was inspired a spirit of ardor in the people who would have bought flowers to buy more and also o "talk" flowers.

Again, of the persons employed in our business, we are roud and happy to say that 27 of them are in uniform, and hat their places are open to them as long as the Gude Bros. 'o., has a dollar left to pay their wages, God willing that they eturn, for which we hope and pray. Five members of our wn families wear the khaki, and when it is recalled that there re but six male heirs, the proportion is one of which to be roud.

Coal

Among the war activities in Washington since our last ses-on, there have been many problems to confront the S. A. F. and . H., some of them having reached your representative there. ot the least of these was the coal situation of 1917. Many our members (and many florists who should be members) ily too well remember the hardships we went through during ie Winter of 1917. Right here, let me say through our ational society that anywhere from 500 to 1000 per cent. ore members would join (it is resonable to suppose) if we ould only educate them as to what it means to belong to the A. F. and O. H. By this is meant that a great many inquir-s come to the Washington representative from non-members, ho, apparently, were left out in the cold, literally, and eventu-ally were helped by officers of our organization.

In November, 1917, many inquiries poured in, such as "How uch coal can I have?" "What will the Fuel Administration do ith me, as I have bought all my coal and have it on the place?" have no coal at all, and if the Fuel Administration does not ve me coal I will freeze out." "If I had just one car of al, I might be able to pull through." "After being in business r 40 or 50 years, the Administration has denied me a car coal, and the denial means my ruin," "What size of coal ll I be permitted to burn?" And many more statements like ose.

Gentlemen, your Washington Fuel Administrator has a nited amount of patience. After the U. S. Government regu-tions are planned TO WIN THIS WAR FIRST AND ALL HE TIME, and these rules and regulations are published in the trade papers, is it any wonder that an editor of one of ose papers should say "Why subscribe, if you won't read?" id "If you are a florist, why not subscribe to the papers?" Gentlemen, it is up to you. You have one of the grandest ofessions on the face of the earth, and, one, we claim, that is essential. READ your trade papers. If you do not have em to read, SUBSCRIBE to them. It will save your fellow rists many hours of useless correspondence, your editor any paragraphs of useless expense, and yourself much anx-y and, perhaps, embarrassment.

If there is anyone present, who knows of an inquiry that the ashington representative has not answered forthwith in e shortest possible time, now is the time to speak.

An interesting ruling is that affecting points west of the ississippi, to the effect that greenhouses in those sections nich do not interfere with war work can use 100 per cent. of el quantities consumed in prior years. Another equally teresting decision along the same lines permits growers of getables under glass to use 100 per cent. (with the consent the State Fuel Administrator and the local official of the el Organization.

These are not isolated instances, but simply two of the uations which arise and must be handled from day to day they arise.

The Arlington Test Gardens

I am glad to report floral cultural progress at the Arlington speriment Farm, under the able supervision of Prof. F. L. ulford. Continued progress with the Rose test garden n be recorded. The plants came through the Winter in good ndition and have bloomed this year better than ever before. e hundred and twenty-two varieties have been added to e collection this year. Interest in the garden seems to be the increase. An official visit of the American Rose Society as made on May 27. At the time many S. A. F. and O. H. mbers were in the city attending important hearings. The date for the visit was set ahead suddenly at the last moment to enable those attending the other meetings to be present. The garden was in show condition for three weeks following the official visit. After the official inspection and a lunch, a visit was made to the Twin Oaks Rose garden at the invitation of Mrs. Chas. J. Bell, daughter of the late Mrs. Gardener Hubbard, where welcome refreshments were served. A visit was also made to the Botanic Garden later in the day, where our fellow-member, George W. Hess, received us. A rather full report of the Rose garden was published in the American Rose Annual for 1918.

The Peony test garden has made a good growth this Summer. Few varieties were added last Fall and this Spring, but there are several promised for this Fall. Most of the varieties in the garden bloomed this season and next year a good reading should be obtained of their behavior. All Peony lovers should take an active interest in this garden and push the acquisition of varieties.

There is the nucleus for a good collection of Irises at the Arlington Farm, there being now 250 varieties there. As there is no society to push this attractive flower, it is necessary that individual growers get in touch with the department and try to further this work.

Breeding and testing of out-door Chrysanthemums, with the object of obtaining hardy early-flowering types for the most Northern States continues. Sixty-three varieties have been saved out of last year's seedlings and 500 additional seedlings were grown this year.

Breeding for a yellow Carnation continues, as well as investigations of some of the problems of the greenhouse production of Roses. Dr. Van Fleet is continuing the work of breeding Roses, Freesias, as well as other work of interest to florists, while Dr. Griffiths is continuing the work with the Holland bulbs, Bermuda Lilies and other such plants, with results suggesting conclusions of importance to florists. A special plea is made to all interested in the plant collection to communicate with F. L. Mulford, Horticulturist, Dept. of Agriculture.

Reports of the various State vice-presidents were also submitted.

The publicity finance committee, George Asmus, chairman, presented a lengthy paper dealing with the work of the committee since its inception and the particulars of which have appeared in these columns from week to week. He dealt with the successful trip undertaken by Secretary Young at the suggestion of the committee, which had resulted in adding many thousands of dollars to the fund as well as some 250 members to the society. This work is to be continued. The fund at the time of making this report had reached $44,000, with every probability of the full $50,000 being reached in time to allow of carrying out the advertising campaign planned for the year.

W. A. Manda paid a tribute to ex-President William J. Stewart, and moved that a telegram of greetings be sent expressing hope for Mr. Stewart's speedy recovery.

On motion of Jos. Hill it was decided to purchase an association service flag.

A letter was read from Frederick K. Newbold appealing for aid to maintain the motor cars presented by the New York Florists' Club and the New York Horticultural Society last Spring to the American fund for French wounded. It was unanimously voted to make an appropriation of $500.

Ex-President Hill congratulated the society on its financial condition and general standing.

Wm. F. Gude, chairman of the committee on tariff and legislation, submitted the committee report. That portion referring to fuel was laid over for discussion on Thursday. Mr. Gude explained the new questionnaire sent out by Samuel Rogers, director of census.

Report on Tariff and Legislation, Wm. F. Gude, Chairman

Fuel Situation

The work of the committee has covered all legislation affecting the florists and allied industries since the last meeting. Mr. Gude, referring to the fuel legislation, emphasized the fact that it is not the desire of the U. S. Fuel Administration to put any industry out of business or see any business ruined, but it does expect every person burning fuel to grow flowers to "do their bit" toward winning the war, and cooperating to the utmost with the Fuel Administration. He mentioned the various restrictions which have been established by the U. S. Fuel Administration and which have been given in detail in The Exchange. Mr. Gude stated that in the Winter of 1917 the fuel Administration had at first considered the denying of any coal to the florists in the East, but after many conferences with the committee the latter had succeeded in convincing the Fuel Administration that flowers were essential to war work and finally the Fuel Administration agreed to a reduction of consumption of 33 per cent.; this, as we know, has this year, been reduced to 50 per cent. The committee, however, impressed upon the Fuel Administration that whatever the fuel allowance decided upon, the florists as a unit would stand by the Administration to help win the war, but it was imperative, whatever the ruling, that it should be made forthwith, in March, or at least not later than April.

After it became known that the curtailment for the Winter of 1918–1919 would be 50 per cent, numerous inquiries were received from florists all over the country and while the committee had done everything it possibly could for the coal situation, it was thought best to call a conference at Washington which was accordingly done on May 28th. Full details of this conference were given in The Exchange at the time.

Since the May conference many other problems have arisen for the committee to solve. The various changes and interpretations of the rulings have appeared in full in The Exchange, and although given in detail in Mr. Gude's report, it is not necessary to repeat them here.

One of the finest achievements of the committee was taking care of the so-called small grower, in securing an official order from the U. S. Fuel Administration allowing those using less than 40 tons per annum their full 100 per cent. and allowing also the use of other fuel, under certain regulations, if it did not interfere with war work.

U. S. Tariff Commission

The U. S. Tariff Commission is a body appointed for the purpose of gathering information and considering suggestions and recommendations. Provisions have been made for continuing its operations for a considerable time and the making of a series of reports. The members of this commission are appointed for a term of 12 years and in establishing the commission Congress authorized a continuing appropriation. It would be well for S. A. F. members to keep in mind the existence of this commission and forward to the chairman of the committee on tariff and legislation details of all florists' troubles, either in the operation of the law or otherwise, in order that the committee may keep the commission fully advised of the requirements of florists and horticulturists.

The following is the wording of the invitation of the commission itself:

"We shall welcome information and suggestions from all quarters and we shall not fail to give attentive consideration to every thing that reaches us. Many problems and difficulties will suggest themselves to business men in their own experiences which would be valuable to the commission. Many views will present themselves which would escape notice unless freely brought to the attention of some coordinating body. We constitute a sort of clearing house for discussion and the gathering of information, and we welcome contributions from all quarters."

In conclusion Mr. Gude said:

"Your committee has had many other problems in the past few months, all of which were promptly dealt with and the findings given to the trade papers for publication in the shortest possible time, so that all interested could promptly be advised.

William R. Smith Memorial

William F. Gude, as chairman of the committee on Memorial to the late Wm. R. Smith, presented his report as below:

The fund in bank to date for the proposed William R. Smith Memorial amounts to $1894.10.

The committee regrets to report the death of one of its honored members, J. A. Valentine of Denver, Colo., since our last meeting. He was a lifelong friend of the late William R. Smith and a member of this committee since its organization and an ardent worker at all times.

As time goes on the members of this society can more and more appreciate the splendid work accomplished by the Father of our Charter and the wonderful foresight of this noble man, which should inspire more contributions to this memorial fund. Any one who has not subscribed may send remittance to the Chairman of the William R. Smith Memorial Committee, Washington, D. C.

Report of School Garden Committee, 1918

School Gardening and Home Gardening

From correspondence which has come to hand, it would seem as if it would be out of fashion not to engage in vegetable raising, but the home cry is, "Well, I want some flowers," and one thing is certain, which is that the love of flowers or the cultivation of flowers will not die out in the United States and Canada. This past year, in many places, has been a trying one for florists, but with an attention to home and school gardening, the Dept. of Agri. at Washington and other institutions have strongly pushed this work. To every State department of education in the U. S., the S. A. F. and O. H. has put itself on record, that the florists of this country are the people whose training fits them to aid in this beneficial work. To every town, village or city where there is a member of the S. A. F., we have sent the Spring call to local school officials, advising attention to this practical work, and the many replies which came, scattered from East to West and North to South, show unmistakably the deep rooted interest taken in this work.

When Robert Farquhar brought this work before the society at its annual convention at Washington, D. C., in 1892, no general interest had been shown in gardening in connection with school work but times have changed, and what was not thought of much account, has developed far and wide; with this settled policy of home gardening, which has come to stay, it means local business to those florists who will pay a bit of attention, as far as they can, to furnishing plants and seeds for small gardens, and the grower of a small garden is in nearly all cases an admirer of flowers. To illustrate: For some years past, I have received through our Congressman, packages of both vegetable and flower seeds, and distributed them annually to our school children, and rarely, when a package of vegetable seeds was handed out, has the request failed to come "Can't we have some flower seeds too?" This is actual fact, noted and recorded.

In Quebec, the Department of Children's Gardening, under the direction of J. Charles Magnan, gives most interesting results. In spite of all the havoc of war and stress of work, do not imagine that the faculty for appreciating nice things and beautiful things will die out of American character; far from it. Letters and cards sent from France by young soldiers in three different cases have mentioned how nicely the peasants kept their yards.

The florist's trade is such that it tends to make every town or village where a florist is located, more desirable as a home town and the effort to increase the instruction in the cultivation of plants among children backs up nature study, with its broadening thought and action and makes of the florist a person to be looked up to. Your committee on school gardening has gone as far as means permitted in pushing the good work from Ocean to Ocean, for this is a big country.

Beacon, N. Y.
Aug. 10, 1918.

The St. Louis Wholesale Cut Flower Co., D. S. Geddis, manager, distributed with its compliments a souvenir S. A. F. convention button that was very much in evidence in the personal decoration of visitors.

The St. Louis Florists' Club presented all the members with a handsome souvenir badge, which consisted of a bronze medal with a skyline view of the city and a replica of the statue of St. Louis in bold relief, inscribed "S. A. F. and O. H. Convention, St. Louis 1918." This is attached to a ribbon in the National Colors with the slogan "Say it with Flowers"; there was also a small name plate with a celluloid covering on which the visitor could write his name in a convenient form for identification.

President's Reception and Tuesday Evening Session

The president's reception at the Jefferson Hotel on Tuesday night was a big success.

The amendments to constitution and by-laws were carried at the evening session of the first day's proceedings, providing for three new members to the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturist's board of directors, namely the chairmen of the publicity committee, the publicity finance committee and the national flower show committee, unless any of these are already directors. Also a clause providing that the vice-president of an affiliated society shall act as a director in case of the disability of the president thereof.

The amendment to Article VI was also carried; this provides for the more efficient registration of new plants.

A recommendation that an appropriation of $250 be made for the use of the committee on school gardens was also carried.

The Cleveland Florists' Club extended an invitation to the S. A. F. for 1920, and that city was unanimously selected.

Wednesday Morning's Session

Wednesday morning's session opened sharp on time. The first business was the nomination of officers. Jules Bourdet nominated J. F. Ammann for president. J. T. D. Fulmer nominated A. L. Miller. The latter declined in Mr. Ammann's favor. For vice-president Robert Rahaley and F. Fetters, both of Detroit, were nominated. John Young was nominated secretary and J. J. Hess treasurer, there being no opposition. For directors the following were nominated: Jos. Hill, Richmond, Ind.; John Evans, Richmond, Ind.; J. S. Wilson, Des Moines, Ia.; C. L. Baum, Knoxville, Tenn., and C. C. Pollworth of Milwaukee, Wis. The discussion of the president's address was deferred.

F. S. Webb of Chicago then gave a lengthy address on "National Credits and Collections," which was listened to with marked attention and given a rising vote of thanks. R. C. Kerr, chairman of the committee on national credits and collections followed with a report, the details of which will be given later. Mr. Gude endorsed the idea suggested in the report and moved its adoption. If this matter is pressed to its logical conclusion it will prove the best move of this year's convention.

A return telegram was read from Wm. H. Stewart, expressing the hope that he would soon be able to return to harness and thanking the society for remembering him. On motion made by Mr. Gude flowers were sent Mr. Stewart by F. T. D.

Theodore Wirth, chairman of the committee on convention garden, read a paper, offering for trial new Roses at the Minneapolis convention garden.

A committee was appointed to arrange for tributes for members who had passed away. The session was largely attended and greater attention was shown than in many years.

President Charles H. Totty, with Mrs. Totty and their daughter, arrived safely in St. Louis on Sunday, having had a delightful motor trip all the way from Madison, N. J., which town they had left on the Tuesday previous. Many florists were visited en route, and not even one solitary puncture disturbed the pleasure of the journey.

The New York delegates arrived in St. Louis two hours late. The journey was made in comparative coolness. The party was joined at Richmond, Ind., by E. G. Hill, and at Terre Haute by Fred G. Heinl.

Convention Garden

Theodore Wirth of Minneapolis, Minn., chairman, submitted a report on behalf of his committee expressing regret that the proposed Convention Garden at St. Louis had had to be abandoned on account of present day conditions. For the Detroit Convention in 1919 he stated that through Philip Breitmeyer had been secured the free use of all the land necessary for a garden that could be made large enough to grow all the material received in the endeavor to make a creditable display, said material having to be secured from a district within reasonable shipping distance of Detroit. The cost of planting and maintenance to be defrayed from local sources. Mr. Breitmeyer has offered to work along these lines. The Detroit authorities in charge are to be given a free hand to arrange for such outdoor exhibits and floral decorations as they may be able to select, and to be in full and sole charge of the garden so produced and maintained. The judges to be appointees of the S. A. F. and O. H.

Ladies' S. A. F.

The annual meeting was held Wednesday morning, while the regular S. A. F. session was in progress, Mrs. Julius Roehrs presiding. The meeting was an enthusiastic one, opening and closing with patriotic songs. The attendance was good, there being about 40 members present. Several new members were admitted. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, Mrs. J. A. Peterson, Cincinnati, Ohio; first vice-president, Mrs. Philip Breitmeyer, Detroit, Mich.; second vice-president, Mrs. W. A. Kennedy, Milwaukee, Wis.; secretary, Mrs. H. G. Berning, St. Louis, Mo.; treasurer, Miss Bertha Meinhardt, St. Louis, Mo.

Secretary's Report

The death of our Secretary, Mrs. George W. Smith, came as a shock to us all and her loss was keenly felt. Because of it, it became necessary to make some changes in the officers. Having been closely connected with Mrs. Smith during her incumbency it was my privilege to render such assistance as I could in straightening the business of her office. In order that all monies might be properly checked up duplicate receipts were sent to all members whose dues were paid during February and March. Our President, Mrs. Julius Roehrs, asked me to continue the work until a secretary could be appointed. Later she appointed me to the office. As the new by-laws were in operation it was necessary for me to resign as treasurer after having held the office for ten years; Mrs. C. H. Totty was appointed to fill the vacancy caused by my resignation.

Since Jan. 1, four members have resigned: three on account of closing out of business; the fourth gave no excuse. Six new members have been added and seven life memberships have been taken. Three of our number have been called to "the Great Beyond": Mrs. George W. Smith, Mrs. J. W. Poehlman, and Miss Gertrude Page.

The report of our treasurer is evidence that we are not falling behind in our receipts and we hope for a large addition to the membership at this convention.

Mrs. Albert M. Herr, Sec'y.

Florists' Telegraph Delivery

An enthusiastic and well attended meeting was held o Tuesday morning, Aug. 20, at 10 a.m President Gud was full of snap and ginger. L. J. Bourdet introduce Mr. Meinhardt who extended a hearty welcome to S Louis. A. R. King of Winnipeg was called on and mad a few remarks. Irwin Bertermann made a strong an optimistic address, congratulating the association on it progress. He said the Florists' Telegraph Delivery busi ness was yearly bound to increase enormously, benefit ing growers, wholesalers, retailers and all lines of th florists' industry. He predicted a great future for th F. T. D.

President Gude made a stirring address, full of th sentiment of the poetry of flowers and floral remem brances. He invited all to the F. T. D. convention i Cleveland, which takes place Oct. 8. He suggested tha the rotary custom be followed the next three days, eac one present at the meeting rising consecutively and an nouncing his name, location and business, illustrating th practical get together spirit, comradeship, acquaintanc and cooperation.

Address of Pres. William F. Gude

Mr. Gude's address struck an optimistic note. He pointe out that the object of this meeting in St. Louis was largel to give local members and those from distant places wh might not be able to attend the annual meeting of the F. T. D convention to be held at Cleveland beginning Oct. 8, an op portunity to get acquainted with each other to their mutua benefit. He was sure that the hearty welcome of the St. Loui florists would permit of no pessimism for the present.

He contrasted strikingly the florist who is always complain ing, who is sure that he could have done better in anothe business, where he would not have had to contend with th problems of coal, difficulty in getting stock, trouble with col lections, etc., with the florist who is an optimist. The latte Mr. Gude brought out, labors with the conviction that he wh serves best profits most, and by following this principle da and night he acquires a host of friends, a host of satisfied cus tomers and his business grows; grows steadily, so that he ca go to bed at night and sleep soundly, being able to pay hi bills, while the pessimist never saw things so dull, etc. Mr Gude insisted there could not be a more pleasant occupatio than that of the retail florist, whose greatest desire should b to express sentiment in the most practical way; "in short t deal with the great human family on a plane of higher ideals which should tend to make us all better morally, spiritually and mentally, if not financially."

Mr. Gude concluded by stating that in the last three years the F. T. D. had made a phenomenal advance, in spite o the pessimistic forebodings that flowers would be shut out in war time as "non-essential"; this, he maintained, was because in these terrible war times flowers were really more necessary than before, being able to convey messages of love and senti ment that no language has been able to convey. Mr. Gude stated that there had been a larger increase in membership largely due to the efforts of the secretary, that the association's finances were in fine shape, that the F. T. D. had correspondents in all parts of the world; that soon it would be as easy to order flowers by cable abroad as it is now by telegraph in this country; in short that there was every reason to be satisfied with the condition of affairs. He urged the necessity of cooperation and invited all to bring their ideas, suggestions and and criticisms for consideration at the convention to be held in Cleveland in October.

Coal Conference

Mr. Gude also reported on the visit of a number of delegates in connection with the hearing before the coal commission, and spoke particularly of the cordial reception given by several of our public men at the meeting held on the grounds of the U. S. Botanic Garden. Full details of this conference were given in The Exchange of June 1.

Secretary Pochelon made some pertinent suggestions. He laid special emphasis on the advisability of the credit clearing house and prompt payment of bills. He preached cooperation to increase membership in the association. Florists, he said, should love each other, should adopt broad viewpoints and avoid petty jealousies. He spoke of the cooperative bill-board advertising in Detroit and of the good work done.

Fred C. W. Brown then spoke of the work of the committee in selecting the best emblem design. The committee received 187 sketches of emblem designs. He said the work entailed much labor and believed the choice of the committee was justified, but wished the association to make untrammeled choice in its final decision at the October meeting. He assured the retailers who came to Cleveland that they must expect to leave something there, as well as carry away valuable suggestions.

Irwin Bertermann paid tribute to the work of the officers of the F. T. D., from Mr. Gude on down the line. He referred to the death of ex-President Valentine in a feeling manner and spoke of him as one who had no peer among florists of this country. He proposed a silent tribute which was carried out with bowed heads.

Treasurer Rock questioned the advisability of changing the emblem to which the public had grown accustomed.

President Gude brought up important valuable suggestions with reference to floral remembrances sent to relatives when casualties in service are reported. Ways and means are to be considered and brought out at the October convention, and he invited the members to send suggestions to headquarters.

George Asmus thought it would be a great mistake to stop using the present slogan "Say it with Flowers." He told how memorial services have been developed in Chicago, conducted in home or church, and of the floral tributes from the friends of the family. He said the present war offered great opportunities in this direction.

A. R. King of Winnipeg spoke of how the floral remembrance idea to relatives of wounded was being successfully carried out in Canada and that much business had been done along these lines. The idea has been taken up in churches and is going to have a lasting effect on the florists' business if properly developed, he said.

R. C. Kerr of Houston told of the work done to interest the Red Cross in presenting flowers to families of killed and wounded; he believed the plan would work out well. He also spoke of the work of the credits and collections committee. He hoped to establish a society credit bureau and credit rating book with monthly corrections, the credit rating bureau to be operated under the jurisdiction of the society. He also touched on the publicity work and urged all to be prepared to subscribe according to their means when the matter comes up in general convention. Every retailer should do his share, he said.

A. R. Green of San Antonio, Tex., suggested placing a minimum on telegraph delivery orders. The matter was generally discussed and the consensus of opinion was opposed to the suggestion.

Max Schling strongly championed the broad treatment of customers. Details of the present method of handling delinquent bills was discussed; valuable suggestions are to be brought to the Cleveland convention for further elaboration.

Secretary Pochelon urged the members not to despise the small order but at the same time to encourage large orders where possible. Many interesting experiences were narrated, proving the benefits from liberal treatment of customers and being faithful in small things, as the result of which reward will come in larger things.

President Gude made a rousing appeal for a big attendance at the October convention in Cleveland, and said the fullest interchange of ideas there cannot help but bring valuable results.

Secretary Pochelon said requests have been made for the preparation of a telegraph code, but such a code cannot be used to Europe and is of doubtful advantage in this country as loss through error in transmission or deciphering the code message would far more than overbalance the slight saving in the number of words telegraphed.

Secretary Pochelon urged taking in association members. He congratulated the membership on its liberal contributions to the publicity fund and suggested that the parent organization, the S. A. F., be asked to contribute $1000 yearly, to which the F. T. D. will add $1500 as organization contribution to the publicity fund.

C. P. Mueller, Wichita, gave encouraging report of successful F. T. D. business; he said he would not turn down the smallest order.

President Gude thanked Messrs. Weber of St. Louis for the beautiful floral offerings on the stage.

The meeting adjourned with three cheers for Mr. Gude.

Florists' Hail Association

The meeting started promptly at 9 o'clock. It was notably the largest meeting held in years. J. S. Wilson of Des Moines, Ia., was elected a director: to serve two years, Chas. F. Mueller, Wichita, Kans.; Fred Burki, Gibsonia, Pa., and F. C. W. Brown, Cleveland, Ohio. All the officers were re-elected as follows: President, E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind.; vice-president, J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill.; secretary, John G. Esler, Saddle River, N. J., and treasurer, James W. Heacock, Wyncote, Pa.

Advertising is the Motor Power of Industry

Relax in your advertising and your business will eventually slow down to a standstill—and then what?

Advertising serves to stimulate the buying public to greater needs and to awaken the desire for certain commodities that perhaps lay dormant in the mind of the prospective purchaser. It is absolutely necessary to carry on our advertising campaign to greater power than ever before in order to stimulate more demand for flowers for two reasons: First, because we have made a good start, and second, because it will be the means of creating more sales for flowers and that will solve the higher price problem so essential to the growers to overbalance the increased labor cost and 50 per cent. deficit in coal distribution.

This is the missing link that must supply the needed energy so essential for the furtherance of our business to a means that must make it profitable. With this is needed the individual efforts of the various florists throughout the country to back it up to get the fruitful results.

Unless this is done on a broader scale than ever before I can see only disaster for a good many florists in the near future, while the men who have courage and vision to go through will and must benefit more now than ever.

It would be the most unpatriotic act on the part of the florists of this country to even think of curtailing in this direction as such action would lead to still further inroads of depression and eventually this would of necessity be the means of their not being able to participate in our Liberty Bond, Red Cross and other movements so essential to help win the war.

This problem affords serious thought and the best brains in the advertising world have decreed that advertising now, more than ever, will be the motor power that will solve the great problem, that of giving us maximum results for energy used.

Boys! Go to it stronger now than ever and watch the results.

HENRY PENN,
Chairman S. A. F. and O. H.
National Publicity Campaign.

1919 Convention in Detroit
1920 Convention in Cleveland

S. A. F. Officers-Elect for 1919

President...J. F. AMMANN, Edwardsville, Ill.
Vice-President: Nominees: ROBT. RAHALEY and E. A. FETTERS, Detroit
Secretary.....JOHN YOUNG, New York City
Treasurer.....J. J. HESS, Omaha, Neb.

J. F. Ammann, Edwardsville, Ill., President-elect S. A. F. and O. H.

J. F. Ammann, Pres.-Elect S. A. F. and O. H.

Jacob F. Ammann was born in St. Louis, May 15, 1868. When he was 13 his father died, leaving the family, including the mother, young Ammann and a younger sister almost penniless. Jacob had to leave school and take such odd jobs as he could find, while his mother took in washing, young Ammann often helping her. When he was 17 his mother married a florist, Julius E. Jaeger, of 1805 Sidney st., St. Louis, Jacob entering his employ.

Here Mr. Ammann remained for three years, when he started a small place at Alhambra, Ill. In the Spring of 1892 he removed to Edwardsville, where he started the present establishment with 3000ft. of glass. This range has now increased to 60,000 ft. of glass and the firm is known as the J. F. Ammann Co. Mr. Ammann is the president and treasurer; LeRoy Smith is vice-president and E. H. Klein is secretary.

Mr. Ammann has held many important offices in trade organizations, testifying to the esteem in which he is held by the members of the trade. He has served two terms as president of the St. Louis Florists' Club, is a life member of the S. A. F., past director and ex-president of the American Carnation Society; was the first president of the Illinois State Florists' Ass'n and has been secretary of that organization for the past ten years. He is also vice-president of the Florists' Hail Ass'n. In his home town his services have also been highly valued; he has held many local positions of honor, but has never accepted a place that paid a salary. He is now chairman of the local Draft Board and will continue to serve until "the world is safe for democracy." In this connection it is interesting to note that Mr. Ammann's mother who is now 80 years old, was born in Baden, Germany, but is 100 per cent American. His father was born in Switzerland.

Mr. Ammann is president of the Madison Co. Sunday School Ass'n; also of the Brotherhood Bible Class of the First Presbyterian Church. He was a member of the German Evangelical Church for more than 25 years but when they refused to worship God in any other language than German he left the church and became a Presbyterian. However, he is a firm believer in church union and a follower of Christ rather than a sectarian. As he puts it he is "first a Christian; then a Presbyterian: first an American; then a Republican."

Mr. Ammann has had a most happy home life. In October, 1890 he married Miss Bertha Gehrig; there are three daughters: Alma, Edna and Angeline, the first two being married.

Report of the Publicity Committee

Submitted by HENRY PENN, Chairman

We give herewith a full summary of Mr. Penn's report, covering the first half of the National Advertising Campaign, which came to a close in June, much of which has previously been mentioned in our columns:

The campaign began in February, 1918 with a full page in the Saturday Evening Post. The results were extremely gratifying. The next most notable advertisement was the color page in the Metropolitan Magazine for July. Although there was doubt expressed as to the advisability of using this magazine, the replies received as a result of the advertisement showed that no mistake had been made in selecting it for the campaign's first really inspirational message on the use of flowers.

Like St. Valentine's Day, Mother's Day and Easter showed phenomenal business, florists from all parts of the country reporting record-breaking sales; the results show that "if we pursue our publicity plans consistently, we can have Easter, St. Valentine's Day, Mother's Day and other occasions when flowers should be purchased firmly entrenched in the hearts and minds of the American people."

Besides the advertisements used on these special occasions smaller ones were used in "the Saturday Evening Post, Metropolitan, Literary Digest, Good Housekeeping, Woman's Home Companion, Delineator, Garden Magazine, House and Garden, American Florist, Florists' Review, Horticulture and THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE. Each time we published an insertion in this combined list of publications, we reached 6,000,000 people, and with all the insertions from February to June, we reached over 13,000,000 readers of these publications, impressing upon them in every case the importance of purchasing flowers for birthdays, weddings and other occasions, when ordinarily many people send as gifts or tokens of congratulation or sympathy other gifts when flowers would be more appropriate."

Mr. Penn then calls attention to the fact that it is to be regretted that the florists have not responded as fully as they should to the appeal to support the movement financially. He points out that now is the time to advertise flowers, when a new class of possible flower buyers has arisen among the wage earners. He states that the slogan "Say It with Flowers" has taken hold in great shape and that every man in the trade with whom he has discussed the subject agrees that the S. A. F. publicity campaign has benefited him materially.

Mr. Penn, speaking of the future, says that although the Government has placed certain restrictions on the florist's industry, that does not mean that the florists must go out of business, and that their aim should be to educate the people to understanding that flowers are a necessity and not a luxury. It has been the experience of Canada and England that, although it might be necessary to curtail some lines, no business is "non-essential;" if it is wiped out it is bound to affect even the war industries. Hence he feels that some of the members of the trade have been unduly pessimistic regarding the future and he is confident that the Government will solve the coal problem as it has solved other difficult problems connected with the war.

Mr. Penn aptly remarks: "I would like to see our society show the same spirit as the Washburn-Crosby Co., which in a $10,000 color page on the back of the Saturday Evening Post had the courage to run that famous slogan, 'Eventually—Why not Now?' when they hadn't a barrel of Gold Medal flour to sell the public. This is only one of the many courageous examples that are now appearing in our National press."

He points out that not only should the publicity campaign be carried on for present results but that now is the time to lay the foundation for business after the war, educating the people to the importance of the florists' business with all the money, energy and labor invested in it.

The last two paragraphs of Mr. Penn's report merit quotation in full:

"People's buying habits are changing fast. A few years ago it was only the well-to-do who ever came into a florist's, but now the masses are patronizing us more and more, and if we stick to our publicity persistently, we will have the masses with us solidly, and every branch of our business will experience a still more tremendous growth after the war.

"But we must get in our hard work now while the general public is prosperous, open to conviction and ready to buy more merchandise than the country is able to produce. The production of flowers, and plants of course, is costing much more today, but my belief is that National advertising will create such a demand for flowers that we can adjust our prices to meet the increased cost of production, and decrease in volume, due to Governmental restriction. Let us spend every penny we can possibly raise this Fall in National advertising, so as to keep up the demand for flowers, and build up a prestige for the future which is bound to benefit every member of our society.

Practical Talks to the Management

On the Wisdom of Staying in Business—Preparing for Next Season—The Fallacy of Cutting Out Advertising

By W. CLEAVER HARRY

THE ghost of apprehension, the bugaboo of shortage and the lack of confidence in the future, have led many to think of closing down for the duration of the war. It is not believed that this idea has received serious consideration, even with those who originated it; but from the very suggestion, can you think of anything that would furnish better enemy propaganda? Apprehension is founded on fear. It is purely a mental state. If this condition remained among the pessimistic, no harm would result, but it is liable to spread to others, who, not knowing the subtlety of it, allow themselves to become carriers for falsehood. We are to be congratulated that our trade papers have excluded all news from infected sources.

Shortage is a self-imposed limitation. Conservation is right and sounds a warning against waste, but the continual cry of shortage, especially after means have been taken to meet it, does not benefit matters, but actually hinders a speed-up program. We have resources enough in this country to lick the Hun twice without disturbing things very much, simply a matter of adjustment and reorganization in distribution and use. It must necessarily take a little time to do this and to the end of that time we have arrived.

Shortage is a price booster. For many years the coal operators have known just how much coal to mine so as to keep the price rising. Strikes were a help also, and not unwelcome. What these same operators would have done to the coal situation last Winter in price boosting, on the basis of shortage, if they would have had a free foot, is unthinkable.

What we can appreciate most at this time, however, is, less talk about the shortage of coal for next Winter and more about an increasing supply. Since the fuel administration is in control of the arteries of production and distribution, it is plainly up to them to remove any limitations and the possibility of a shortage, that cannot be, unless they fail in their assignment.

Stick to your business. Surely a business that symbolizes all the realities of life in love and sympathy, joy and inspiration, is a blessing that needs to be kept going full speed ahead. There are going to be some surprises for those who predicted a shrinkage and falling off in the retail florist business. I recall how a year ago I sympathized with the Woolworth Corporation every time I passed a 5 and 10 cent store. I thought to myself, "I wonder how long before your stocks will be shot to pieces? You can never keep the 10 cent values in your goods now!" Nearly a year and a half has passed and in these stores the stocks are even larger and better than formerly, and the values have almost remained stationary. The United States has already done the impossible in those few months and there will be no departure from it. Business, even retail business, will continue to do the seemingly impossible, realizing that there can be no limitations but those we would impose ourselves. "Why limit the army to 5,000,000?" asked the President. Since there is no idea of limitation in our war program, neither can there be any sense of shortage.

Preparing for Next Season

To prepare for next season, doesn't mean buy everything that you think you need, everything you might need, and everything you have ever needed. Don't hoard supplies. Buy what you will consistently need; but don't hoard. There will be no marked scarcity. Some pet articles will be missing, but still more attractive substitutes will be available. It is good business to order ahead. The war will make this a habit. The jobber and the wholesaler in supplies will welcome the change that will keep his plant busy in the dull season and keep it from being rushed in the busy season! My caution about too heavy buying was not without a motive. For instance, a run on the market may inflate the price, under the law of supply and demand. If I buy a year's supply of everything in the month of September, and five thousand other retail florists do the same, it would reverse the seasons for the supply house. Another matter in connection with this, from the retailers' standpoint, is that these bills must be paid and that they will be all due at the same time.

Don't take too much stock in the salesman who wants you to place the whole order now, so that he can save you money because the price goes up twenty per cent, next month. Sometimes this is a fact, but again it is just a means to an end. In war times we expect the price to go higher. If it doesn't we are apt to be disappointed. The ribbon men are especially keen on the price wedge. One of them sold me a lot of a certain pattern last Fall so as to protect me from a 25% raise in Midwinter. Late

Don't Cut on Advertising

Advertising is more needed now than ever before. To stop advertising is an open acknowledgment that the business is non-essential and the product isn't worth it. There are so many things to take the attention, that if the big advertisers were to stop, they would lose in a few months what it has taken years to gain. The war has placed unusual demands on certain advertised articles like fountain pens, cameras, safety razors, etc. The tide is running in for those who were already strong in their line. The public forgets quickly and at this time the tendency to forget and purposely eliminate is so marked, that sentiment is in danger of declining, and a reminder seems necessary even to sending flowers to a funeral.

The florists' business, as an advertised line, is only in its beginning. This alone is sufficient reason why its advertising should continue in war times, although there are four other good reasons for expecting direct returns both in channels among the trade and the retail store. The first reason for keeping up with advertising is that there is plenty of money in the hands of the spenders. They are anxious to find some way to get rid of it and we must not disappoint them by failing to let them know that we are in fine shape. If they don't spend the apportionate sum for joy giving, the fault is ours for being so short-sighted.

The second good reason for spending money on advertising in war times is the fact that we must get better prices. An advertised product always brings a better price. Advertising by creating a demand, fixes prices and substantially aids in reducing the cost of handling.

The third reason is that advertising kept up will serve as nothing else can, as a ratchet to keep a business that is not so heavily intrenched, from slipping. This is a look ahead into that part of the future that is not revealed to us now.

The fourth reason, and a sufficient one for the present continuance of all advertising, is that business is as good as ever all along the line and warrants without question our optimism.

The time has come for managers and executives, both great and small, to come out of the office and do their part in the thinking, that must furnish the force of the future if we are going to get anywhere worthwhile. The manager that confines his work to getting reports from the bookkeeper, answering correspondence and keeping things straight in general, is narrowing down the vision that must make up the ideals of business. Clear the desk of yesterday's experiences and get ready for tomorrow's business.

An Unusual Department Store Floral Department

The illustration on page 300 shows the handsome terrace of the flower department of Gimbel Bros., Department Store, Milwaukee, Wis. This floral department is unusual in that it has never held a cut price sale, the policy being to offer the very best, which cannot be sold cheap. The manager is A. H. McDonald, and the department was opened in a small way on Oct. 7, 1914, the space it occupied at that time being 85 sq. ft.; since then its floor space has been increased to 2400 sq. ft., half of which is occupied by the flower terrace and the remainder used for storage space.

This floral establishment is one of the largest local buyers of fine cut flowers and plants in the Milwaukee market, purchasing as well large quantities of stock from out-of-town markets. The large business done has necessitated the adoption of a special delivery service covering the entire city and suburbs. The floral department is a member of the F. T. D., which is featured by the establishment in every way possible.

SUPPLY HOUSE

66 to 74 E. Randolph St., CHICAGO, ILL.

Middle Atlantic States

Buffalo, N. Y.

The Buffalo market continues rather slow, although somewhat better than the previous week. There is a promise of a good supply of late Asters and a new stock of Carnations and Roses this week. An oversupply of Gladioli is reported. There is no special demand for cut flowers, the activities of the retailers being confined mostly to funeral work.

Having taken on considerable tan and avoirdupois, Emil Brucker of the Kasting Co. has returned from a two weeks' vacation.

William Legg, secretary of the Buffalo Florists' Club, who is enjoying country life at Alexander, Genesee County, N. Y., was an interested visitor at the exhibit of the American Gladiolus Society at the Iroquois Hotel last week. Another visitor was David Lumsden of the Dept of Floriculture at Cornell. Prof. Lumsden was especially enthusiastic over the floral features that will be among the attractions at the coming State fair at Syracuse, N. Y.

John B. Olmsted of Brookline, Mass., landscape architect, has been appointed by the Government as town planner for all industrial projects at Niagara Falls.

Securing their coal supply continues to engage the attention of Buffalo florists. Howard A. Forman, Erie County fuel administrator, has been informed that this city's allotment of anthracite for the year, beginning last April, is to be 750,000 tons. He had asked for about 900,000 tons.

In former days salesmen in Buffalo flower shops looked with indifference on the foreign or so-called shawl trade. If a flower clerk, in a rush, had to take his choice between waiting on an English-speaking woman and one of the foreign class, the latter would invariably receive secondary attention. Now that "labor is king," however, and the so-called foreigners employed in the local steel and munition mills are often earning two and three times more than office or store workers, for instance, it is at last found to be good business policy to give quick, snappy service to "laborers and the like" when they visit Buffalo flower stores. Deprived of the patronage of factory workers, some of the florists would sustain a considerable loss these days.

Trees are very high priced in Buffalo, according to appraisers who are working here for the signal corps of the War Department in connection with the settlement over property included in the new aviation field being opened by the Government in North Elmwood ave., this city. Some owners are asking as high as $25 a tree when making adjustments, say the appraisers. They say that often the trees are small and newly planted and more often than not they are not in a position to be of value in the enhancement of the property for sale as residence sites.

Florists of Lockport and other points in Niagara County, N. Y., will be kept busy supplying flowers for patients in the soldiers' hospital to be opened at Olcott Beach, N. Y. It is reported that this pleasure resort is likely to be converted into a barracks for sick and wounded soldiers. Upward of 1200 cots can be accommodated.

President A. E. Kunderd of the American Gladiolus Society appointed C. R. Hinkle of Lake Shore Drive, St. Joseph, Mich., press agent of the society's exhibit in this city last week. In company with Joseph A. McGuire, Buffalo representative of THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE, Mr. Hinkle, who was also a member of the exhibition committee, visited the local newspaper offices and urged the editors to give plenty of space to the show. The results of his mission were highly satisfactory. Mr. Hinkle, who realizes that humor, like flowers, is a war time necessity, asked the editors to use occasional breezy or popular paragraphs on the show in order to attract the crowds to the exhibit. All complied with the request. Here is a suggestion: Why not appoint Mr. Hinkle editor of the Ninth Story Window column of THE EXCHANGE and rename it The Glad Column. "Glad" would surely signify joyful humor and in a popular way suggest Mr. Hinkle's favorite flower.

Pythopathologists of the eastern section of the United States met in Buffalo recently to discuss means of eradicating plant diseases which are reducing the Nation's food production. Prof. H. H. Whetzel of Cornell University, chairman of the War Emergency Board of the American Plant Pathologists' Society, presided at the sessions. Delegates to the meeting included specialists of a dozen colleges and representatives of the State and Federal Departments of Agriculture.

Several Buffalo florists, who are bachelors as well as true patriots, are already figuring on paper what they will do with their flower shops in case they are called to the Colors by the proposed raising of the draft age to 45 years. They claim that while they have always feared the unerring shafts of the diminutive Cupid, they will be willing to face unswervingly the shots and shells of the Huns.

JOSEPH A. MCGUIRE.

Lancaster, Pa.

The retail trade is still relying on funerals for the bulk of the business, with an occasional small wedding and numerous box orders. Flowers are scarce and not of the best quality which doesn't help matters much.

The growers are all busy planting Carnations. Some have finished and are cutting flowers; others have just commenced and a few are waiting for what they consider better weather.

Elmer Weaver read a paper on the Wintering of bees before the Bee Keepers' Ass'n which was well received, and incidentally it might be added that bee keeping is not a bad side issue for a florist if he is looking for a little added income.

Mrs. Albert M. Herr has beaten the Government in a drive for money, from the point of view of the expense of collecting. In a recent drive for $10,000,000 for the Y. W. C. A. she engineered the collecting of it at a total cost of less than $8, and it came in in small amounts at that, on account of the numerous calls being made nowadays.

Arthur Niessen spent several days among the growers of this section instilling new hope and increased ambition into them, although as a class we have got what you call the "morale" up here all right.

Lancaster Co. Florists' Association

Fraternal feeling is on the increase among the members; there were only a few who used the street cars for the August meeting—and I'll predict there will be none for the September meeting—the yard of President Elmer Weaver being filled with automobiles and the house and porch with florists and their wives. A short trip of inspection was made before the meeting and at President Weaver's we found the last of an immense crop of Tomatoes ripening in the houses; vines 8ft. high and Tomato fruit by the ton was the record for these houses which are now being cleaned out for Sweet Peas and Carnations. The Sweet Peas are in paper pots and it will only be a matter of replanting them to have the house ready at the usual time with the crop of flowers. Someone made the remark that you have to hand it to the Weavers for experimenting and planning to get the most out of their houses.

Charles M. Weaver, a brother of Elmer, and a neighbor on the same farm, is primarily a Sweet Pea grower, but right now has his immense Sweet Pea houses filled with Asters -thousands of them— and in the pink of condition, not a brown leaf, and no red spiders nor Aster bugs to mar their beauty. One house is filled with pompon Chrysanthemums, almost enough to supply the demands of one large city, and like everything on this place, they are just right. There are Sweet Peas waiting for the Asters to come out to take their place. On the farm there are acres and acres of Corn and Tobacco, and incidentally Chas. M. has about three acres of Gladioli as an experiment, and this acreage will no doubt be increased another season. The Tobacco growing is done by the men on the place and helps to keep them contented with their positions, as a good deal of the work is done after hours and the men get half the proceeds, which adds quite a sum to their year's income.

The meeting proper was held on the porch and without a set program. The first matter taken up for discussion was an appliance to feed air into the fire box of return tubular boilers and to get greater efficiency out of the coal. A number of appliances were named but there seemed to be none in use by any of the members.

Arthur Niessen, who had motored up to the county for his quadrennial visit, was with us and gave a very interesting talk, in which he complimented us on sticking together so closely in these trying times, and said that he considered the man who deserted his post right now in the light of a slacker. He said that he considered the fuel ruling a blessing in disguise, as with curtailed help we are better off with some houses closed down. He also said that we should be very grateful to the help that sticks to us when higher salaries can be secured elsewhere, and wound up with a very optimistic picture of our future.

M. J. Brinton, who is on one of the draft boards, gave some very good pointers as to where both we and our employees will stand with the change of the age limit for draftees. The evening was both enjoyable and educational. The next meeting will be held at the home of Willis B. Girvin in Leola.

The recently formed Ladies' Auxiliary held a meeting same time and place, with a good big attendance, and formulated plans for the Winter work. After the meeting a social hour was spent, and the line up of machines for Lancaster looked like an automobile parade going in the Lincoln Highway about 10:30 p.m.

Destructive Fire

About 3 a.m., on Aug. 17, the boiler house and adjoining greenhouses at the Keystone Nurseries, owned by B. F. Barr & Co., were destroyed by fire. The boiler house was burned to the ground. It contained a considerable quantity of supplies, pipe cutting and threading tools, and all the side sash from one of his big houses, all of which is a total loss.

The big Carnation house adjoining was burned in for about 25ft., but the wind fortunately blowing away from this house the Carnations, which have just started nicely, were ruined only in that portion that was burned. The Sweet Pea house suffered about the same amount of damage, and a wide driveway between the boiler house and the remainder of the place saved all but the closest greenhouse, which was a total wreck. All the coal for the season was in and piled around this house. This caught fire, but with the assistance of two fire companies it was quickly drenched and the loss here is not heavy.

Mr. Barr, who lives about two miles out on his farm, came in but too late to do anything and considers himself lucky that the loss was not worse. There seems to be no known reason for the fire nor how it originated.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

Scarcity of Good Stock

Good flowers have been scarce for the past week, especially Roses and Asters. The early crop of Asters is about over and the late crop is not coming in in sufficient quantity to meet the demand; heavy cuts are expected very soon. There is a good demand for Roses. Am. Beauty are the only long stemmed Roses at present and are selling much better. There are plenty of Gladioli on the market; in fact, more than can be handled to advantage. There is no real fancy stock, due to the dry weather; the later cuts should be good as there has been plenty of rain the past week. Good Lilies are in demand but the quantity is limited. Business is still very good, considering the hot weather. Some stores report the month of July much better than July of last year. There are plenty of greens on the market, and a fair demand for them.

The second annual outing of this association was held on Aug. 6. Automobiles conveyed the members to Camp Mills, where members and friends were visited, and from thence the party toured to Whitestone Landing, L. I. Here a splendid shore dinner was partaken of. A baseball game between single and married members, tug of war, running matches and other sports made the afternoon pass most agreeably. In the baseball game honors were carried off by the single men, scoring 18 to 8. Prizes were awarded to the winners in the various games.

The officers of this association consist of Geo. J. Wackenhut, president; Reinbold Muller, vice-president; John F. Fieber, financial secretary; Henry Arzberger, corresponding secretary; John T. Linneman, treasurer; Anthony Ambrein, sergeant-at-arms.

The Market

Aug. 20.—The general demand for flowers this week up to today (Tuesday) is small. The arrivals are only seasonably large.

American Beauty and hybrid tea Roses are in more than sufficient supply to meet the limited daily demand. Special Am. Beauty Roses are realizing from 6c. to 30c. each, the higher price being exceptional and only in the case of choicest selections in small sales. Top grade hybrid teas are selling in general at from 3c. to 8c. each, though a few fine Keys are bringing special Beauty prices. Bottom grade blooms are going at from 25c. to $1 per 100.

There are a few poor Carnations arriving which move slowly at about 50c. per 100.

Cattleya orchids are extremely scarce, and the present demand, though small, absorbs the supply at prices ranging from 60c. to $1 each in general, with rumors of sales at $1.50. There is a plentiful supply of white and pink Lilies, both moving slowly, the former at $5 to $6 per 100 and the latter at $1 to $3. The moderate supply of Lily of the Valley is not in large demand at $3 to $6 per 100.

Asters are now the leading Summer flower, the quality of which shows much improvement. They are meeting with a moderate demand at about $1 to $3 per 100 for medium to highest quality. Gladioli, though not so numerous are in more than sufficient supply and are realizing from $1 to $2 per 100. Some Dahlias are seen, but these find few buyers; also a few Golden Glow 'Mums. Besides these there is the usual line of miscellaneous Summer flowers, the most attractive of which is Hydrangea paniculata. Greens are in very moderate demand.

The Convention Party

The party from New York and the vicinity traveling to St. Louis, Mo., to attend the S. A. F. convention left this city on Sunday at 2:04 p.m., from the Pennsylvania Central Station at 33d st. and Seventh ave., on the Keystone Express. The following made up the party: Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Traendly, Mr. and Mrs. Julius Roehrs, A. L. Miller, John G. Esler, A. T. De La Mare and Joseph Manda. Wm. F. Gude was expected to join the New York party at Harrisburg, Pa. J. C. Vaughan, who expected to travel with the party and had purchased a ticket for that purpose, was kept in New York by important business matters.

In a postal card to the New York representative of THE EXCHANGE Philip F. Kessler, 55 W. 26th st., who is resting a few weeks at his bungalow at Fulton Fourth Lake in the Adirondacks, says: "While you are sweltering in the city, we are having it a little better but not as cool as it usually is in the mountains." This shows us that even in the "North Woods" of this State along the Fulton chain of lakes the recent high temperature that we had in this city was to some extent experienced.

James Rutig, manager for J. S. Fenrich, 51 W. 28th st., is again on duty at the store, having recently returned from a seven weeks' vacation at Catskill, N. Y., where he stopped at the Grand View.

Some exceptionally fine blooms of the Rose Francis Scott Key were noted this week at Traendly & Schencks, 436 Sixth ave. This appears to be an excellent Summer Rose.

The Kervan Co., 119 W. 28th st., has greatly improved the appearance of its store front, and counter facilities.

H. E. Froment, 148 W. 28th st., is on his annual vacation, which he is spending at various points of interest.

When the many friends of Peter Gerlaird in the Coogan Building noted recently how fast he was aging and what a serious look he constantly carried, they at first thought this was attributable to the war, and to the dull condition of the florist business in general, but later they found out that his only daughter, Mrs. George M. Cohan, has a baby boy, and that the change in Peter's appearance was because, though young, he now has the responsibility of being a grandfather.

Secaucus Exotic Nursery, Secaucus, N. J.

It has always been a pleasure in past years to visit the Secaucus Exotic Nursery; its range of 28 greenhouses has been found upon each visit replete with good stock, and the greenhouses and the plants in these, and the auxiliary buildings and the surrounding grounds so well kept. On our visit in Aug. 16 this year, the establishment and its contents looked to us better, if possible, than in previous years.

The secret of it all, it seems to us, is this: Marius Mutillod, the proprietor, is a man in whom there is combined indefatigable industry, sound business judgment and also artistic taste in a marked degree.

The specialty of the Secaucus Exotic Nursery is ornamental foliage plants, namely, palms, Dracænas, Crotons, Pandanus, Ficus and ferns.

The stock of "home grown" palms is especially large and of exceptionally fine quality. Of these Kentias alone occupy 14 houses. It has taken six years to grow these palms, which are in all sizes, and embrace both K. Belmoreana and the K. Forsteriana. In going through the 14 houses we noted particularly a block of 1000 finished specimens of "combination" plants of Kentia Belmoreana in 12in. to 14in. tubs. Equally good were the very large plants of Kentia Forsteriana occupying several houses. The thousands of Kentias in 4in. to 5in. pots too were clean and thrifty.

Mr Mutillod has a very large stock of Phœnix Canariensis and P. Roebelenii, Areca lutescens, Latania borbonica and Cocos Weddelliana. An interesting feature is 8000 of the Cocos seeds just germinating in small pots.

A large number of well-grown Dracænas in several sizes was noted embracing such well-known varieties as D. Massangeana, Lindeni, Lord Wolseley, terminalis, Godseffiana and the comparatively new Kelleriana.

The well colored Crotons, filling several houses, among these many of the popular variety, Reedii, and of that unique variety, punctata, are of themselves well worth a visit to the nursery.

Our attention was especially attracted to the many large specimen plants of Pandanus utilis and several blocks of well colored P. Veitchii and also well-grown plants of Ficus Pandurata and utilis.

The several varieties of Boston ferns and of Cibotium Schiedei ferns occupy a number of houses and some attention is given to Aralias, Diffenbachias and Otaheite Oranges.

In the field just outside the greenhouses there is a block of 2000 Ficus elastica, both single and branched plants, in plunged pots, the best specimens we have ever seen.

Other plants noted in the field were 12,000 English Ivies, Azaleas, Hydrangeas, Roses, etc.

Mr. Mutillod says the secret of his success is that he always keeps every foot of space in his greenhouses occupied, and that he pushes the growth of his plants in Summer.

During our visit to this nursery we had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Mutillod's new foreman, E. H. Mouquin, formerly for five years with the Knight & Struck Co.

Common Labor Requirements

The Employment Service of the Department of Labor has sent out blanks to plants engaged in war production asking for information concerning their common labor requirements. The first 600 war plants to send in requests to the Employment Service asked for 25,000 common laborers now and 40,000 during August and September. The 25,000 wanted now represents a shortage. Every concern in the country engaged in war work has been instructed to telegraph its immediate needs and those of the next two months to the national office of the Employment Service in Washington.

The Market

Aug. 20.—Business at the wholesale flower market has been fairly good during the past week. There isn't much noticeable increase in the damand for flowers but there is quite a shortage of all kinds. The weather peculiarities are accountable for this situation and the market is cleaned up each day; the grower receives fairly good prices for his goods.

The supply of American Beauty Roses is not large but it is quite adequate to fill the meagre demand. The quality is only medium. The supply of hybrid tea Roses is not extremely large; there are just about enough to fill the demand. Prices are a little better and range from 50c. per 100 to $8, although there have been a few small lots which sold as high as 12c.

There is only a very small supply of Carnations and the quality is poor. A few flowers sent in of the new crop, but the stems are quite short. Prices are from 50c. to $1 per 100.

Cattleya orchids are extremely scarce, and those that reach the market are of poor quality.

The supply of Lilium longiflorum has shortened up but there is a plentiful supply of Lilium auratum, which is moving slowly. Little Lily of the Valley is offered and it has only a moderate call.

The supply of Asters has shortened up and prices have stiffened.

The Gladiolus is the predominating flower; the supply is so large that they are hard to clean up. Outdoor Summer flowers are not plentiful, and there is little call for them.

News Notes

The Robert George White medal for the year 1918 has been awarded by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society to Dr W. Van Fleet This distinguished honor has been bestowed on Dr. Van Fleet's work in plant hybridization. His first work was with Gladioli, then Roses then many other useful plants.

On Friday, the 16th of August, Mr. and Mrs. B. Hammond Tracy of Wenham, Mass., received a host of their friends on the occasion of the 225th anniversary of their marriage.

Miss Beatrice Wishinsky, head bookkeeper for Henry M. Robinson & Co., was married on Thursday, Aug. 22.

John Barr of Natick is first in the market with Carnation flowers from young plants of this year.

The William W. Edgar Co., of Waverley, has several houses devoted to Cyclamen and they are looking well. Several houses are also devoted to Begonias and the plants never looked better. The stock of plants grown for the holidays will be as large and as well grown as they have been in the past, in spite of the labor question that had to be contended with.

The Janiten and Wallrath Co. of Waltham are very successful growers of Cyclamen. They have a large lot of exceptionally well-grown plants in various sizes. They are cutting a fine crop of Gladioli at this time.

The Henry M. Robinson Co. reports very good business for August. Shipping business has been very good. They are well supplied with all kinds of seasonable flowers.

The next exhibition at Horticultural Hall will consist of the products of children's gardens, on Aug. 31 and Sept. 1. The Dahlia, fruit and vegetable exhibition will be held on Sept. 14 and 15.

City Water Injurious to Plant Life

Under this head there appeared in THE EXCHANGE of Aug. 17, p. 259, an inquiry from a subscriber, asking for information on this point. A reply has been received from P. T. Barnes, assistant zoologist, Penn. Dept. of Agri., Harrisburg, Pa., who says that a well-known florist of Pittsburgh, with greenhouses in the suburbs, had a great deal of trouble with stock when using city water. Becoming convinced that it was the water that was causing the trouble, the firm put down a well and installed an electrically driven pump, which supplied them with an abundance of good water. They had no further trouble.

Cool Weather Improves Market

Aug. 19.—A few cool days the end of the week made market conditions slightly better. The effects of the recent extreme heat, however, still prevail as is shown in the poor condition of stock. Good stock is scarce, especially in Roses. There is difficulty in getting enough of shipping quality to meet the output of the city demand. There is much poor stock that there is little demand for, but with more good stock the market would be well up to the average conditions for the month. There are always some poor days on the market, as well as good ones. One wholesaler who has watched the market for many years says Mondays, Fridays and Saturdays are always the best days; the beginning and end of the week are better than the middle. Sunday buying is now but a memory on the market; Sunday closing has come to stay and there are some wondering why they did not get to it several years ago.

The supply of Roses is short, especially in good grades, with no particular over supply of the lesser grades, as all stock moves. There are not many Am. Beauty Roses; only two of the wholesale houses are handling them at present. The supply of Gladioli is the most prominent feature on the market. They are to be had in large quantities and in all the leading commercial varieties as well; the price ranges from $2 to $5 per 100.

Asters are to be had in large quantities but the great bulk of the stock is of poor quality. The recent hot weather has played havoc with the crops in many sections that supply this market. Good Asters are eagerly sought for and wherever they are to be had bring good prices; $4 per 100 is readily paid for good stock. In other grades the price ranges from $1 to $3 per 100.

The supply of Easter Lilies has shortened, and Valley is again on the scarce side.

Orchids are short in supply, the principal offering being Cattleyas; some stock has sold as high as $10 per doz. recently.

The supply of all miscellaneous outdoor stock has shortened considerably and what there is has but little value. There are many wild flowers to be seen on the market; quite noticeable is Spiræa venusta, a light pink, from the meadows and fields of Northern Indiana.

Auratum Lilies are becoming more plentiful, and the fancy Water Lilies continue in prominence. There is enough of all green goods, with the exception of fancy ferns, of which there is an occasional shortage some days on account of the tardiness of the shipments coming in from the woods.

News of the Week

Herman A. Schultz, 1018 Madison st., has in the course of erection a handsome conservatory and display house adjoining his store. The house is 25ft. x 47ft., iron frame, of Ickes-Braun Co. material, with concrete side walls and basement. Heat will be furnished from the boiler in the basement of the store and residence which adjoins and there will be an entrance to the display house from the store. In this way Mr. Schultz can do his own firing without going outside. The present range of glass in the rear of the store will be closed down as soon as cold weather arrives, but will be opened again in Spring.

GLADIOLUS. Our stock includes many of the new introductions and all of the best commercial varieties. We believe that the quality of our Gladiolus is better than we have had for several years.

LILIES. There is nothing on the market that offers better value. If you do any business at all during the summer months you ought to carry Lilies in stock all the time.

LILIUM RUBRUM. We offer them in quantity, both long and short stems. The short LILIES are particularly desirable for design work. You will notice they are inexpensive. $4 00 to $5.00 per 100.

ASTERS. There are a few ASTERS coming in that are exceptional as far as quality is concerned, but most of them grade as Good and Medium. We will have plenty of ASTERS until the end of the season.

than last to root Poinsettia cuttings. Up to the recent warm wave the nights were too cold, and the intense heat of the past 10 days has been just as bad. It has been a hard season to manage pot grown stock. Extremes of temperature, scarcity of help and the high cost of all material are difficulties the growers have to meet this year. In pot grown Chrysanthemum plants, Cyclamens, Poinsettias and Primulas Mr. Oechslin has an excellent stock and he believes the coming Fall and Winter season will be the best on record, as there will not be nearly as much stock to handle, and the cash returns will, in all probability, approximate those of past seasons when large and widely diversified stocks of imported plants were obtainable.

Allie Zech and Matt Mann of Zech & Mann, left Thursday by auto for the trip to the convention at St. Louis. They intend to make the trip in three days' travel, resting one night each at Joliet and Springfield.

That portion of West Quincy st. fronting the greenhouses of Frank Oechslin is being excavated preparatory to the laying of a new concrete street that will extend for several blocks beyond, which will be a substantial improvement to all the property within these blocks. The Oechslin greenhouses are all filled with well-grown plant stock. It would look as if the embargo on all import stock makes but little difference here. American grown stock will be their slogan this season. Pot grown Chrysanthemum plants in commercial sizes are a prominent feature; Poinsettias are grown in large quantities. All Cyclamens are grown at the recently acquired range on Harlem ave. and are a handsome lot. A large stock of Dracænas is being worked up and the old Begonia Rex has been selected as a plant worthy of more prominence in the trade. It is so old that to many recent devotees of plant life it will be new. A large stock will be worked up for another season.

Milford Berg, who opened the Columbus Park Flower Shop at 5920 Madison st., about a year ago, has enlisted in the Marines and has received notice to report for duty immediately. He will close the shop. His brother on Chicago ave., who is also a florist, has taken all stock on hand, and the fixtures will be stored.

John Zeeh, who styles himself the Madison st. florist, has a very attractive place in Oak Park. His son Walter, who has been at Camp Merritt, N. J., for the past three months writes that he expects to sail for the front almost any day.

C. Frauenfelder, 4323 W. Madison st., is spending his vacation in Michigan. Miss Edna Frauenfelder is devoting the entire week to the collection of funds for the Red Cross in her section of the city.

Gus Martial and Miss Marie Groth left for St. Louis Saturday, where they go to arrange the extensive exhibit of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., at the convention.

La Porte, Ind.

The Ove Gnatt Co., formerly of Hammond, Ind., has moved its large manufacturing establishment to this city. Its present quarters give better facilities for the work the company does in its special lines of manufacturing and preserving material for decorative purposes. The building in which the company is located occupies an entire city square. It is a substantial brick structure, four stories high, and comprises in all about 60,000 sq. ft. of floor space. The building was formerly the property of the La Porte Carriage Co., which the wonderful onslaught of the automobile industry has practically put out of business.

The specialty of the company is the dyeing and preservation of American Oak sprays, Magnolia leaves and Lycopodium or Princess Pine. In import stock Cycas leaves and Ruscus are leading specialties. The company was fortunate enough to have a large stock of this material on hand before the delay and difficulties of ocean freight assumed their present proportions. The lower floor is used in the dyeing and preservation of all stock; large vats and drying rooms have been installed here by Ove Gnatt, who has had a lifetime's experience in this line of work. He first learned the business under his father's tuition in Gothenburg, Sweden, and developed to a still greater efficiency under the environments of American ideas and institutions.

The basket factory is on the second floor, in which about 40 basket makers are employed, many of them women from the schools of technology, who show a wonderful proficiency in the many lines of arts and crafts required in the various lines of production at this establishment. The third floor is given over to the manufacturing of artificial flowers and plants, mostly women being employed. The top floor is the sales and display department. In all there are about 100 people employed. H. G. McLelland, who for several years past has been associated with the company, has charge of the office force and sales department. The company will have an exhibit of their products at the St. Louis convention.

Improvement

Aug. 20.—The market shows a slight improvement due to improved weather conditions and stock is arriving in better shape. Asters are coming in of improved quality, both from local and New York fields. Some fine indoor stock is also noted. These are taken readily. Gladioli also show improvement and are moving better. Roses show improvement in the longer grasses, shorts are still much too plentiful. Easter Lilies clean up daily with good returns. This week has opened up with an encouraging demand, both from local and out of town standpoint. The usual miscellaneous outdoor flowers are in free supply.

Notes

Winfield Scott Harry is seriously ill at his home in Conshohocken. Mr. Harry will be rememberd as one of the old members of the Florists' Club; he has been a member since its inception. Mr. Harry was engaged in the florists' business, with a store and greenhouses in Conshohocken until about four years ago when he disposed of the property. His son W. Cleaver Harry contributes some very clever articles to THE EXCHANGE.

S. S. Pennock and family have gone to the Adirondacks for the balance of the Summer.

Robert Kift is attending the convention at St. Louis.

The Leo Niessen Co. is receiving excellent Asters from New York State and fine local indoor grown stock.

The Henry F. Michell Co. is featuring a clever window display of artificial young Strawberry plants. They almost resemble the real article.

Frederick Hahman of Harrowgate Lane is dismantling his greenhouses and will retire from the florist's business to become a coal operator. Mr. Hahman has an interest together with his brothers in coal mines at Altoona and following the disposition of his greenhouses will reside there. Mr. Hahman has been a factor in the florist's business in this city for years and has a place of considerable size, which had been devoted to the growing of cut flowers and pot plants. Mr. Hahman will be missed; he was an active member of the Florist's Club, a charter member and an ex-officer and one who always took an active interest in its welfare. We feel that the well wishes of the club and the trade in general are extended to Mr. Hahman in his new undertaking.

Samuel F. Lilley is spending his vacation at Wildwood, N. J. enjoying the fishing.

J. Wm. Colflesh, Jr. has returned to 53d & Woodland av., after a short sojourn at Hog Island.

The S. S. Pennock Co. is showing high grade Roses for this time of the year, in Hadley, Russell and Sunburst.

Chas. Henry Fox is spending the Summer at Ocean City.

James Heacock and Theodore Schober accompanied the Heacock's exhibit to the convention at St. Louis.

Paul Berkowitz is making record catches of fish off the Jersey shore.

Chas. E. Meehan is receiving splendid Asters in variety.

J. Otto Thilow has accepted an invitation to speak before the Gardeners' convention at Cleveland in September.

Early Closing

In general conformity to the policy of the leading stores in other lines of business it is expected that the retail flower shops will adopt the early closing movement. There seems scarcely any necessity for keeping a flower shop open in the evening, with the exception of the holiday period. Confine your business hours to the daytime and let your customers know your hours.

These committees worked faithfully and were responsible for the very enjoyable feeling which prevailed.

Florists' Club Meeting

The regular meeting of the club was held on Monday, Aug. 12, with a good attendance. On the tables were some excellent Dahlia blooms which Alex. Lowe had been growing in Manito Park. The varieties were Hi Gill, La Conner, Geisha, War, Yellow King, Attraction and Columbia.

Committees were appointed for handling local advertising for the season. The committee on State license for florists was also continued, with a view to having action taken to amend the State horticultural law to repeal said license at next meeting of the legislature.

Florists! Why Worry About Coal?

Install in your boiler a

WATER COOLED CULM BURNING GRATE

and burn the waste product of your coal yards, which can be bought no doubt for a very low price and will give you better results than you have ever obtained with other grades of cheap fuels.

No doubt, in your vicinity, there are big piles of coal screenings, which in most places are either used on their roads or taken to the dump.

GET BUSY. The Fuel Administrator will not stop you burning a WASTE PRODUCT. If interested, write and let us tell you what others are doing.

The right hand house is 11 feet wide by 32 long. The other, 18 feet wide by 32 long.

Not Our Opinion, But A Big Builder's

ONE morning, along the middle of last Winter, I drifted into the dining-room of Hotel Statler, and bumped into an old business acquaintance, who is the president of a concern conducting large building operations. Knowing my connection with the greenhouse phase of building, he expressed a desire to see some of the Cleveland houses put up by the various greenhouse concerns.

Happily, I had my little red book along, containing a full listing of them.

So we hired a gasoline buggy and set out for the day.

This one of L. H. Treadway was the last one we saw.

He looked it over point by point, constantly asking questions of Robert Poole, the gardener.

Finally, he turned to me and said: "Well, I don't know who built this house, but whoever did, knew what they were about. It strikes me as the best piece of workmanship we have seen today."

If I were at liberty to tell you his name, you would at once appreciate the 100 per cent value of his comment. But when he found out it was a Hitchings house, he made me promise not to use his name in any advertisement.

But what we can do, is give you full particulars of the house and what one like it would cost.

You know we go anywhere for business. Or to talk business.

ORDER AT ONCE GROW FOR VICTORY

WINTER-FLOWERING

Spencer Sweet Peas

NOW READY FOR DELIVERY

TO BLOOM FOR THANKSGIVING AND UNTIL MARCH, sow the seed in September in sand using 2 seeds in a 2-inch pot. After growth is advanced a few inches transplant to permanent positions about three inches apart.

All strains of Winter-flowering Sweet Peas contain "rogues" both as to color and the Winter flowering characteristic. The Australian varieties are almost perfectly "fixed" in both respects and are better than the American sorts. Any late bloomers can be readily distinguished as they commence to branch an inch or two above the surface of the soil, whereas the Winter-flowering plants produce a straight vine and more pointed foliage, making no lateral growth until 15 to 18 inches above the surface of the soil. The late bloomers should be eliminated as soon as they can be distinguished.

Australian Winter-Flowering Spencer Sweet Peas (We advise every florist to try a few)

FINAL REPORT 34th ANNUAL CONVENTION

Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists

SAINT LOUIS, AUGUST 20, 21, 22

Wednesday Morning Session, Aug. 21

he first business was the nomination of officers, of ch we have already made a record in our issue of Au. 24, page 296.

his was followed by an address on National Credits a Collections, delivered by F. S. Webb of Chicago.

National Credits and Collections

he question of credits and the best method to be used n extending of cre lit is a subject, so deep, so broad, of such st magnitude, has so many sidelights, byways and pitfalls, t the credit man of today who can successfully guide his hse through the shoals and narrows out into the deep, en waters or final end of a successful business year, is nothing sht of a very shrewd and successful business man.

t is credit, stability, reliability, worth, both financial and ral, that establishes a basis, a foundation, upon and by means ovhich the commercial world has its being and is able to tnsact its business and, I may say to you that in this partic- ur line of business, the moral worth of a man is to be considered ny times more than even his financial strength.

n commercial life every retailer, wholesaler and manu- fturer, in fact every one engaged in commercial industries fi some particular product, either machinery, system used, oay of doing things, that they try to avoid and keep away fm. But every institution, the manufacturer, producer ofaw material, the wholesaler and the retailer, large or small, nt and does use some form of credit system, some system oform of reasoning by which that institution concludes th it is or is not going to extend credit. With some it is sem, with others it is instinct, others guess, others use olantiquated systems of extending credit the principal re- sts of which are to keep collection agencies and attorneys sblied with business; but credits, as I see them, and as I a handling them, are a cold-blooded business proposition, bsd on dollars and cents and on the actual performances oihe men seeking credit—more than financial worth, be- cse many and many a time—in fact it is almost the rule - wind the small retailer gives us a squarer deal and pays his bk more promptly than he who is given a rating of $3000 to $5000, and $5000 to $10,000, by so-called commercial rng agencies.

redits are extended wisely or unwisely according to the vwpoint of the credit manager, and his viewpoint is broadened onarrowed in accordance with the scope and thoroughness -is investigations, which results in a knowledge or lack ofhe same, covering existing conditions. Ofttimes a whole- se or manufacturing establishment may sustain only a very sll percentage of loss during the year, but this does not aays signify that it is the result of good credit management; itdicates, however, that it is the result of good credit or gd collection management, but past experience has demon- sted beyond question that often mercantile institutions wh a thorough, uptodate credit department, and good credit nager, sustain heavy losses, because of their lack of proper mhods in handling their collections, and ofttimes a mercan- tl institution with a good collection department sustain hvy losses because of the poor management in their credit dartment. Cooperation, then, between these two depart- mts seems to be an absolute necessity for the successful hdling of the financial end of any institution.

uppose a retailer whom you casually know was to walk into o of your wholesale houses, or go to one of your prominent gwers and ask you for a loan of a thousand dollars actual ch, why, you would immediately demand such protection fr this money, and such security as would, without question ire the return of that money; yet at the same time, that se grower or that same credit manager will or does tst that same individual, copartnership or corporation wh more than twice that amount of stock without exacting t same protection and the same assurance that payment for th merchandise will be forthcoming when it is due. Why is th? Is it because the profits of the institution are so large tt the credit department is willing to take a gamble on fen hundred or two thousand dollars worth of merchandise, wch perhaps actually costs them one thousand dollars in ch cash, while at the same time they would be unwill- i to take the gamble in loaning the same individual c parties one thousand dollars in cash? Is the oppor- tlity of making a good profit so alluring that the hand- l of the credit department becomes more of a gamble tn of action based upon cold facts? Or, is it possible tt the viewpoint of the credit manager or the pro- tetor is so limited in scope that he is willing to sell his h's merchandise upon the say-so of other wholesale houses, wo have already been stuck and who are willing to see him stck in order that they may receive some percentage c payment upon their claim? Does that credit manager or pro- fetor go into the financial responsibility of the prospective c tomer, who wants $1500 or $2000 worth of merchandise with that thoroughness which he would employ if he himself was loaning that same individual or institution $1000 in cash? In other words, is he willing to take more of a gamble upon the firm's merchandise than he would be willing to take on either his own or his firm's money? Past experience leads us to say that he is willing to gamble on the firm's merchandise in nine times out of ten where he will not even consider loaning the money. But, there is also another point to be considered—the only other conclusion that can be reached— which is that it may be a case of selling that stock or sending it to the dump. Which brings up anew the question of product control, which means market and price control and the dumping of that stock rather than taking the chance of sending it out on a risky credit to obtain something for nothing.

A retailer is either entitled to credit or he is not entitled to credit, and he is entitled to a specific amount on stated terms or entitled to nothing, and the amount to which he is entitled and the terms which should be given if rightly fixed, will be based upon the method employed in making purchases and payments during a specified period, the only exception being the new man in business, and the amount of credit extended to a prospective or present customer must be based upon actual performances with all of whom he buys and not on one individual experience, and this should be considered and coupled with a statement of his assets and liabilities, which statement should show his gross purchases, his gross expenses, his gross sales, and his method of payments to the various houses with whom he deals, and the exemption laws of the state in which he does business should be considered.

The amount of credit to which a retailer is entitled, varies according to the number of credit men who are appealed to for credit, and according to the thoroughness of the investigation.

Day after day we know of credit being extended to people who are not entitled to it, but the conditions under which the credit is extended are so rigid that the man is practically tied hand and foot by the collection department, the attorney or collecting department having provided certain forms of obligation and the bill must be paid.

Where these conditions exist you will find that the credit and collection departments are in constant cooperation with each other and, while one of these two departments may be loosely managed, if the other is well managed the losses sustained during the year are likely to be within the required limit.

The expenses of a properly conducted credit department are sometimes heavy. But, at the same time the expense incurred in the proper extension of credit is more than saved hundreds of times every year and consequently instead of the expense of your credit department being charged up as an expense it really should be an item on the credit side of the ledger. It is a wise pilot who, in the guiding of his ship at sea, takes cognizance and warning from those who have come to grief on the rocks and shoals in the paths which he must follow, and the pilot who would deliberately steer his craft into forbidden waters with full knowledge of the conditions would without question be shot at sea. The experience of those who had preceded him—the loss of their vessels and the loss of many lives is a warning to him in the shape of collective experience placed before him for his guidance.

Our contention is that a credit manager who can through any reliable source whatever obtain the true collective experience of various other wholesale houses in his same line covering the retailer applying for credit should, when that information can be relied upon, pay some attention to the signals and not ruthlessly and recklessly steer his craft out of the beaten path on to the rocks of destruction. We admit however, that all information secured in the manner above suggested should be carefully scanned and the reports from each house should be compared one with the other in order that all personal animus may be eliminated, leaving nothing but cold facts and figures for honest dissection. The comparison of such reports from various sources will go far to place credit managers in position constantly and safely to protect their various institutions from harm and the individual copartnership or corporation that is kept out or driven out of business because their methods will not pass this test, will result in no loss to the trade and will save many thousands of dollars to the wholesaler who would otherwise have to carry them at a loss.

From our point of view and from more than six years of constant experience, we argue that credit must be extended only upon the basis of past and present performances, net worth today is not always a tangible thing for tomorrow, upon which creditors can realize in case of necessity and while credit may be extended after a thorough investigation has been made, but only then upon a basis where a realization of payments or protection is made possible before further indebtedness is created, which to our mind means a maximum limit both as to time and amount, you know and we realize that credit is often given where the financial responsibility is not considered at all and often times the moral worth or risk is of more value than the financial responsibility, and many a retailer whose entire possessions would not bring $300 under the hammer, is today doing business of thousands of dollars every month because of his sense of honor and moral responsibility and his past methods of transacting business and the manner in which he pays his bills.

New accounts are often opened up where the actual cash and assets amount to little or nothing, but where the moral asset is way above par and the past record of the individual is a practical and absolute guarantee of honesty. The moral asset is a tangible asset and unlike cash, fixtures and stock does not shift ownership in a day, for a man whose moral sense of honor prompts him to pay his bills promptly from month to month is likely to continue to do so and even though adverse conditions might overtake him you are reasonably sure of an honest and fair settlement of whatever he may possess, while on the other hand, the man who has no moral sense of honor will get rid of his cash, his fixtures, his stock, and leave you with the empty bag, and our experience has taught us that the credit manager or the institution who follows along the straight and narrow path of granting credit on information made up of the collective experience of various wholesale houses in the same line will have no more need to fear the final results than he will need to fear that the straight and narrow path ever leads to a road-house.

There isn't anything wrong with the florist business, but there is something decidedly and radically wrong with some of the methods employed in the transaction of the business, and this applies to the wholesaler, retailer and the grower. The business as a whole is in fine condition when considered from all points of view, and in my opinion a larger percentage of money spent for presents and remembrances will during the coming year be spent for flowers than ever before. People don't have to have silverware for birthday presents, but they can use flowers. You can't take candy to a funeral, but you can use flowers; you can get along very well without any one of numerous things, at a dinner, but you can't decorate a dining room or table with whiskey. People have been educated to the fact that they must spend more money for everything in every other line, retailers in all other lines have raised their prices, people expect to pay more for flowers, and even at that, when buying the flowers for weddings, funerals, birthday parties, dinner decorations or any one of the hundreds of other purposes for which flowers can be used, they will get more and spend less in proportion, than they would have to pay for anything else that would convey anything like the same sentiment, and the consumer must pay more for flowers and expects to pay more.

Flowers convey the sweetest and purest sentiments that poet and pen were ever able to express. People are educated to paying more for everything else; they will pay more for flowers; all you have to do is to ask it. I have stated that the cut flower business as a whole was all right. It is my firm opinion that it is, true, it is a non-essential industry, so classed by the Government, and this classification implies that every man engaged in the business must study economy, he must try in every way that he can to put his business on a better footing. Everything formerly wasted that can be turned into cash without injury to the business should be so converted. The war has forced every industry to save, and economize, where waste has been the rule in the past. Accounts that have been standing open on your books for a long time, should on your books for a long time, should be put in the shape be put in the shape of judgment notes or trade acceptances, either or both of which will go to your credit in the bank, and by so doing put these accounts in position where they are drawing interest, instead of standing open on your books while you have to go to the bank and pay interest for money. Cost records should be kept, furnishing complete records of production and overhead and all other expenses, and by this system putting your business into such shape that you will be able to go to the bank at any time and furnish your bank such a statement as will show them conclusively that you are conducting your business in a first class up-to-date business way; that you know what your profits and losses are, and that your cost record gives you everything you need, thus enabling you to establish a credit at your bank by which you can take advantage of the trade acceptances you have there and of the judgment notes you have there, thus establishing for yourself the very thing that my office asks all retailers to do for themselves, when they ask you for credit on merchandise they need. Fully 90 per cent. of all the business done in this country is conducted on a credit basis, and when you understand this it will be clear that the field of operation is very extensive. Firms who discount their bills can get lower prices, quicker deliveries and can pick up decided bargains, all of which increase their profits. A business man can make more money by placing himself in position to buy for cash and, regardless of the price, any article, money or merchandise is cheap if you can make profit on it and high if you cannot, and in order to know full well at what price your merchandise can be sold at a profit, and in order to be able to go to your bank and demonstrate that your business is a success and establish your credit when you want money, you must be willing to be measured by the standard by which you expect to measure others and the business, as a whole, and those of you engaged in it, must individually put your business in a shape that during these times you are able to show such conclusive and convincing proof that it is a success that your financial difficulties will have disappeared.

Mr. Webb was tendered a rising vote of thanks for his able and instructive address, followed by the report of the Committee on Credits and Collections

Chairman of committee R. C. Kerr of Houston with C. L. Washburn, Frank X. Stuppy and Fred Lautenschlager as colleagues.

The committee found on investigation that such a bureau as was called for could not be operated by the society itself as so doing would be against the provisions of its national charter. Failure to operate from within the society led to investigation of various commercial agencies and credit rating bureaus, with the result that the committee endorsed that being conducted by F. S. Webb of Chicago, under the title of the Wholesale Florists' Credit Association, having found same to be entirely adequate to the work required, and Mr. Webb himself receiving strong recommendations from men in the trade whom he was already serving. The committee recommended that if its report be accepted, a committee of three be appointed by the president to cooperate with Mr. Webb on matters of policy. Inasmuch as this proposed agreement with Mr. Webb now goes in the hands of a committee, and changes are possible, we think it advisable not to publish Mr. Webb's proposition in full at the present time, alterations being possible. Suffice to say that the maximum rate quoted by Mr. Webb is $100 for subscribers in Chicago, and $75 a year to all outside of that city, with extra charges for special reports. This membership charge is to be gradually reduced until there are 400 subscribers from the S. A. F., when the rate will be made $35 per annum. It must be understood that this price is to be confined solely to members of the association. This alone should assist largely in bringing in several hundred new members.

Wm. F. Gude and other members of the association, C. L. Washburn said, have put the florists on the map so far as the Federal Government is concerned; proper handling of this question of credits will establish their standing in the business community, and once it is known and recognized that the florists' business is in a sound financial condition there will be no trouble about its being classed as non-essential because its members will be in a condition to contribute substantially to the revenues and to the needs of the country in the carrying forward of this war and in the reconstruction period after the war.

The report of the committee was adopted, and later on President Totty will announce the names of the committee of three.

[Other business transacted at the Wednesday morning session was given in our issue of Aug. 24.]

Wednesday Afternoon Session, Aug. 21

The report of the Committee on Publicity, Henry Penn, chairman, was read by Secretary Young and will be found on page 297, issue of August 24.]

At this point ex-President Richard Vincent, Jr., was recognized by the chair and made some pertinent remarks on the general subject of publicity, in which he gently took the florists to task for not practising publicity in their own business. He thought that at its conventions every one in attendance should wear a boutonnière and, in this way, as they circulated about the city, they would be a constant advertisement of the fact that a florists' convention was being held, and would emphasize the fact that the florists' industry was of such importance that it was able to hold large and well attended convention meetings for the transaction of important business. Mr. Vincent further said that if the retail florists would make up and offer boutonnières, making an attractive display thereof, the custom of each gentleman wearing one on his way to and from business would soon develop. There were throughout the country several million prospective wearers, and this one item alone of supplying boutonnières would call for more flowers than the florists could possibly make.

The Publicity Finance Committee

Geo. Asmus, chairman, then read the report of the publicity finance committee, a synopsis of which we gave in our last week's issue, page 295, and for which President Totty congratulated Mr. Asmus for the good work done, which had meant much arduous labor to the committee.

In addition to the report, Mr. Asmus, referring to the fact that some florists were afraid that if publicity were too strongly impressed it would be impossible to supply the demand expressed his belief that advertising should be constantly kept up, in season and out of season and, while $50,000 seemed a good deal of money, it would return for the entire trade more than the expected results in a beneficial way.

Endorsing the suggestion of Mr. Asmus, on motion of Mr. Gude, it was ordered that one-half of the traveling expenses of Secretary Young in advancing publicity, and incidentally in securing so many new members, should be paid out of the general treasury of the association, and placed to the credit of the publicity fund.

In response to the request from the committee for suggestions, J. F. Ammann took the floor and expressed his belief that there was no more opportune time than now to prepare for more business. In a short while we will be preparing ourselves for the reconstruction period, and that means business for every one in this Nation to which they should look ahead for now on the the principle that "in time of war prepare for peace." There would be no let-up in the advertising campaign. He believed in "Spring Drives," with the proviso that he would rather have them made by the Allies than the other fellow, a remark which brought forth laughter and applause. He congratulated the membership upon the fact that local organizations have also taken up publicity work and are doing it now as they never did before. Great credit, he said, was due to the farseeing and able minds in the organization who had conceived and were now carrying out this magnificent work for which the society owed them a debt that it could never repay. They had spent the money of the society, it is true, but they had spent it most judiciously and in a way that the speaker was satisfied would bring a harvest of great returns. He, therefore, moved a hearty and rising vote of thanks to the chairman of the publicity finance committee.

The motion was carried by rising and unanimous vote.

President Totty remarked that it must be a great encouragement to the committee to know that its work was so fully appreciated and it would be a stimulus to continue it with renewed ardor and earnestness in the future, greater even, if possible, than in the past.

National Publicity Campaign for Florists

Report of the Secretary of the Promotion Bureau

At this point Secretary Young read a detailed report of the work of the Promotion Bureau since its inception which, he stated, might be considered as having been fairly launched Jan. 1, 1918. The Florists' Exchange has published from week to week full accounts of the points visited and results achieved by Mr. Young and, all in all, the result of his visits has been most successful. Perhaps the most significant note struck in the campaign was the country wide establishment of the slogan, "Say it with Flowers." For this purpose, signs bearing this slogan have been prepared in the glass and brass form, almost 700 of which have been sold and are on display by florists throughout the country. Another telling result of the work of the Promotion Bureau was in connection with the friendly cooperation of the National League for Woman's Service through its National Flower Distribution Committee. The league has branches in over 700 cities, and through mutual cooperation the members of the S. A. F. have become largely identified with the Red Cross work, giving them a standing in the war activities which otherwise they would hardly have been able to attain. It has as well brought about a most successful publicity endeavor in that the National League for Woman's Service has already distributed broadcast for display in its chapter houses, on motor cars, etc., some 12,000 paper transparencies bearing the slogan "Say it with Flowers."

At a meeting of the publicity finance committee held in New York, March 16 last, the furtherance of the work was discussed at length and the conclusion arrived at that the appeals for money for publicity could be made far more effective, if Secretary Young himself could tour the country and make personal appeals. Accordingly a trip was mapped out which took the secretary to the Pacific Coast and back, resulting in an addition to the subscription list of $5448 annually for four years. [This means over $21,000 secured.] Incidentally some 250 new members were at the same time secured for the S. A. F. (After a short period for recuperation Mr. Young will continue this campaign work through the towns in the Middle Western States.)

Quite an interesting feature of Mr. Young's report was his synopsis of the amount of money contributed to date by each State. This furnished several surprises, the contributions from some being larger than might be thought for, whereas some others, where large returns might well be expected, were not so encouraging.

Robert C. Kerr does some paying business

The report presented an opportunity not to be missed and, at the suggestion of George Asmus, ex-President Kerr was prevailed upon to undertake and renew his efforts for subscriptions which he had so successfully exercised through his great persuasive powers during the 1917 New York convention. As a result the following subscriptions were recorded:

Secretary Young reported a subscription from [illegible] Schlegel of $200, that gentleman, as Mr. Schling [illegible] marked, being a private grower, therefore making [illegible] subscription all the more meritorious.

Albert Pochelon, secretary of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Ass'n, offered the suggestion that a race [illegible] subscription honors be instituted between the different classes of the trade, such as growers, retailers and wholesalers, so that these honors would not be between localities but between classes. Incidentally Mr. Pochelon extended a cordial invitation to everybody to attend the next meeting of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Ass'n, which was expected to be a rousing one and would take place at Cleveland, Ohio, Oct. 8, 9 and 10 next. Mr. Asmus thanked Mr. Pochelon for his suggestion and assured the membership that his committee would receive gratefully suggestions from every quarter looking toward methods of obtaining larger subscriptions to the publicity fund which the committee had labored very arduously to bring up to the $50,000 point by the time the present convention came on but had been unable to realize its full expectations; he asked all members to make renewed efforts upon their return home to obtain subscriptions from others. A number of those present signified their willingness to undertake this work upon their return to their several homes.

Major P. F. O'Keefe, of Boston, Mass., delivered an address on "Publicity," which proved to be of great interest and was listened to most attentively by all present, the major receiving many commendations.

Publicity

Major O'Keefe began his address by some remarks on advertising generally, pointing out that advertising is only the outgrowth of our civilization and represents the desire of the individual to outstrip his competitors. He stated that the advertising poster which is so commonly used now dates back to the time of ancient Rome and even monuments of Egypt are nothing more or less than flowery advertisements of some individual's opinion of himself.

However, the real development of advertising began with the last 50 years of this country's enormous commercial and industrial development. Major O'Keefe pointed out instances in which very large industries owed their development to advertising. He quoted a striking remark from a recent report of a Bradstreet Credit Agency in which it was stated that 84 per cent. of all failures were among non-advertisers. He called attention to the enormous growth in newspapers and periodicals due to the development of advertising in the last 35 years. The number of these publications has grown from 9700 to 23000 with an average circulation of more than 10,000,000,000 copies. In the last 10 years the average circulation per issue has increased over 100,000,000 copies. Forty-five years ago the Saturday Evening Post carried less than one column of advertising in 48 columns of the paper; in a single issue today it carries 325 columns. Harpers Magazine did not carry a line of advertising in 1875, nor in the 25 years preceding; in an issue of the magazine today more than 40 per cent. of its pages will be found devoted to advertising.

It is said that if all the advertisements carried in our ne-

Godfrey Callas

For the retail grower there is no better Calla than the one we know as the Godfrey. It is somewhat smaller than the old favorite but far more free-flowering, and therefore pays better. The flowering plant should now be shifted into 5in. pots; no need to squeeze them into small pots in order to bloom like the others, and if you have small plants coming along, let them have a shift as soon as they become pot bound. If it is intended to grow Calla æthiopica for either Winter or Spring flowering the bulbs should be planted without further delay. Many look forward to a shortage on Callas before the present planting season is over as a considerable number of large growers of Easter Lilies, who have given up hope of obtaining their usual requirements of bulbs, are going into Callas as a substitute. Even the smaller florist, who is used to growing on a few Lilies for Easter, won't make a mistake to grow a few Callas this Winter. For Easter flowering you can plant the bulbs almost any time between now and November; only have them on hand when wanted. If given a temperature of 50 deg., while the plants may make but little growth during the Winter months, they will be just right for the end of April. Plants which have been in flower during the Winter months are not to be depended on to be at their best at as late a date as Easter in 1919. A Calla might be able to take the place of a Lily for Easter but if there are no Lilies, a nice batch of Callas, in 5in. or 6in. pots, good foliage and flowers, will look mighty good and bring in money.

Pansies

For Winter-flowering

Don't let those Pansies intended for indoor culture this Winter suffer for the want of room. The minute the seedlings are large enough to be handled they should be transplanted and not less than 4in. of space allowed between them. Let them have a well manured soil and deeply worked over. Pansies can stand a lot of heat if the roots can get down into the soil. Still time to sow out Pansies for overwintering outdoors; it doesn't hurt even if the plants are small when Winter sets in, as long as you protect them just a little, they will stand it; but don't put the transplanting off any longer than you can help. The plants should have a chance to become established before cold weather sets in.

Mrs. Sanders Marguerites

For Winter-flowering

For Winter-flowering you will find plants out of 4in. pots, or such as have been carried along in pots since Spring, the best. Small plants out of 2½in. planted out now on a bench will do nicely but are apt to grow and keep it up all Winter until Spring before they start to flower. In fact, when Spring comes all Daisies bloom, no matter whether single or double, yellow or white, but to make them pay you want them during Mid-winter and plants with hardened wood seem to be better for that purpose. Do your benching now and allow plenty of space between the plants.

Hollyhocks, Oriental Poppies and Foxglove

It may be that you have neglected or overlooked the sowing out of some of the biennials and perennials this Summer. If anxious to have extra good Hollyhocks, Oriental Poppies or Foxglove for next Spring planting, all three can be sown out now and carried along in a cold house over Winter. Hollyhocks grown in this way will make fine plants in 4in. pots by next April or early May, and if planted out then will flower nicely during July. Both the double as well as the single kinds are desirable but it is well to keep the colors separate. Sow outdoors in a frame when large enough to handle; pot up into 3in., put back into a frame where, if well protected, they can remain until February, especially if crowded for room indoors. After that bring in and let them come along in a 45 deg. house; give a shift by the end of March into 4in. and you will find with such treatment less trouble from rust and disease. Oriental Poppies are best handled in pots while small and if treated similar to the Hollyhocks will make excellent stock by next Spring. Don't overlook to grow some of the salmon pink and pure white kinds; there is call for them and they are beautiful. Foxgloves, to begin with, are not any too hardy, and if you only grow a few hundred plants I think it well to grow them along in a cool house over Winter. By May 1 you can have bushy plants such as will appeal to your customers and make a show at once. It is far easier to sell an extra heavy plant at 25c. each when a patron only wants a few than to obtain 10c. or 15c. for a small one, when all one can notice at the time of purchase is a few roots with a sign of life on top. No doubt but what such stock may be just as well for early planting but it doesn't appear that way to the purchaser.

Single plant of Candytuft, Waller's Giant Hyacinth-flowered

Bouvardias

Bouvardias are not hothouse plants by any means and while you don't want to grow them on too cool in order to make them pay, don't give them a Rose house temperature in order to be good to them. Get all of the outdoor stock under glass now and when once re-established in the benches, let them have plenty ventilation. Air, and keeping the foliage sprayed during hot days, prevent white and green fly from making their homes in the foliage; constant spraying is necessary to keep these pests away. After this date it is not advisable to do much more pinching; if kept up too late the young plants may not flower.

Shipments from Long Distances

With the uncertainty of shipments from long distances reaching you in a reasonable time it may be advisable this Fall to obtain such plants as you intend getting, a little ahead of time. Don't put off any thing; conditions are not very likely to change for the better. The more of our boys going across, the greater the demand on our railroads to handle freight and express shipments for them. This means for us to make the best of it which we are willing to do, and in order to avoid disappointment and at the same time help the Government in avoiding delay in the shipments of necessaries it will be better to obtain now some of the stock in ferns and palms, for instance, which you usually had sent in November and December. It can't be done in every instance but there are items which can be disposed of now. If you can manage it at all get now whatever has to come long distances by rail.

Notes for September

September is a busy month with the florist. It is the month when everything has to be put into shape for Winter. In many localities, during this month, a frost is liable to blacken the Coleus and other tender stock, so whatever is wanted in that line for stock plants should be brought in before being allowed to suffer from a cold spell. All Cannas and Dahlias should be properly labeled before there is a chance of frost; no good gardener will wait for stormy October weather to send the rain through a leaky roof. It's quite a satisfaction to walk through a greenhouse, not of the latest construction, on a rainy day and not get wet, and the plants appreciate it as well. Whether there are going to be Holland bulbs or not, get the flats ready; they will come in handy between now and next Spring. Bulbs or no bulbs, no better month than September to get ready for the soil wanted. During the Winter, get your supply under cover; if there is a chance for you to obtain more coal, by all means get it; if the cellar is full, it will be wiser to pile up outdoors than trust to good luck next January. September is the opening month for the Fall campaign. Let people know about planting perennials this Fall—shrubs and trees. Let them know that you can do anything pertaining to gardening and do it right and reasonably. Don't wait for those few 'Mums to be cut and bring in a couple of dollars, but go after the outside work; there is money in it. A lot of it can be done between now and December, but you must do your part by proper advertising.

Schizanthus

You can have Schizanthus in flower by Christmas by sowing seed at once and shifting the small stock into 4in. by the middle of October at which time they should have the last pinching back. In order to flower early they must be pot bound and kept in a house of about 48 deg. to 50 deg. If kept shifted into larger pots they will keep on growing and won't flower for weeks after Christmas. For plants wanted for early Spring, seed may be sown at any time between October and December. Always bear in mind that the Schizanthus are cold house plants and won't stand for forcing.

Crops to Follow 'Mums

Both the Calendulas and the Snapdragons are fine crops to follow Chrysanthemums, and the retail grower will find them paying crops. Seed of Calendula should be sown now outdoors in a frame, and the plants later transplanted in the frame or in 3in. pots. After the 'Mums are gone they can be benched and will start to flower around Christmas or a little later. The Snapdragons can also be sown now and carried along in pots, or cuttings can be made. Still better 2in. or 2½in. stock purchased now and shifted into 4in. will give quicker results.

Erica translucens

On Long Island these should be lifted and potted by Oct. 1, just before frost. The one year plants from 3½in. pots in May should make plants by Autumn large enough for 5½in. or 6in. pots, with three to five well-developed spike-like growths. Lift with care and pot firmly, and put in a house at 40 deg. to 45 deg. (night temperature). Be careful not to overwater. For the first two weeks they will need shade, and not much air, but after they have started root action a little, give them full sun and plenty of air and by Jan. 1 raise the temperature to 55 deg. to 60 deg.

Translucens, like other hard-wooded Ericas must have some pushing to get the plants in for Easter, especially when the holiday is in March, and I think it is far better to start early and push them gradually than to go to extremes the last two or three weeks, for, although these Ericas will stand heat, especially toward Spring, it is not natural, and they force slowly. The flowers are bright, rosy-pink, tubular, slender, contracted near the end as in most forms of ventricosa, and very free. I feel certain that any plant grower who will devote a little care to Ericas will find them profitable from a commercial standpoint. H. D. D.

European Notes

August has made a most excellent start, and if as seems probable the present weather conditions continue we shall be able to make a lot of leeway in a very short time. All the early Turnip seed has been secured; the coarser later varieties are now nearly ready for harvesting and Rutabaga's are practically safe.

Radish is in a somewhat uncertain state just now as the abundant rains have given plants not too fully dried up a new lease of life. The demand for this article is simply phenomenal at present and prices are almost out of reach.

By the way, some of our scientific food controllers have been advising the allotment holders to cook their over-grown Radishes and use them in the same manner as Turnips. Have any of your readers ever made the experiment? If so, are they still alive and willing to impart their experiences for the benefit of their fellows?

Peas that were not rendered unsalable by the heavy rain storms are now ripening up very fast, but the crops will be disappointing and the mass of rank weeds which always accompanies a thin planting of Peas makes it very difficult to secure a good sample.

Pole and dwarf Beans are not very promising, except in a few favored spots; the warmer weather should give them a better chance. EUROPEAN SEEDS.

From Inside the Seed Bin

The Bulb Situation

The difficulties this year with regard to the Autumn trade in imported bulbs are causing the seedsmen to tax their brains to the limit as to the best way to handle the situation without a loss. The three great questions are these: (1) Will European bulbs come? (2) If they come will they arrive in time to avoid cancellations and enable them to be repacked and reach their destination so that the grower can get his money's worth out of them? (3) Is the uncertainty too great to risk publishing a catalog?

Regarding the first question, latest reports state that the French bulbs are moving, and the first shipment I understand is nearing this side of "the herring pond." The largest consignments, however, I learn, are to leave during the next 10 days. This is encouraging, I am sure, especially to growers here, as there is a prospect of their receiving their bulbs reasonably early to ensure a high price for their flowers during the holidays. Early delivery is their only chance of a decent profit over the high price they are asked for and apparently are willing to pay for the bulbs. (See further details "New York Seed Trade," p. 280, Aug. 24 issue.)

The outlook of the Dutch situation is not so bright just at present. The early sailing of a direct steamer is doubtful, so much so that many of the shippers are anxious to get the first consignments away via England. How long a delay would be incurred in the latter country is a matter of conjecture, depending to a great extent on the routine. Rotterdam to London, thence by direct boat would appear the wisest route, as one cannot tell how long they would be held up between Hull and Liverpool, though on the map this appears the more direct route of the two. One could safely state that either way would mean a delay of from 10 days to two weeks. If the bulbs are ready to ship, as I understand is the case, they should arrive here about the third week in September.

I am optimistic, however, about the Holland-America Line's sailings, and am inclined to surmise that this year, like last, they will get a steamer away with the greater bulk of the bulbs for the United States, and at an early date, too. I should imagine that the Dutch growers, by the conditions of sale, are bound in most cases to a set date to make shipment, so that their anxiety and endeavors to accomplish this should be greater than ours is about the arrival of the bulbs.

If, then, the foregoing guesses on my part nearly hit the mark, I can answer question two by saying that there is a great possibility of French and Dutch bulbs arriving in reasonably good time. Perhaps before this issue goes to press I could make another and better guess.

Preparing Catalogs

With such a hopeful outlook as I have, I have partly answered the third question. If these bulbs come, the catalog is the "chap" that is going to turn the greater bulk of them into cash, and the question arises: "How much money you are going to advance 'him' now and are you going to buy 'him' an expensive suit for the road?" In other words are you going to invest the usual amount of money in illustrations, colored covers and inserts, presswork, etc., and will the catalog be of the usual size? This all depends on how much my vision of the situation differs from yours, kind reader, but you must decide soon. If your catalog of last year is still standing in type, it is a simple and not very expensive matter to have such changes made now as are necessary, but I would avoid as much as possible resetting of type and making of new cuts. If you have ordered fewer varieties than usual, this will, of course, cut down the number of pages considerably. If your catalog requires to be reset entirely to type, I would omit all unnecessary paragraphs and make descriptions and cultural notes distinct and concise. Get the copy ready now, get bids on the work, then hold it as long as you think fit, but don't be late with it. Illustrate those kinds you want to push most and bind the whole in a respectable looking cover. A gentleman in evening clothes never goes forth in a raincoat.

I trust the preceding advice will not be misleading. I have simply stated my opinions truthfully from such information as I have, and they must be taken for what they are worth. "NEMO."

New York Seed Trade

Further information shows that only about 500 cases of French bulbs arrived last week at an Atlantic port. These bulbs were nearly all Paperwhite Narcissus, the remainder being Lilium candidum. Among those to whom these bulbs were consigned were Hogewoning & Sons, Inc., C. J. Speelman & Sons, Stumpp & Walter Co. and W. E. Marshall & Co.

One hundred cases of Dutch bulbs arrived last week at an Atlantic port, for a firm of importers in this city. These were the first Dutch bulbs arriving this season.

Walter Barnwell, head salesman for Burnett Bros., 92 Chambers st., is now passing his vacation with his family, who are summering in the Adirondacks.

At Vaughan's Seed Store, 41-43 Barclay st., E. A. Hartland of the Chicago house is spending a busy vacation. The first French bulbs have moved fast this week, and the earliest Dutch arrivals are being shown on the counter. This firm made a display of its new Gladiolus, Marshal Haig, at the exhibition of the New York Hort. Society at the Museum Building, Bronx Park, last Saturday.

Roman J. Irwin, 108 W. 28th st., returned on Wednesday of last week from attending the convention of the Canadian Hort. Society at Ottawa, Canada, which was held on Aug. 13 to 16. Mr. Irwin joined the party at Montreal on its way to the convention. He reported a good attendance and an enjoyable trip.

HOUSTON, TEX.—Mr. Schwenke of the Reichardt & Schulte Co. says that the local seed trade is still rather slow, as everybody is waiting for a heavy rain, but that some orders are coming in from the country. C. L. B.

Chicago Seed Trade

Dutch bulbs are being shipped through England. They come from Rotterdam to Hull by boat; thence by rail to Liverpool. There is fear that there will be some delay at Liverpool in getting prompt service on the boats coming to this country. It is also feared that the cost of transportation by this route will be considerably more than if they come as continuous freight from Rotterdam to any of the American ports.

A. H. Goodwin of the W. W. Barnard Co., who has been spending several weeks with his wife in the White Mountains, is expected back in Chicago this week.

Fritz Bahr, who has been spending a few weeks in California, reached home the past week, and speaks highly of the work being done at the Ward establishment at Eureka, Cal. Hyacinths and Tulip bulbs are being harvested there and all are of fine quality. In Azaleas and other plants usually imported the work done in the production of these plants on American soil is reported to be wonderful.

E. A. Hartland, of Vaughan's Seed Store, has gone to New York. Geo. Mohn and T. D. Long returned Saturday from the convention, having closed out the exhibit. They had well filled order books. The absence of J. C. Vaughan from the St. Louis convention was a matter of regret to many of his old-time friends in the trade.

Chicago dealers report the arrival of Bermuda grown Lilies in New York and expect them to reach here before the end of the present week.

A. Miller, of the American Bulb Co., sold out his exhibit at St. Louis and took many Freesia orders besides.

A. Henderson & Co. have received their first shipment of California grown Callas, all of which are of fine quality. Mr. Henderson has advice that a portion of his Holland bulb shipment is coming via England.

J. F. H. Heide, garden editor of the Chicago Tribune, in his notes on Sunday, Aug. 18, made some statements distasteful to seedsmen. He says:

"In spite of apparently correct cultural methods Lettuce at times produce very small heads or runs quickly to seed. Germination of other crops spreads over a period of weeks, rather than days, rendering intelligent planting impossible. All these troubles indicate a lack of viability in seed, due to improper seed storage, or the presence wholly or in part of old seed. Both lack vitality. Garden failures due to ignorance of correct methods are deplorable, but not hopeless; Who, though, is to protect the average buyer from the temptation to sell him culls and left-over stock of other years, a practice no worse than that of the local dealer who sold seed Potatoes last year with the eyes cut out!"

A committee of seedsmen called on the managing editor of the Tribune which brought the following editorial in the issue of Thursday last:

Protecting the War Gardener

The Tribune's garden editor believes that seed dealers should be compelled by law to mark their packages for the protection of the consumer. A good many seeds deteriorate rapidly after a certain period of time, and it is suggested that every package should be marked with the age of its contents. It is also suggested that more explicit information should be given as to the special characteristics of the particular batch of seeds that are being marketed. It is said that seeds are sometimes sold in packets printed for entirely different varieties.

Reliable dealers are anxious to prevent any deception from being practiced on the purchaser, and they will naturally take the lead in doing anything to protect him. It would seem as if they could do the gardener a great service by urging the legislation suggested. Unscrupulous dealers ought not to be allowed to take advantage of the war garden movement.

The story of the Potatoes with the eyes cut out was soon located and in justice to the seed trade of the city it is ridiculous to give such a story the slightest consideration. A lady called not long ago at a seed store in this city and asked for an interview with someone in charge. She complained of the purchase of a bushel of seed Potatoes a few months ago that had the eyes cut out and this was given as the cause of the failure of the crop. The lady said she had not seen the Potatoes, and when questioned on how she came to know that the eyes had been cut out she said her gardener had told her so. This brought up the question: if the gardener knew the eyes were cut out of the seed, why did he plant them? And why were they not promptly returned, so the matter could be investigated while fresh in the minds of all parties concerned. It seems a most improbable story and for a garden editor to use it as a reflection on the seed trade seems entirely improper and out of place.

Potatoes that have remained in cold storage for some time where the temperature is about 35 deg. lose their vitality for seed purposes and if planted frequently rot in the ground. It is possible to make mistakes in this way and seedsmen who sometimes pick up their stock on the open market may occasionally get caught in this way. A gardener might also get duped by planting cold storage seed but there is no excuse for a gardener who can see with his own eyes that his seed Potatoes are eyeless yet will go to the trouble and expense of planting such Potatoes. The entire story seems improbable.

California Seed Notes

C. C. Morse & Co. have purchased from Mrs. W. L. Diehl, of Burlingame, the 270 acre ranch of the Butt's estate located near Purissima, Cal. This ranch which is of the richest bottom land, is ideal for seed growing, and will be devoted exclusively to trial grounds. Work is to be begun immediately on the construction of several greenhouses and other buildings, to complete the equipment.

Frank Cunha of Haywards, who has made a notable local reputation as a grower of seed Peas, has undertaken to organize "The Pea Growers' Ass'n." The proposed organization is to have its headquarters at Haywards, and its objects

Giant Hyacinth-flowered Candytuft

The accompanying illustration shows a field of Candytuft, Waller's Giant Hyacinth Flowered, extra select, grown by the L. D. Waller Seed Co., at its grounds at Guadalupe, Cal. The photograph was taken about the end of July and the firm states that it has been working up this strain for the past five years. An illustration of an individual plant, which was selected and is the parent plant from which the stand in this illustration was grown is shown in the Week's Work columns, page 323. This plant has 10 perfect trusses although not all can be seen in the picture.

These Candytufts were grown with just ordinary field culture; undoubtedly magnificent results could be obtained by more intensive cultivation.

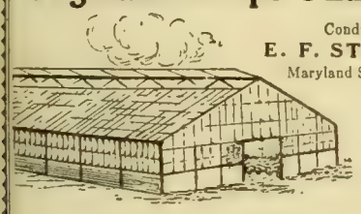
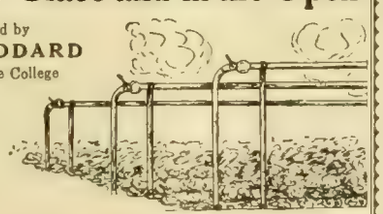
Vegetable Crops Under Glass and in the Open

Conducted by
E. F. STODDARD
Maryland State College





In this article Prof. Stoddard gives further hints on growing cool vegetable crops in the greenhouse.

Growing Beets Under Glass

Beets may be grown very satisfactorily as a Fall crop under glass. They may be grown at the same temperatures as for Lettuce, but will grow more rapidly at temperatures a few degrees higher. Beets have an advantage in that the tops may be used for greens.

Where Beets are grown outdoors as a Fall crop, they are harvested and stored about the time of the first killing frost in the Fall. The greenhouse crop of Beets should be ready for the first harvesting a short time after the outdoor crop is harvested. The time of starting the greenhouse crop will depend on the extent of the outdoor crop.

The early round varieties of Beets are used for greenhouse crops. They require eight to nine weeks to mature. In the North seed should be sown about Sept. 1 for the first crop, and if a succession is desired, seed may be sown at intervals of 10 days to two weeks. In the South where the late Summer is too warm and the soil too dry for Fall Beets, they do not grow as well under average conditions as the Spring crop. For this reason greenhouse growers could start their first crop about Sept. 1 or shortly afterward, and the first Beets will be harvested about Nov. 1 to 10.

The outdoor crop will have some influence on the greenhouse crop, but by sowing small amounts of seed at regular intervals, there will not be any large quantities harvested at one time and by careful selling and distribution of the sales, there will be little trouble in keeping a good product moving.

The soil should be fertile and friable. Fresh manures must not be added to the soil, but plenty of well rotted manure may be used. The rows may be 10in. to 12in. apart and the plants 2in. to 3in. apart in the row. The seeds are really seed balls which may contain two to five seeds. For this reason thick seeding should be avoided. One good seed every inch should be sufficient.

Some growers have a practice of starting their plants closer together in beds and transplanting them to benches or ground beds when they are about 4in. to 5in. tall. To do this, care should be taken to lift the plants without breaking the tap root. They are usually transplanted with a dibber. This method is practiced when space is limited, and it

Saved Freight—Saved Delay—Got Fresh Plants

Editor Florists' Exchange:

In a recent issue you told of several florists in the Pittsburgh region making an extended auto trip for their plants, but previous to reading that article we had determined that it would be necessary to procure our Carnation plants from some source where we could effect the delivery through the medium of our automobile.

Therefore, on Sunday, Aug. 25, we journeyed to Hightstown, N. J., to the establishment of Jas. H. Black, Son & Co., a round trip distance of 110 miles, for our Carnation plants; secured them in first-class condition, and reached home without a mishap (which goes without saying, our "automobile" being a Ford).

Aside from being a pleasure trip, we accomplished something that will more than repay us—as we secured stock that had not suffered by delayed transportation, and we further assisted somewhat in relieving congested traffic conditions.

I feel sure that if your paper would place before its readers the benefit derived from procuring stock that has not suffered through being in transit too long, wilting and heating, more florists would avail themselves of the convenience of their auto service for such purposes; but it is only through continued publicity on these subjects that these innovations are proven to be practical. It is my belief that the running cost on such trips will be more than saved if better stock is finally delivered at destination by the adoption of such methods.

Regarding The Exchange, I am a subscriber and a reader, and I fail to understand why all subscribers are not readers, as The Exchange always contains articles of value to the trade from all angles.

makes possible to use the space for another crop. It usually takes three to four weeks to grow Beet seedlings 4in. to 5in. tall. If the seedlings are not set carefully they may be checked somewhat and require a little more time to mature. When the tap root is broken off quite short, a good Beet will not be formed.

Another way to use bench or bed space to a good advantage is to plant Radishes in between the Beet rows, at the same time that the Beet seed is sown. Greenhouse Radishes will sell well after the outdoor Radishes are gone. For this system of companion cropping, the Beet rows should be 12in. apart, and the Radish rows 6in. from the Beets. Thin the Radishes to 1½in. apart. The early round varieties of Radish will mature in 30 days, when they will be removed to give the Beets the entire space.

Parsley for Fall and Winter

Those who expect to grow Parsley under glass this Fall and Winter should sow the seed now. The seed germinates slowly, requiring about two weeks, and sowing now while we have warm weather the young seedlings will get a better start, without artificial heat being necessary.

Parsley is a good Winter vegetable; it is used for seasoning and garnishing. If substitutes in food products increase in number this Winter, it will be a good plan to have some Parsley to help make some dishes more palatable. A small section of a greenhouse planted to Parsley will supply the needs of a great many people. Of course, the demand for this vegetable will depend upon the kind of people living in a community and whether or not it is well known on the market. For these reasons it is best to limit the amount planted, unless a grower feels justified in planting a larger quantity. It certainly is a profitable vegetable, and sells readily when the price is reasonable.

After the plants have a good start, the leaves may be cut from them at intervals, during a greater part of the Winter, if the terminal bud is not injured. I know a grower who cleared $36 from a bed of Parsley 5ft. x 5ft. These items are worth while considering.

The seed may be sown in flats, in rows about 2in. apart, and the seed covered about ¼in. deep. Use fresh seed and sow in a good, porous soil. To maintain constant moisture, a piece of newspaper may be laid over the flat, but it must be removed promptly as soon as the seeds begin to germinate. As soon as the first rough leaf has appeared they should be transplanted to other flats, 2in. apart, care being taken not to cover up the central bud. When the plants have a good start they are ready for permanent planting in the house.

Winter Cover Crops

Growers who have some land in addition to their greenhouses may have some sections on which a cover crop could be planted. As the manure supply becomes smaller we must maintain the fertility and humus content of our soils by the use of other materials.

From Maryland southward, Crimson Clover may be planted about Sept. 1. Vetch may be planted as late as Oct. 1 in these sections, but a little earlier farther north. It is a little late now to plant even the hardier clovers farther north. Rye is sometimes mixed with Vetch. The leguminous crops like Clover and Vetch add plant food and are also humus makers, but Rye simply adds a humus making material. By the judicious use of such crops we can improve our soils every year. When used alone about 15 lbs. of Clover should be used per acre, 1½ to 2 pecks of Vetch per acre, or 2 to 2½ bushels of Rye. In a mixture of Rye and Vetch use about 1 bushel of Rye and 1 peck of Vetch.

Vegetable Growers Not to Hold Convention

It is announced that the annual convention of the Vegetable Growers' Ass'n of America, scheduled for Sept. 10 to 13, has been called off and the organization will not meet this year. The executive board came to this decision after a circular letter had been sent to all members, asking for their opinion. The secretary of the association is Sam W. Severance, Louisville, Ky.

The regular monthly meeting was held in Pembroke Hall, Glen Cove, N. Y., on Wed., Aug. 14, at 7 p. m. There was a good attendance with President Robt. Jones in the chair. Robt. Greaves, Glen Cove, and Wm. G. Carter, Glen Head, were elected active members. The president appointed the following to act as judges for the monthly exhibits: Messrs. Ben. Sutherland, Hector McDonald and Thos. Henderson and their awards were as follows: Competition, 12 Gladioli; Wm. Noonan; 25 Pods of Lima Beans, 1, Frank Petroccia; 6 ears of Sweet Corn, 1, Frank Petroccia. Exhibition: 4 Artichokes exhibited by Wm. Noonan awarded honorable mention.

The preliminary schedule for the Dahlia show, to be held on Wed., Oct. 2, was read and adopted.

Potato Blight

A general discussion was held on the Potato blight so prevalent in this county. A number of members gave their observations and opinions; the majority seemed to favor the theory that Potatoes planted early, on well manured ground, were practically immune and Potatoes planted late on ground where only fertilizer had been used, were the first to be attacked. It would be interesting to hear from other societies as to their experiences on this most important topic. Andrew Wilson from Springfield, N. J., was present and generously offered a $5 gold piece for the best 12 Potatoes, to be competed for at our next monthly meeting to be held on Wed., Sept. 11, at 7 p. m. Competition for the society's prizes are: 3 heads of Celery, vase of 12 mixed Dahlias and one outdoor Musk Melon. HARRY GOODBAND, Cor. Sec'y.

New Building to be Dedicated

The New York Agri. Exp. Sta. at Geneva, N. Y., on Aug. 31 will dedicate its new administration building. The dedication will be acompanied by appropriate exercises and a suitable entertainment. It is planned to have addresses by Gov. Whitman, Dr. Liberty H. Bailey and probably the director of the station. Secretary of Agriculture Houston is also expected to speak.

Connecticut Nurserymen's Ass'n

The association held its annual Summer outing on Aug. 21, at Lake Compounce, Conn., reaching this delightful spot by auto. A goodly number attended and had a fine baseball game; in fact, the enthusiastic fans played two games. The losers were so badly beaten that they begged the writer not to mention the score. A feature was the unusual batting displayed by Messrs. Campbell and Barnes; in fact, it seemed that the pitcher was unable to get a ball past them.

The management at Compounce is to be congratulated on the barbacued sheep dinner it served, differing from some resorts, in that we were bounteously served at table. Everyone had a most enjoyable time. The association held no business meeting.

Every Reader of The Florists' Exchange Needs

BAILEY'S BRAND NEW

Standard Cyclopedia of Horticulture

Six large quarto volumes

More than 3600 pages

24 full page exquisite color plates

96 beautiful full page halftones

More than 4000 text engravings

500 Collaborators

Approximately 4000 genera, 20,000 species and 40,000 plant names

The publishers of THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE have made arrangements with The Macmillan Company to supply a limited edition of this set to their readers on monthly terms—see coupon—and we can unqualifiedly recommend the work

THE New Standard Cyclopedia of Horticulture has been freshly written in the light of the most recent research and experience. It is not merely an ordinary revision or corrected edition of the old Cyclopedia, but it is a new work from start to finish with enlarged boundaries geographically and practically; it supersedes and displaces all previous editions or reprints of every kind whatsoever. It is the fullest, the newest, the most authoritative of all works of its kind and constitutes the most conscientious attempt that has ever been made to compress the whole story of our horticultural thought, learning and achievement into one set of books. The owner of the Standard Cyclopedia of Horticulture will have at hand in this work a means of quickly satisfying his need for authoritative information. It is both an Encyclopedia and a Manual. Amateur and professional alike may quickly identify any plant, shrub or fruit contained within the set, and then receive expert instructions for its cultivation.

A Few of the Many Important New Features

Key to Identification of Plants This is a device to enable one to find the name of a plant. The name thus found is quickly referred to under its alphabetical location, where full information will be found in regard to it. The key is so simple that it is useful to the veriest amateur and to the botanist or commercial expert.

Synopsis of Plant Kingdom This is one of the most important features of the new edition. It constitutes a general running account of the classes, orders and groups of plants, with a brief sketch or characterization of 215 of the leading families, comprising those that yield practically all the cultivated plants. These family descriptions give the botanical characters; the number of genera and species and the ranges; a list of the important genera; brief statements in regard to the useful plants; and diagrammatic illustrations.

Illustrations There are 24 colored plates; 96 full page halftones; and more than 4000 engravings which serve as guides in the text. These color plates constitute the best possible combination of expert horticultural color photography and color printing, with a mastery in selection such as only Dr. Bailey's knowledge can supply.

The Glossary This is an analysis of all technical terms that are used in the work and in similar works. It comprises botanical and horticultural terms with brief definitions.

Translation and Pronunciation of Latin Names In Volume I is inserted a list of between 2000 and 3000 Latin words used as species—names of plants, giving the English equivalent or translation and the pronunciation.

Class Articles Special effort has been made to secure the best cultural advices for the plants requiring peculiar or particular handling. Here are some of the titles of these articles: Ants; Autumn Gardening; Bedding; Diseases; Drainage; Floral Designs; Formal Gardening; Hotbeds and Coldframes; Insects; Landscape Gardening; Lawn Planting; Orchards; Rock Gardening; Subtropical Gardening; Tools and Implements; Village Improvements; Window Boxes, etc.

General Index The final volume contains a complete index to the entire work, enabling the reader to locate volume and page of any subject he has in mind.

The complete set of six volumes, bound in decorated buckram, will be delivered to you for only $3.00 down and $3.00 a month for 11 months, until the full amount of $36.00 has been paid. Cash price is $35.00.

F. E. BEST ADVERTISING MEDIUM

First Edition of 2500 Copies Entirely Sold Out

That is the really wonderful record made, almost entirely through sales to the trade, by

Practical Landscape Gardening

ROBT. B. CRIDLAND

Never has any technical book been so heartily appreciated by florists and nurserymen. Read what W. F. Webb of the Guaranty Nursery Co., Rochester, N. Y., said of it:

"I have looked this book through carefully and it seems to me that it fills a long felt want which our salesmen would appreciate. While it is true that not all nursery salesmen may be able to grasp the essence of this book, still it is the exceptional men who really do want to learn what there is to landscape gardening and who lay the foundations to our business. I would like to be able to furnish every man on my force with one of these books. It is the best book on the subject I have ever seen and I try to keep familiar with all the literature published on landscape gardening."

Second Edition Just Fresh From Our Presses

Magnificently illustrated with 91 photographic reproductions—pictures which teach—67 sketches and 33 plans with planting keys. Pterostyrax hispida

In this we have a Japanese tree that is exceedingly rare in collections; at least in such a size as is depicted in our illustration, which does it far from justice in showing up to advantage the great beauty of the innumerable drooping panicles of creamywhite flowers.

The Order Styracaceæ, to which this tree belongs, is famous for the rich floral effects many of its members afford us in the Spring months, such old favorites as the Silver Bell, Halesia tetraptera and Styrax japonica being among the best and foremost kinds known to all of us.

The Pterostyrax, while considered a June-flowering tree, was at its best on May 28, which shows us the advanced date of blooming with this and many other plants this year. The Winter apparently had not caused any injury whatever to its wood, except that perhaps here and there a few unripened twigs had been Winter-killed. We might here say that it is quite common for this tree in its early years to suffer from Winter-killing of the wood. This is most noticeable after a season in which the young plant makes much growth later in the season than usual, and which consequently does not stiffen its fibre sufficiently to stand severe freezings. With increased age and size this is not nearly so manifest, as the growth being distributed over a larger surface, is much shorter and harder. Then too the production of its flowers, followed by the curiously ribbed fruit tends to hold its growth in check quite a little.

Its propagation is readily effected by green-wood cuttings under glass during the Summer or from seed sown outdoors in the Autumn. The young seedlings appear the following Spring and will need watching at this time, for should they be too thickly disposed in the seed bed there is a danger of many damping off. As soon as the warm days come, relieve the bed of its Winter covering of leaves and keep free of weeds so as to insure a good circulation of air around the young plants. The following season transplanting to nursery rows will be in order, which operation should be done in Spring. It is preferable at that time to cut down the young plant to the ground level, securing and training the strongest resultant growth to form the future trunk of the tree. Invariably, during the training period, the plant is much disposed to form a bush, throwing out many strong lateral shoots which, if allowed to mature, would spoil the future chances of a well-formed tree.

Summer Propagation of Deciduous Shrubs

Nature has made a wonderful provision for the perpetuation of the species by the most natural of all methods, namely, seed. In this she is prodigally generous in seeing that more than enough is supplied to take the place of those that die. Occasionally, with some plants, by reason of the uncongenial conditions under which they grow, her efforts are nullified and there is a dearth of progeny. We, who are in the horticultural profession, are aides to Nature and by methods other than her own can help to increase the most useful and best species and keep suppressed the undesirable ones. During the Summer months, the mode of propagation most practised is by cuttings and layers, by means of which many thousands of plants are added to the nursery inventory.

Perhaps by the time these notes have reached the press much of the work of Summer propagation will have been accomplished, and no doubt the first batch of soft-wood cuttings will be well rooted. To have a knowledge of the natural order to which a plant belongs will in most cases be a guide to its propagation, for in the majority of instances the species and varieties in an order can be increased by the same methods. Broadly speaking, the most of our hardy trees and shrubs and the best of them are grouped under less than 10 natural orders, and for the most part those kinds which are propagated by cuttings and layers during the Summer will be found in the following four orders:

SAXIFRAGACEÆ, represented by the Deutzias, Philadelphus, Hydrangeas, etc.

ROSACEÆ, containing the Spiræas, Kerria, Cotoneaster and Roses.

CAPRIFOLIACEÆ, including the Loniceras, Viburnums, Weigelas and Abelia.

OLEACEÆ, in which are the Syringas (Lilacs), Ligustrums (Privet), Forsythias and others.

To secure good, salable plants in the shortest space of time and at the least expense is the object of the propagator and to this end he sets to work. First of all comes the preparation of the cutting bed which, fortunately, at this season of the year, is but a simple matter, relieved as we are of that "burning question" of how to generate enough heat from â 50 per cent. allowance of fuel; rather is it a case of keeping things cool. For all practical purposes the cutting bed may be the usual sand bench in an idle greenhouse, an ordinary shallow coldframe, or an improvised frame of 12in. boards with lath shades. Here it may be said in connection with the improvised frame, that a little bottom heat created by fresh stable manure placed at the bottom of the bed will insure a higher percentage of success and at the same time afford better drainage.

If good, sharp sand is easily procurable, make a 4in. bed of this, but if not, a bed of free soil with an inch of sand on the top will serve the purpose, firming same as with the ordinary cutting bench, but remember to see that the bed is well drained.

In securing material for the future plant, select the most healthy, vigorous wood, that which is scarcely half-ripened will root quickest, such sorts as Weigelas, Forsythias, Climbing Roses, etc., are rooted in about three to four weeks. Never allow cuttings to flag; keep the wood well moistened while preparing it for the bench. Unlike Geraniums (which are sometimes allowed to dry out to get rid of superfluous sap) a wilted shrub cutting is practically useless, but if kept rigid by moisture absorption it will be better for handling and will also strike more quickly.

Reduce the leafage on the cutting to two or three half leaves, which will save transpiration and also lessen the danger of damping off. From the time they are inserted into the cutting bed, see that conditions are kept continually moist, without, of course, an excess, which would cause damping off, especially if the bed is not on a raised bench. Shading the cuttings from the sun until they are well rooted is very necessary and important; also remove any that show signs of decay, thus removing the danger of it spreading to others.

The immediate treatment of the rooted plants will depend somewhat on whether the cutting bed is in a greenhouse or a coldframe. If in the former, it will be well to transfer them singly into 2½in. pots or into wooden flats, as in all probability the house would be wanted for other more tender plants and a growing temperature maintained in it during the Winter. The plants in pots or flats can be kept growing until the fall of the leaf and during dormancy be wintered in a coldframe, to be transferred to the open ground in the early Spring. Those rooted in outside frames, if not set too close together to cause undue crowding, can, perhaps, to save labor, be allowed to remain in the same quarters until the Spring; then be set out into the nursery rows. It will be well, perhaps, during the Winter to give the young plants in the frames a slight covering with some light litter to help keep a more even temperature around the roots.

Some few of our popular shrubs are best increased by layering, and for this express purpose some nurseries maintain old stock plants, the yearly growth of which are laid down in June and July. These (with some exceptions like Cercis, Magnolia and Japanese Maple, which are usually down two seasons) soon root, and fine young plants are secured for planting out the following Spring. Several of the Viburnums, like plicatum, tomentosum and Sieboldianum, which are rather hard subjects to raise from soft-wood cuttings, readily root from layers in a season.

The popular Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora, while it can be easily rooted from cuttings, will make marketable plants in a shorter time when layered. The old stools or stock plants should be heavily fed with manure every Winter; this dug in around the roots in the Spring produces vigorous growths, which when laid down, form by Fall quite strong plants. Even from cuttings, with such quick growing shrubs as Weigela, Hydrangea, Philadelphus and others, we can have salable plants in 18 months, and specimens in three years.

Perhaps to the majority of florist growers, the raising of ornamental shrubbery would scarcely appeal, nor would it be necessary or profitable when it is remembered how cheaply the young plants can be secured from nursery growers who specialize in them. We think, however, that for the florist whose lines are widened to take in the work of hardy planting, Summer propagation of some of the most needed shrubs would fit in well with his time and general facilities at that particular season of the year, providing, of course, he has not taken up the more utilitarian phase of gardening, i. e., raising crops of vegetables and fruits for the Nation's larder and thereby helping in the one united effort of winning the war.

As one result of the war, this country will have a greater knowledge and love for plants both economic and esthetic than ever before, and if we are not foolish virgins in horticulture, we will make provision to meet the demand which will surely come. The one sure way is to have home-grown stock on hand of the many beautiful things which hitherto we have drawn from foreign sources, but which can surely be produced "Somewhere in the U. S. A."

The Automobile Saves Delay

More and more, whenever possible, the automobile is being used in place of the railway cars for the delivery of stock. It is a solution for freight delays, even to points 100 miles or more away.

That Questionnaire to Florists

An outline of this questionnaire was published in issue Aug. 24, page 292. Nothing further has been heard at this office since, but it is urged upon all that they make prompt replies to the Census Department, in order to avoid complication in the endeavor to cooperate. At this critical time our Government is entitled to every item of information necessary for the successful prosecution of the war.

All Corporations Must File Returns

Collector William H. Edwards of the Second District, U. S. Internal Revenue, made a statement on Aug. 27, the object of which was to clear up the matter of capital stock tax returns, which must be filed and payments made not later than Sept. 30. Mr. Edwards stated that, according to the law, all companies not specifically exempt are required to file returns, even though they are not taxable. This is regardless of the market value of their capital stock, whether over or under $75,000.

A Ton of Coal is a Ton of Coal

It seems to be the consensus of opinion on the part of the Fuel Administration at Washington, as well as the State Fuel Administrators, that a ton of coal is a ton of coal—therefore, whether the coal obtained by the florists be anthracite or bituminous, there will be no additional amount obtainable if the delivery is of bituminous. In the West there appears to be no complaint against the use of bituminous, and many florists spoken to in the matter seem to feel that a ton of bituminous under their boilers gives practically as good results as would a ton of anthracite. This virtually answers Mr. Copeland's question on page 292 "Anthracite vs. Bituminous."

Saved Freight—Saved Delay—Got Fresh Plants

Editor Florists' Exchange:

In a recent issue you told of several florists in the Pittsburg region making an extended auto trip for their plants, but previous to reading that article we had determined that it would be necessary to procure our Carnation plants from some source where we could effect the delivery through the medium of our automobile.

Therefore, on Sunday, Aug. 25, we journeyed to Hightstown, N. J., to the establishment of Jas. H. Black, Son & Co., a round trip distance of 110 miles, for our Carnation plants; secured them in first-class condition, and reached home without a mishap (which goes without saying, our "automobile" being a Ford).

Aside from being a pleasure trip, we accomplished something that will more than repay us—as we secured stock that had not suffered by delayed transportation, and we further assisted somewhat in relieving congested traffic conditions.

I feel sure that if your paper would place before its readers the benefit derived from procuring stock that has not suffered through being in transit too long, wilting and heating, more florists would avail themselves of the convenience of their auto service for such purposes; but it is only through continued publicity on these subjects that these innovations are proven to be practical. It is my belief that the running cost on such trips will be more than saved if better stock is finally delivered at destination by the adoption of such methods.

Regarding THE EXCHANGE, I am a subscriber and a reader, and I fail to understand why all subscribers are not readers, as THE EXCHANGE always contains articles of value to the trade from all angles.

The Saint Louis Convention

We are somewhat prone as we journey along the years to look upon that which came latest as better than any of its predecessors. We are apt to forget the notable features which in previous years had in their turn been accredited as the best—or perhaps in our enthusiasm of the moment we had then deemed them unapproachable—yet cautioned by a retrospection down the vista of twenty-eight conventions personally attended, and passing in rapid review the achievements of each one, visualizing the steady progress of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists from the days of the first one attended by the writer at Boston, in 1890, when business and pleasure ran along hand in hand, the latter somewhat inclined to do the leading, along down the line to these later years, the evidence becomes clearer of the society's progress to the point where business has become the essential, pleasure following, a natural reward for work well done but in no way interfering with legitimate convention work. In this transition from pleasure predominating to business first the S. A. F. does not stand alone; all the older societies have passed through the same experience. Business considerations today demand and have been given first place by all national bodies whose membership rests on commercial industry. This trend of direction has been wholesome for the organizations and beneficial to the country.

Of the S. A. F. it can be truthfully said that for several years past, with but one or two exceptions, the meetings have shown a marked tendency to take up for consideration and betterment, not only the welfare of the individual member, but that of the trade as a whole, both members and non-members, a broad, open-minded, big hearted movement by the small majority, rarely noted in the legislative annals of trade associations, efforts that can only be repaid through a cheerful adhesion to the national society on the part of those many thousands who still profit without paying, a position which we feel assured no one would assume did he but give the work of the society on his behalf a little investigation. The visits of the society's secretary to various cities in recent weeks have demonstrated this to be a fact. Florists seen have sprung to the colors. Mr. Young's campaign has met with the greatest success. It is to be persisted in and will undoubtedly succeed in bringing in directly additional hundreds of members and, again, other hundreds through force of attraction.

Undoubtedly the greatest work inaugurated by the society uptodate and now in full swing was the campaign for Publicity of Flowers, for which the meeting in New York in August, 1917, was responsible; this was the one big outstanding feature of that year.

The 34th annual convention just concluded at St. Louis was remarkable in many respects—it was the best attended in years—every session was crowded. Under the tactful guidance of President Charles H. Totty the work progressed rapidly and without friction; each day showed something good concluded.

Right here we wish to go on record with a tribute to the directors of the society for the intelligent care exercised in recent years,—and the close personal unselfish attention paid by so many of them in laying foundations for the society's future, which already ranks it as one of the most successful of its kind in the country. Those on the outside who pay no attention to the society's achievements may think, in a casual kind of a way, that the work of the directors is as easy, we will say, as running down a hill. The writer is well convinced, after close study, perhaps closer study than afforded the subject by the majority, that the directing of the society's affairs has been done with more than ordinary skill and forethought. The proofs are there—the cards are on the table, face up.

The 1918 session will live long in the memory of those fortunate to be present. Much new business of a high order has been transacted, making it somewhat difficult to single out that particular item which will result in the most good. The augury points, however, to the work of the Committee on National Credits and Collections. If the committee to be appointed and the collection agency with which it is proposed to cooperate, will work harmoniously together, we feel assured that here will be developed one of the greatest factors in bringing the business of the florist and grower into line with real business methods and practices, to which end the committee to be appointed by President Totty on "Costs and Overhead" can signally contribute.

THE WHITE HOUSE
WASHINGTON

Aug. 21, 1918.

My dear Sir:

The President asks me to thank you and Mr. Young very warmly for your telegram of the 20th of August, and to tell you and all those concerned that he appreciates the sympathetic interest and support of your membership.

Sincerely yours,
J. P. TUMULTY,
Secretary to the President.

Mr Chas H Totty, President
Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists, St. Louis, Mo.

[This reply from the White House was in acknowledgment of the telegram forwarded to President Wilson at the very opening of the S. A. F. Convention.]

Meeting of the Federation of Horticultural Societies

A meeting of the New York Federation of Horticultural Societies and Floral Clubs will be held at the New York State Fair grounds in Syracuse, at two o'clock on Wednesday afternoon, Sept. 11. There are several important questions to come before the federation at this time and it is hoped that there may be a good representation of delegates from the various organizations in the federation. The room in which the meeting will be held has not been definitely decided upon, but information regarding the place of meeting may be obtained from Professor David Lumsden, superintendent of the flower department. E. A. WHITE, Secretary.

Florists, Helping Liberty Loan Help Themselves

The horticultural, floricultural and seed trades, all of which are part of the Florists' Committee of the Rainbow Division of the Liberty Loan, this week began preliminary organization work for the Fourth Loan campaign.

It was pointed out that florists during these war times are entirely dependent upon the Government for coal to grow flowers and that by the purchase of Liberty Bonds, men in the trade are able to show their patriotism and at the same time make return to the Government for the coal deliveries so necessary to their continuance in business.

The entire trade will be asked by committeemen to see to it that none of the affiliated trades are absorbed by units to which they do not belong. For instance, seedsmen should ask the manufacturers who make their bags, do their printing, etc., to make bond purchases through the chairman of the seedsmen, or else allow this subcommittee credit for the subscription. In like manner, the retail florists should be responsible for the missionary work done among the basket makers, wireworkers, ribbon men and general supply houses.

This work in most cases can be done by letter. During the Third Liberty Loan, subscriptions totaling $307,350 were piled up. With 100 per cent. improved organization early indications are that this amount will be increased by several hundred thousand dollars.

The Minneapolis (Minn.) Municipal Rose Garden

An Invitation to Rose Growers to Exhibit

During the St. Louis meeting the following letter to the members was read from Theodore Wirth:

We have here in Minneapolis a municipal Rose garden which has been the pride of our city ever since its existence for the past ten years. It has convinced the people of the Northwest that Roses can be grown successfully in our climate and roses are now grown in thousands of home gardens where formerly they were not accorded space.

I want to offer the use of our garden for trial purposes to every grower in the country. Any one who has a new variety that he wishes to try out is invited to send us six plants. We will plant, protect, and cultivate them with all possible care keep an accurate record of their behavior, good and bad qualities, during a period of three years, and report annually to the owner of the plants.

Our object is to keep in touch with progressive work in outdoor Rose culture and to help the grower and introducer of new Roses to try out and disseminate his products. We have a standing committee of three judges, professional men appointed by the American Rose Society, to judge such exhibits. We are willing to pay the express charges on the plant sent, if demanded, all for the sake of keeping to the front and helping outdoor Rose culture in every possible way.

We now have about twenty-five hundred Roses in about two hundred varieties, and have set aside trial beds to accommodate fifty varieties, or three hundred plants, and can give still more space if necessary.

I earnestly ask for the cooperation of everyone interested in this work and hope to receive applications from all parts of the country for space in our garden.

Limitations Upon Storage of Bituminous Coal

A circular issued by the United States Fuel Administration, Educational Bureau, 20th and New York ave., Washington, D. C., under date of Aug. 22, provides that at all points east of the Mississippi and including the States of Minnesota, North and South Dakota "coal in excess of that required for current operations shall be delivered to plants not on the Preference List of the War Industries Board only when it is not in demand for use before April 1, 1919, by consumers on said list, namely, railroads, the Federal Government, states, counties, public utilities, retail dealers, or manufacturing plants on the Preference List."

The conference adopted a maximum number of days storage bituminous coal which will be allowed until further notice, and this was concurred in by Dr. Garfield.

The allowance to the florist industry of steam coal is as follows:

Maine, Mass., Vt., N. H., Northern N. Y.....30 days
Connecticut and Rhode Island.....20 days
Southern N. Y., N. J., Del., Eastern Penna., Md., D. C., Va., N. C., S. C., Ga., Fla., Western Ohio, Western Pa., W. Va., Eastern Ky., Eastern Ohio.....15 days
Lower Michigan.....20 days

In "By-Product" and "Gas Coal" there is no storage allowance.

These limits are mandatory and the Fuel Administrators are expected to see to it that the different classes of consumers are not allowed to exceed these limits, although it is provided that particular cases may require special treatment either by way of granting less or more stocks of coal than indicated by these limits. Therefore, as it is imperative that the grower will have some assurance that even though he may not store his entire coal for the Winter at one time, he may feel assured that if it is to be had he will be given it, florists in the states mentioned above should take up this matter with their State or local fuel administrator.

Provision is made for florists in certain Western States as follows:

"Any company or concern which is permitted under the zoning regulations now or hereafter in force, to obtain coal from Illinois, Indiana, Western Kentucky, or from mines west of the Mississippi River may retain such reserve stock of coal as it shall have on the effective date hereof, on condition that such company or concern shall hereafter use screenings or mine run only, for its current necessities, and shall obtain such screenings or mine run for current use only from such last mentioned fields."

In regard to the above immediate telegraphic communication was established with Wm. F. Gude, representative of the Society of American Florists at Washington, and his reply after consulting Fuel Administration headquarters, just received, as we go to press, reads as follows:

"Florists in restricted districts can store one month's supply based on a twelve months' allowance."

"Close-Ups"

A statement was made at St. Louis that the business of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association the past year had amounted to between two and two and one-half millions of dollars.

French flags were most freely in evidence at Moolah Temple, which was natural on account of old St. Louis having been originally a French outpost settlement; the British flag was noticeably missing until some one called attention to it and the omission was promptly rectified and the flag given a prominent position.

The new design chosen for the F. T. D. emblem was accepted from a pencil sketch. At the F. T. D. meeting two enlargements were shown, one in all black, the other in colors suggested by the artist. The idea is undoubtedly good, but the old Mercury seems to have implanted itself in the affections of the members, and it seems likely this latter will be retained and artistically improved, which improvement it can readily stand.

The Rotarian practice introduced by Wm. F. Gude at the F. T. D. meeting went far toward promoting sociability. Mrs. Gude's introduction of herself attracted attention, she saying she was "the silent partner of Wm. F. Gude of the W. F. Gude Co. of Washington, D. C."

Albert Pochelon explained that the word "telegraph" on the F. T. D. emblem was not all, as in many instances it was possible to use the ordinary mail to fill orders, also the telephone.

Wm. F. Gude and Albert Pochelon want new ideas for the F. T. D. meeting to be held in Cleveland in October next.

Geo. Asmus maintains that the F. T. D. emblem might well bear the slogan "Say it with Flowers."

The inauguration of memorial services in Chicago churches and other cities in honor of those fallen in the war bids fair to amplify the use of flowers; so does that of sending flowers to the nearest relatives of our crusaders wounded or killed overseas.

At the F. T. D. meeting some one said a member was wanted for each town of 5000 or over. Secretary Pochelon aptly questioned back, "Will you help to get them?"

"Grow big through doing little things well."—Wm. F. Gude.

The men were complimented on bringing their ladies. It added to the dignity of the occasion—besides the women helped to keep the men straight.

The Mayor told the members that they were as welcome as the flowers in May.

This was the third S. A. F. convention held in St. Louis, the first meeting in 1893, the second in 1904, and now this last one in 1918. The only city rivaling this record is New York.

The 34th annual convention opened patriotically, the delegates, at the suggestion of President Totty, singing one verse of America.

"Flowers speak a louder welcome than any words ever penned."—Wm. F. Gude when referring to the magnificent floral display presented to the officers of the F. T. D.

W. A. Manda spoke feelingly of the absence through illness of Wm. J. Stewart, secretary of the S. A. F. for over 20 years, and hoped for his speedy recovery.

An S. A. F. service flag was installed in Moolah Temple. Additionally the dues of all members who have joined the Colors are to be recorded as paid until the end of the war.

Frederick R. Newbold knows how to get money when he goes after it. He succeeded in obtaining $500 from the S. A.F. for the maintenance of the ambulances which had previously been furnished by the New York Florists' Club and the Horticultural Society of New York and are now doing service at the front.

The proposition for the designation of a flower for each month did not carry. It was negatived on account of climatic conditions. It was suggestedas a good subject for F. T. D. consideration next October.

The Nursery Convention recommendation of planting a tree in honor of each soldier with the Colors did not obtain S. A. F. support.

Cleveland will be honored by the S. A. F. in 1920, or rather Cleveland will honor the S. A. F. It works both ways. Singularly, too, it will be the first meeting after 24 years.

The late Edwin A. Seidewitz

Richard Vincent, Jr. said that if each young man and young woman would wear a boutonniere there would not be enough flowers in the country to fill the orders. Mr. Vincent set the example by "stealing" a flower from an exhibit, which was followed by several others. Jokingly, it was suggested that the directors provide boutonnières for all florist meetings. Another suggestion was to work the S. A. F. badge unto a boutonnière.

There were more men present at the Florists' Hail Ass'n. meeting this year than at all the meetings in previous years combined.

Max Schling told a story of a man who came to him and wanted to "Say it with Flowers" but did not know how to go about it.

R. C. Kerr made an ideal inspiration leader. He made all rise who had subscribed to the Publicity Fund, then waved his wand over those who did not contribute, with first class results, obtaining on the floor in a few minutes a considerable addition to these funds.

Secretary John Young paid a handsome compliment to his assistant on the Promotion Bureau, J. H. Pepper.

Listening to the major on advertising was an inspiration. Words fail to convey the subtle influence which pervaded his talk, much of which was impromptu. Advertisers should not "pull out." Bull Durham was used as an illustration. This tobacco is not now obtainable, but the owners will not stop advertising it for the reason that later they will have to face competition; therefore, they keep the name before the people.

The slogan "Say it with Flowers" is the backbone of the Publicity Campaign.

Advertising is salesmanship calling for the application of common sense in the sale. It is computed that six million dollars a year is spent on advertising. Department stores would starve unless they advertsied. Women take newspapers to read the advertisements. A Philadelphia paper refused a department store advertisement. In a short time it lost 20,000 circulation. The other daily, which took on the advertising, gained 15,000 circulation.

The glass sign "Say it with Flowers" and sold to the retailers at $1.50 was a most wonderful bargain, tying up with the Society's national advertising.

President Gude's suggestion to send flowers as coming from the S. A. F. to three families whose relatives have fallen in everybody's war was an act of tact and sympathy. It will bear fruit.

The School Garden idea was started by J. K. M. L. Farquhar in 1892.

When all are guided by production costs and overhead we will be nearing the millennium.

Non-essential means non-essential to the furthering of the war. It does not mean that a non-essential must go out of business.

The favored ones in Illinois and Indiana and other points noted can store screenings to Sept. 10, with the possibility of an extension. This includes what is termed standard mine run coal.

Slack has danger of fire attached to it. It should be piled in height not exceeding 3ft., with pieces of pipe inserted here and there, blocked at one end. Be careful not to wet.

Obituary

Frank Danzer

Frank Danzer, formerly vice-president of John Breitmeyer's Sons, Detroit, Mich., with which firm he was connected for many years, died in Detroit on Aug. 20. Mr. Danzer died suddenly, death being attributed to heart trouble. For a number of years Mr. Danzer was THE EXCHANGE correspondent at Detroit. He was of German birth and descent, but evidently a full-fledged American citizen. He made a visit to Germany when the war broke out and had the greatest difficulty in returning, spending several months in the endeavor. He finally arrived in New York with nothing more than the clothes he stood in. His death will come as a shock to his many friends.

John White

John White of Springfield, Mass., well known as a florist in that section of New England, died on Aug. 26, at the age of 77, death being due to the infirmities of age. Although Mr. White had been in failing health for two years he had been able to be up and around until the past two weeks. Mr. White was born in Banbury, England, May 24, 1841. He received his early training on various estates and had charge in succession of several large ones, being finally appointed to the Royal nurseries, where he remained 20 months. From this position he came to this country, settling in Springfield. He worked for a time for a florist and held several other positions in connection with horticultural work. Later he went into partnership with H. C. Hume, and in 1876 the firm established itself on New West st. In 1886 Mr. White became the sole owner of the establishment, which he conducted until the time of his death. The range included about 20,000ft. of glass.

Mr. White was married three times. His third wife, who survives him, was the daughter of Benjamin Gray, a Malden (Mass.) florist. Mr. White belonged to several fraternal orders, including the Masons.

Edwin A. Seidewitz

The sudden and unexpected death on Aug. 24, of Edwin A. Seidewitz, well known florist of Annapolis and Baltimore, Md., through suicide by shooting, came as a shock to the many friends he had in the trade in that city and elsewhere. Mr. Seidewitz had been under a doctor's care for more than a year, due to mental and nervous trouble, brought on by worry over war conditions, principally because of the action of the Fuel Administration in cutting down the allowance of fuel for the florists. The deceased had developed in later years marked mental activities; his knowledge of men and events was well above the average and his act was probably brought about through this strain on his mental faculties.

Mr. Seidewitz was a native of Baltimore, having been born there 52 years ago. He later went to Annapolis, where he established nurseries near the Severn River. In 1899 he was elected mayor of Annapolis on the Democratic ticket and served two terms. He took an active part in the affairs of that city. Fifteen years ago he opened a florists' shop at 323 No. Charles st. Baltimore, which he conducted successfully until war conditions affected the florist's business.

Mr. Seidewitz was for a number of years Baltimore representative of THE EXCHANGE, a position which he filled most efficiently. He was also at one time president of the Baltimore Florists' Club and was active in fraternal organizations. Mr. Seidewitz in earlier days took a prominent part in the S. A. F. and O. H. For several terms he held the office of State vice-president and was once mentioned for the secretaryship of the organization.

The deceased is survived by his widow, Mrs. Adele Seidewitz; one daughter Adele; three sons, William E., Edwin W. and Albert R. and a sister, Mrs. Amelia Feiger.

papers and periodicals today were spread out they would cover an area as great as the State of Delaware; the value of that advertising, according to the latest census, was $255,000,000 which added to the millions spent for booklets, letters, etc., would make the total yearly investments in advertising $615,000,000. In fact the total has been set as high as a billion.

Major O'Keefe gave several instances of certain well-known commodities which owed their enormous publicity to advertising and the large sums that were spent by the manufacturers. He then pointed out some of the qualifications of the advertising expert and the great pains the latter took to serve his client efficiently. He emphasized the fact that one of the most important tasks of the advertising agent is to develop cooperation between all those concerned or interested in the marketing of a product; cooperation between manufacturer and retailer, buyer and seller, the purchaser and his market.

Another fact that he brought out was that the retailer has been neglected by the advertiser in the past, that a manufacturer might spend considerable sums of money to create a demand in every way possible on the part of the public and will have the effect of all of this lost because the sale was left to the untrained, uninterested staff of clerks in the retailer's store. Today, however, every progressive advertiser makes careful plans by helping the retailer and even goes so far as to help the retailer increase his business in other lines which will indirectly increase sales of the manufacturer's own goods.

Major O'Keefe then showed what a rich field there was for this sort of thing in the florists' campaign and said that he desired to impress upon his hearers the importance of suggestions. He said that no one has a monopoly of bright ideas, least of all the advertising man, and that he had seen many bright ideas come from wholly unexpected sources. He suggested that there might be in the audience someone who had been nursing the germ of an idea "that could be applied with wonderful results to the promotion of flower sales either through cooperation with the retail florists, or with the producers of some other article or in connection with some campaign or other. For example, jewelers boost the birth stone idea, a jewel for every month. We are trying to make the idea of a flower for every month just as popular. It may be that in your travels you hear of an odd use for flowers, or of their association with a certain event. Just make a note of the item and send it along to Secretary Young."

Major O'Keefe said that there was a big opportunity for each one to use his best efforts to help the retail florist. "Show him what we are doing to make it easier for him to sell more flowers. Boost the idea of cooperation. Make cooperation a hobby. Talk cooperation, and above all, practice cooperation."

In spite of the difficulties involved in the national advertising campaign for the past six months he considered that the results had been highly successful. Much credit for this was due to Secretary John Young, the head of the promotion bureau.

The address then went on with some general remarks about the florists industry. The speaker said that undoubtedly the florists business had been affected by the war.

Speaking of luxuries and flowers he defined a luxury as something we felt we could absolutely do without, something that would not upset any fixed habit in our daily lives. He then asked: "Are flowers a luxury?" He then put the question: "Have the florists as a body made the buying of flowers by the public such a frequent habit that people would feel that, if they were deprived of them, something real and vital would have gone out of their lives?" The answer was "No". Major O'Keefe pointed out that it was the mission of the florists now to continue to change the public mind through the means of national advertising and to persist in advertising now, not only for the sake of stimulating sales, but from the standpoint of public good will.

He brought out the fact that people now think of flowers to be used only on special occasions. This is simply due to lack of education. He showed how with other things, the telephone for instance, the habit was formed through educational advertising of using these things, and the same results could be obtained with flowers. His suggestion was to keep on insisting upon the desirability and usefulness and sentiment of flowers and before long the desire for them would be firmly entrenched in the hearts and minds of the people.

Major O'Keefe said that the general public had little idea of the great effort and thought and scientific research that stands back of the florists' industry and the months and years of labor necessary to the production of plants and flowers before financial returns come. His point was that the masses do not know much about the flower business and the more the florists educate them about it and take them into their confidence, the more people generally will respect and patronize the florist. This he called good-will advertising, aimed not only to make occasional sales, but to create a favorable impression of the florists' business generally. He pointed out many reasons why the S. A. F. should continue advertising. The country is prosperous and many people who never bought flowers before the war can afford to do so now. "The war has created many bonds of sympathy and affection among our people which can easily be turned your way. Flower advertising just now could not have anything but a favorable effect on the Federal authorities. Besides the creation of the mass demand for flowers now, the creation of good-will will stand you in good stead after the war, when people may have to buy more discriminately and draw a tighter line as to what is and what is not a luxury."

The speaker concluded by pointing out that by advertising now the florists' industry would be more readily remembered later on and that those lines of business that keep themselves prominently in the public eye are more likely to keep there after the war.

In the brief discussion which followed, Mr. Kerr inquired of the speaker what percentage of the gross returns from the business could be set aside wherewith to conduct a campaign of advertising. The reply was that in Boston the department stores allotted between three per cent. and four per cent. of their gross business for publicity. He thought it would be safe to allot the same amount for retail shop publicity. The major endeavored to elucidate the point that advertising was not a gamble, for while nobody could tell in advance what advertising was going to do, certain principles, if followed out, would bring certain results. Continuing, he gave many illustrations, all of national products, which made money while they were advertised but ceased to do so as soon as the advertising stopped. The essential point in advertising was first, last and all the time, that the advertising be honest, that the goods be just as represented, otherwise the more deceptive the goods advertised, the less the public will think of them and the more money will be lost by the advertisers. He gave several instances in proof of his assertion. "You will get out of an advertising campaign just what you put into it." This does not mean that if you place a thousand dollars into an advertising campaign, it will return your thousand dollars, but that if you are advertising on the correct basis and judiciously, the advertising will bring you satisfactory results.

Major O'Keefe is a man of magnetic personality and charming presence, the sort of a speaker that must be heard to be fully appreciated. Those who had the pleasure of listening to him at this convention will long remember his address as of great interest and most instructive. Prominent members of the association voiced this opinion after the close of the session. Major O'Keefe is firmly of the opinion that American business can expect great things after the war but must not defer its advertising efforts until the war is ended.

President Totty congratulated the convention upon its good fortune in securing so able a speaker to put forth the advantages of the advertising campaign.

Mr. Asmus remarked that he had had a conference with Mr. Watson, the chairman of the finance committee of the Nurserymen's Association, looking toward that association and the S. A. F. and O. H. entering into some mutual arrangement whereby to push forward the publicity work. The nurserymen are not ready yet to fully express themselves but the matter is in process and some arrangement may be made later on.

Major O'Keefe made clear the fact that his profits come from the publications in which the advertising is placed and not from the contributions. He has given his own efforts unselfishly with a view to seeing that the present publicity campaign of the S. A. F. and O. H. is fruitful of beneficial results for the membership.

President Totty announced that the annual election of officers would take place at 10 a.m., Thursday, and that John G. Esler would conduct the election as master of ceremonies, assisted by the following tellers, who were requested to report promptly to Mr. Esler Thursday morning, viz.: F. J. Fillmore, Oscar J. Ruff, A. J. Zech, W. Mott, Paul H. Klingsporn, F. Lautenschlager, R. C. Kerr, Joseph Manda, W. W. Coles, A. F. J. Baur and A. L. Miller.

William F. Gude, Washington representative, remarked that he had noticed in a local newspaper (St. Louis) announcement that three St .Louis boys had made the supreme sacrifice on the other side, and he suggested that it would be a graceful thing to send to the families of these boys from the association a suitable floral offering, and that this be done on any other days while the convention was in session with respect to any additional deaths that might be reported. This suggestion was adopted by the convention by unanimous vote.

On motion of A. T. De La Mare, a rising vote of thanks was extended to Major O'Keefe for his brilliant address.

On motion a vote of thanks was also tendered to Henry Penn, chairman of the publicity committee.

The convention then adjourned until Thursday morning

Thursday Morning Session, Aug. 22

At 10 a.m., President Totty announced that the polls were regularly open and would remain so for one hour At the expiration of this period, all having voted, the polls were closed.

Then followed the report of the committee on the president's address. Committee: Geo. Asmus, chairman A. T. De La Mare and E. G. Hill.

Report of Committee on President's Address

Your committee on president's address respectfully reports that it believes the address to be of more than ordinary importance, and that the adoption of its recommendations thereon will be beneficial to the society and its members.

l on Tuesday afternoon, August 20, with the sun's rays directly on the assemblage. For all that it is a very good picture. Notice floral decorations on stairway and h their presentation baskets of flowers before them.

hat the society, through its president, appoint committees of its membership in localities wherever possible to assist National League for Women's Service which, through its nbers, is striving to cheer the life of the invalid soldier by gs of beautiful flowers.

e wish further to concur in the president's remarks upon unselfish work done for the benefit of our society and all nbers of the profession by our Washington representative, liam F. Gude, who has sacrificed his time to do this work, therefore we offer and ask your adoption of the following lution: Resolved: That the Board of Directors of the S. F. & O. H. are empowered to recompense the Washington resentative in its discretion.

e think the recommendation of the president to have our nbership assist in the beautifying of cantonments and ps throughout the country to be of especial value and imtance, so that these may not have that barren and desolate earance that many of them now have, and that measures uld be taken to make them more homelike and cheerful tending to increase the morale of our soldier boys and l them forth in better fighting trim after having been in r cantonments sometimes for long periods of time while ergoing training, and we believe that if work was done as has been done at Camp Mills, where shade trees and ers and ornamental shrubbery have been planted proly, it would be a great and beneficial work for our society oride itself upon, both now and hereafter; and we recomnd that the president of this society issue an appeal to the t throughout the country to assist the various committees m we recommend that he appoint in every locality where tonments are located, and urge upon them the necessity of ing active at once so that shrubbery, etc., can be planted t Fall.

n reference to "Trade Acceptances," which have been so mon for years in foreign countries and are now being orsed and recommended to be used by the prominent iness men and organizations of this country as an emergency ateral which is strongly fostered by our Government, we mmend that the florist trade adopt this method of conservi credits, and enlarging the circulating medium, thus stimuing sales of our products.

n reference to the establishing of a florists' bank, as recomded by the president, we find that in most cities, and in even in the smaller ones there are florists or those engaged ome of our allied trades, who are directors or officers of ks, and we believe that they would be able to pass upon lits, and we do not think it advisable or feasible to have k established solely for the florist interest, as the location uld have to be too far removed from some of the craft and refore not of use to the trade in general. We do not, therefore concur in this recommendation and would recommend t it be not acted upon.

n reference to the establishment of a society publicity organ: wish to recommend that such Bulletin be issued not oftener n once a month to the society membership, such bulletin contain a record of the work of the society and matters of neral interest pertaining to our own and our affiliated organtions, and to positively carry no paid advertisements; that expense of such publication can be, we believe, largely set by the cutting down of our elaborate book of proceedi which, in the past, has been unnecessarily voluminous. I we believe the same purpose can be better served by rening in the secretary's office a full record for reference of the vention proceedings, but the published matter to be efully edited and condensed. We believe, also, that much ney can be saved through the elimination of sending out by il of notices and announcements which now can be included the official bulletin, reaching the membership with much l office labor and postage expense. Such official bulletin uld also greatly assist the publicity campaign which cannot it for yearly volumes but must be constantly looked to and t up to date.

The report of the School Garden Committee (Benin Hammond, chairman) was then read at this eting. (See page 295, issue of Aug. 24) To this he added in simple language a story of his efforts to interest the children of Beacon (his own city) in the garden movement. Mr. Hammond said that only a few years ago it was utterly impossible to have flowers in front of the house. Now, several hundred children who had enlisted in the School Garden Brigade had become each one a policeman and natural protector of plants, and their wanton destruction has utterly ceased. He told a good story on himself to the effect that one day coming home he was approached by three boys, each with a large bouquet of miscellaneous flowers, which he purchased at a moderate figure. Then on arriving at his own home, he discovered that these selfsame flowers had been stolen from his front yard. An offense of this kind could not possibly happen in that city today, he said. As he walks the streets of the city, the children call him, take him by the hand and lead him to their gardens. Some of these are but scant patches, he said, bare handkerchief gardens, but his greatest satisfaction is in noting the genuine pleasure taken by the children in their gardens of vegetables and flowers, because they were fully as insistent upon flowers as upon vegetables.

Report of Judge of Elections

Mr. Esler stated that 144 votes had been cast. For president, J. F. Amman received 134 votes; no opposition. For vice-president, E. A. Fetters received 66 votes and Robt. M. Rahaley 63 votes. Votes cast for John Young as secretary and J. J. Hess as treasurer, both reelections, no opposition. For directors to serve for the next three years: Jos. H. Hill, Richmond, Ind., received 87 votes; C. C. Pollworth, Milwaukee, Wis., 65 votes, these two gentlemen being declared the successful candidates. John Evans received 40 votes; Chas. L. Baum 31 votes; J. S. Wilson 56 votes.

President-elect J. F. Ammann, called upon, made a rattling good speech, strongly permeated with patriotic flavor, returning thanks for the honor conferred with especial emphasis to the St. Louis Florists' Club for its endorsement of him. He also extended his heartfelt gratitude to A. L. Miller, the other nominee, who had so unselfishly stepped aside that he might receive the unanimous vote of the convention. Mr. Ammann said he realized he was taking the executive office at a most trying period in the history of the organization but, with the support from the members that he hoped for and expected to receive, he believed he could make a favorable record and leave the society in as strong a position at the expiration of his term of office as any other under the Stars and Stripes today. Mr. Ammann did not forget to express his deep sympathy and admiration for the brave boys who have gone to the other side to fight the battles of the Nation. Some people might consider it a privilege to stay at home but, for his part, he thought that the going was the privilege. Those boys will come back home better men than they were when they went. It is up to us all to keep the home fires burning and maintain our businesses so that when those boys come back they will have a home to come to and a business waiting for them that will enable them to properly maintain themselves through life. Florists must stand side by side in maintaining their organization and their common brotherhood.

In conclusion Mr. Ammann paid a high encomium to the president of the United States, Woodrow Wilson, a man of whom we are all proud, who knows no party, and who is as true and as staunch an American as ever the sun shone on (applause). It is for us to stand back of him and his cabinet and co-workers in all orders given out to conserve fuel, to conserve labor, and in all other matters tending to the successful prosecution of this war. Mr. Ammann insisted that no other organization will make greater sacrifices than the florists will be called upon to make and which they will make cheerfully. The speaker also commended the patriotic stand that the trade papers had taken generally. The time is now here for us to give to our Nation everything that is within us, and to bend every effort toward fighting this war to a successful conclusion, as until it is won, everything else must be relegated to the rear. In the meantime there should be no let-down in our business efforts both that we may do our duty toward our Government and toward our returning boys when peace shall have been declared.

Secretary Young, upon the announcement of his reelection, was also called upon for a speech, and voiced his gratitude for the honor paid him which, he said, took an endorsement of the work of the secretary's office, which was increasing every year. He referred to the faithful and loyal labors of the executive board, the members of which he believed did not always receive sufficient recognition and acknowledgment. If it were possible for all the members of the society to be personally familiar with its proceedings they could then better realize how many matters of importance were considered and the great amount of labor that the members of the board were called upon to perform. Mr. Young called special attention to the work of George Asmus, chairman of the finance committee, of whose assistance he had always freely availed himself during the year. He was also grateful for the assistance of President Totty and the members of the various committees generally, and believed that the recommendations of President Totty which had been concurred in by the society would result in much good.

Joseph H. Hill in acknowledging his election as director, thanked the people of St. Louis for the splendid time all had enjoyed and hoped that it would be possible soon to visit them again.

C. C. Pollworth, called on, responded in a fitting manner, pledging himself to assist the president and other officers in furthering the interests of the society at all times to the best of his ability. Then followed the report of the committee on Memorial resolutions.

It is therefore

Resolved, That we, members of the Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists, brought together at this, the thirty-fourth annual meeting of the society, feel most keenly the heavy loss sustained in the departure of so many of our well beloved brothers, whose wise counsel and unceasing industry in the best interest of the trade remain as enduring monuments to help us ever onward. Their constancy and devotion to the cause of floriculture have been an inspiration to all of us, their blameless lives a benediction. It is further

Resolved, That we extend to their sorrowing relatives our great appreciation of their splendid qualities together with our sincere sympathy in their bereavement, and that a copy of these resolutions be forwarded to them and entered upon the records of the society with sketches of their lives and accomplishments.

Committee: Michael Barker,
John G. Esler,
J. A. Peterson.

After the impressive reading by John Young of these Memorial Resolutions, the delegates arose and stood with bowed heads in silent Communion as final public tribute to their departed fellow members.

On motion of Michael Barker, the foregoing resolutions were adopted as read by a rising and unanimous vote, the convention standing with bowed heads.

The secretary read a telegram from Fred C. R. Newbold expressing his appreciation of the $500 award for ambulance work; also a telegram from Esther Chapin of the American Fund for French Wounded in further acknowledgment of that donation.

President Totty then proceeded to read his paper on "Present Day Cost of Production."

Present Day Cost of Production

The discussion was opened by President Totty with the following paper:

Cost production is a subject to which the florist has hitherto paid little or no attention but which present-day conditions will force him seriously to consider if he is going to keep in business. Since the great war started all materials the florists use, such as fertilizers, glass and every other item, has gone up from 50% to 500% in price, but the florists in many cases still sell their standard plants at the same old price they did ten or fifteen years ago.

The average grower detests bookkeeping and, consequently, his expense account just contains items of so much received and so much paid out, without considering its relation to the cost of any crop. How many growers who sell field-grown Carnations at $50 per 1000, for instance, ever stop to figure out the cost of that crop? The grower in this respect is handicapped in comparison with any manufacturing concern, which can take a certain amount of raw material and after two or three runs on the machine tell how many yards of cloth it will produce, and also just how much the labor cost was on the same. A grower dealing with live plants cannot have such a definite understanding, as so many other things have to enter into his calculations. In the case of a plant propagator, fungus in the cutting bench or any one of a dozen unlooked for circumstances may cause the loss of the entire crop of cuttings. Still, there is no way of ascertaining the definite cost of a crop except by means of a time card showing the cost per thousand of making cuttings, putting them in the sand, potting them and bringing them along to the point where they can be sold. To this of course must be added a proportionate ratio of overhead expense, interest on capital invested in the greenhouses, advertising and a dozen other items. The average grower says it can't be done, yet all business experts tell us we must eventually get down to it or go out of business, since no man can do business at a loss nor can he do business on a blind basis unless he has a tremendous margin of profit, and no florist today of my acquaintance is getting that. One thing is sure, the Government these days is not interested in any business that is not making money, since money must be made in order to give the Government revenue to carry the war to a successful conclusion. As a cold business proposition they are much more liable to divert our coal to some business that is paying good dividends than to consider the florist because he did not make any money last Winter.

The grower is the cornerstone of the florists' business, as without the grower it is obvious to the most obtuse intellect that neither the wholesaler nor retailer can exist. The retailer in the larger cties is the man who is the medium of communication between the grower and the consumer. In most cases he is a very much better business man than the grower but too often uses this advantage solely for his own benefit, and considers the grower the cow to be milked indefinitely. The retailer, in some cases, is more interested in putting his fellow-retailer out of business than in elevating the profession up to the point where every one can make money and live as men and women should live in this favored land of ours. The retailer must charge a price that is high enough not only to recompense him for his time and money invested, rental, help, etc., but to enable him to pay a price to the grower that he in turn can live and move and have his being. In too many cases the retailer, instead of helping all he can in a congested market and co-operating with the wholesaler to move the stock, uses all his energies to buy as cheaply as he can and sell at as high a price as possible.

At the present time, very little team-work is manifested between the three branches of the business. I consider the wholesaler has the worst position of the lot since the retailer pounds him from the front line trenches because he charges "too high a price," and the grower pounds him from the rear because the price return is not high enough.

No matter what one purchases today the price is tremendously advanced and the public can be readily instructed that they have to pay an increased price for flowers also. There are cases to my knowledge where in some cities Geraniums, for instance, sold at one time for $1.50 per dozen, and were sometimes planted in addition, at this price. This year the same quality plants sold for $3 per dozen, plus the cost of planting, with no argument and just as much satisfaction to the customer.

In cases where a grower retails his own stock he is apt to be a detriment to the market because so long as he did not have to go into the open market to buy flowers he can sell cheaper than his neighbor who does not have growing facilities. A greater mistake was never made, yet how many grower-retailers have ever studied out what their crop cost them in order to arrive at an aggregate idea of what they should charge their customer? I know many men in the growing business who do not seem to think their own time is worth anything. If they were engaged in some other occupation with the work of their hands they would get from $3 to $7 per day, and yet the labor they put into their own business is not figured as being worth anything. Then again there are men owning their own stores who do not estimate the rental which they would have to pay if they did not own them, as it would be part of their expense account.

If there are any members of the society who have records of expense of cost-production I think it would be an excellent idea if they could or would get together and work out something along these lines.

One thing is certain: many florists who never kept a record in their life will be compelled to keep it this year on account of the income tax regulations which require that all persons engaged in commercial pursuits, including florists, must keep a record of all their transactions.

With this as a basis, and the exercise of common-sense, many growers will be in a much better position after this year to know definitely whether or not they have made any money.

There is another type of grower-florist who does the business a great deal of harm. I refer to the man who uses all his family in his business, thereby, employing little outside labor. He pays his own children a minimum of wage, in many cases giving them nothing but board and lodging, and is thereby enabled to operate and sell at a price with which another man, trying to bring up his family as any American family should be brought up, is unable to compete. This kind of grower must be educated to the possibilities of his business before we can hope to have the florists' business attain its proper dignity.

These remarks contain nothing about actual cost-production but they may perhaps start a discussion so we may hear from someone who may have proceeded farther along with this subject than I have.

An interesting discussion followed, it being the consensus of opinion that this subject of cost and overhead was of the greatest importance and should receive thorough and careful attention at the hands of the society, and that a special program of one or more sessions should be set aside for its discussion at future conventions. On motion of E. G. Hill it was ordered that a committee be appointed to investigate "Cost and Overhead," and present the result of their work at the next convention. President Totty announced he would appoint this committee later.

Thursday Afternoon Session, Aug. 22

The speaker of the afternoon was Henry G. Martin, Associate Administration Engineer of the U. S. Fuel Administration from Missouri, located at St. Louis.

The Coal Situation

Mr. Martin made an excellent impression upon the delegates as a fair-minded and conservative man of good business judgment; he made it plain to his hearers that the Government in no case desires to injure or wreck any man's business but that the dire necessities of the day compel what might seem to be, at first sight, rigorous requirements, but which are absolutely essential to the successful carrying on of the war and the shortening of the period of conflict. Every day saved means the saving of thousands of lives and many thousands of dollars of the wealth of the Nation. In its essence the talk developed nothing new so far as the florists were concerned which has not already been printed in The Exchange, save that in those States where slack or screenings were permitted to be obtained, this material must be obtained and stored by Sept. 10, although he expected an extension of time.

Following the address questions were freely asked Mr. Martin and as freely and frankly replied to by him; those taking part being Messrs. Washburn, Clift, De La Mare, E. G. Hill, C. P. Mueller and W. F. Gude. On motion of Mr. Fulmer a rising vote of thanks was extended to Mr. Martin.

Report of the National Flower Show Committee

The report of the national flower show committee was presented by the chairman, George Asmus. It is well understood by all that the show scheduled to be held in St. Louis in the Spring of 1918 had to be abandoned. Mr. Asmus gave an outline of the plans which had been formulated for an exhibition on an extensive scale and then recited the several causes which had brought about its abandonment, paying a compliment to those growers who at much expense had prepared exhibits for the occasion. It was his belief that St. Louis would prove an ideal city for such an exhibition and he hoped to live to see the day when it would have a national show.

Secretary Young took occasion at this time to return his compliments to the florists of St. Louis, stating that he had been in St. Louis practically a month attending to the details of the convention and at times had been in receipt of the greatest courtesy and hospitality; especially was he personally indebted to Fred Meinhardt, who had placed his automobile at his disposal and accompanied him daily wherever duty took him.

Fred Dorner referred to the fact that he had had the honor of being secretary of the S. A. F. and O. H. for two years and knew what the work of that office was at that time. Since then it has greatly multiplied and is today many times as large in volume. Great appreciation was due to the secretary, and Mr. Dorner moved that he be given a rising vote of thanks for his excellent work during the past year. The motion was at once promptly seconded by several members and carried by a rising and unanimous vote, Mr. Young responding in a fitting manner.

Award of Liberty Bonds

Awards of two $100 Liberty Bonds were made by Frank Friedley of Cleveland and W. J. Pilcher of St. Louis for turning into the society the largest number of new members for the year, the former securing 93 and the latter 61 members. One hundred and fifty dollars of the award was donated by President Totty and $50 by the S. A. F.

Greenhouse Longevity

Reverting to Mr. Totty's paper on Costs, C. P. Mueller raised the question as to the depreciation on greenhouses. Mr. Washburn gave it as his opinion that the average greenhouse it was 10 per cent. per annum. He further inquired how much members charged in their expense account for the depreciation of greenhouses in making up their statements for the Government. Mr. Esler inquired how much the Government allowed for depreciation in a manufacturing plant? Mr. De La Mare stated that on printing machinery a 10 per cent. allowance for depreciation was made.

E. G. Hill remarked that on the old fashioned frame greenhouse the figure might be larger but on a modern iron frame house he thought that 8 per cent. would be sufficient to cover the cost of depreciation; in some cases the ordinary greenhouse might run up as high as 16 per cent. depreciation, this being largely affected by the care in maintenance and attention to repairs.

Mr. De La Mare suggested that when the association takes up in earnest the question of cost accounting the members would no doubt learn more exactly what the depreciation is. President Totty remarked that he saw great possibilities in the carrying out of the cost and overhead program of investigation.

Mr. Hill added that he was not sure he had made sufficient allowance for depreciation in boilers, which is very great, and varies in connection with the kinds of fuel used, some descriptions of fuel being more destructive to boiler plate than others; it would be a pretty hard matter to arrive at exact and scientific figures.

The Visit to the Botanical Gardens

Was most enjoyable. The party reached there shortly before sunset, there was a fresh breeze, and the hour was propitious. There was a large number in attendance, including many local people. Three parties were formed and, under the leadership of guides, were shown over the grounds, through the greenhouses, and all points of interest, after which they retired to a pleasant nook where they found a collation in readiness of which they partook with keen appetite and enjoyment.

Director-elect Joseph H. Hill — Vice-President-elect E. A. Fetters — Director-elect C. C. Pollworth

Presentation to President Totty

Luncheon having been served the party was requested to assemble at a point in the grounds nearby when President-elect Ammann, mounting a bench, requested attention and, in a highly appreciative address extolling the work of President Totty, presented Mr. and Mrs. Totty in behalf of the convention with a magnificent solid silver dinner and tea set. President Totty upon receiving this token of good-will and esteem was quite overcome and did not attempt to make a lengthy speech. He took occasion, however, to say to the St. Louis people that he had been visiting their city for 20 years or more and had always been received with the most bounteous hospitality and always been given a splendid time. Now, at the end of this "Perfect Day," he was most delighted to receive this magnificent gift which both himself and Mrs. Totty would retain as a life-long remembrance of the occasion.

In conclusion, President Totty referred to the splendid entertainment that had been provided upon this occasion by Professor Moore and proposed a rising vote of thanks to that gentleman and his board of trustees. The motion was carried with enthusiasm and unanimity.

Mr. Pollworth as chairman then presented the report of his committee on

Final Resolutions

Whereas: The Society of American Florists and Ornamental Horticulturists is now about to adjourn a most successful and profitable meeting held in thirty-fourth annual convention in the city of St. Louis, Mo., and

Whereas: The society has entered upon a new career of usefulness through recognition of a broader conception of our duty to the public whom we serve, and to ourselves through cooperation and fraternity; and

Whereas: At this convention the accomplishments of the past year have been fully evidenced by the splendid reports of the Committee on Credits and Collections Bureau, the Finance Publicity Committee, the Committee on Publicity, and the Promotion Bureau, which not only will benefit us as members of this society but will benefit the entire craft and should enroll them rapidly in our list of membership as all will wish to help this cause; and

Whereas: We realize that the holding of this fruitful convention at St. Louis was upon the invitation of our St. Louis members who have shown by their hospitality that our choice of their city was an excellent one; therefore,

Be it Resolved: That being now about to depart to our several homes, and being mindful of the courtesies and attention shown here to ourselves, our ladies and guests, we desire to tender and place upon our permanent records an appreciation of thanks and grateful recognition of courtesies to the following: His honor Henry Kiel, mayor of St. Louis; to the St. Louis Florist Club, its officers and committees, for carrying out so well all measures looking to our comfort, convenience and pleasure while in session and after our adjournment; to the St. Louis Ladies Florists Club for special attention to our ladies, automobile ride, luncheon, reception, etc.; to the St. Louis Park Department for hall decorations and courtesies; to the Missouri Botanical Garden for reception and luncheon; to the officials of Moolah Temple where we have been so handsomely housed; to the management of the Hotel Jefferson and, finally, to the daily and technical press for accounts of our proceedings. Committee: C. C. Pollworth, Fred Lautenschlager

President Totty now declared the thirty-fourth annual convention finally adjourned and expressed the hope that by the time another year rolls around and the S. A. F. and O. H. again meet they will do so under happier national conditions.

Thus was brought to a brilliant close one of the most pleasant and business like conventions the writer has ever had the pleasure of attending.

The New Vice-President

E. A. Fetters, the Vice-president elect of the S. A. F. & O. H., was born in Detroit, Mich. He lived there until he was 18 years old and started in business with the J. M. Gasser Co. of Cleveland, O., 28 years ago. He remained with this firm in various capacities for five years until 1895, when he joined with F. M. Smith, also of the Gasser Co., in organizing the Smith & Fetters Co. of Cleveland. This firm did a successful business from the start and Mr. Fetters remained a member of it for 12 years; then, owing to ill-health, he sold out his interest to Mr. Smith.

Mr. Fetters returned to Detroit in 1906, resuming the florist's business in that city. He now operates two stores, one in the heart of the city and another in the NorthWoodward residential district. Two years ago Mr. Fetters incorporated his business, taking in with him two former employees, Henry C. Foster, EXCHANGE correspondent in Detroit and Albert Schumacher, both of whom had been with him for years. The firm took the name of Fetters' Flowers. Mr. Fetters is a Rotarian; he is also president of the Detroit Florists' Club.

Joseph H. Hill

This gentleman is the son of "everybody's" old friend, E. Gurney Hill, and he enjoys a large circle of acquaintances throughout the Western States. He has served a term as President of the American Carnation Society, and is therefore somewhat familiar with the routine of society work. Being a young man of ambition and tact he will undoubtedly leave the impress of his mental faculties on the work of the S. A. F. and O. H. during the three years of his term as a director thereof.

C. C. Pollworth

C. C. Pollworth, newly elected director of the S. A. F. and O. H. was born in Milwaukee, Wis., in 1871 and has been actively engaged in the florist's business for 25 years. He is president of the C. C. Pollworth Co. of Milwaukee, wholesale growers of cut flowers and plants, The company operates 31 greenhouses, 250ft. long, and grows plants in variety. The store and office is on City Hall Square. The main crop is Roses, Carnations and Chrysanthemums; the firm also handles a general line of supplies, bulbs, etc. Mr. Pollworth is a life member of the S. A. F. He joined the organization more than twenty years ago.

Reception by St. Louis Ladies' Florist Society

Wednesday evening the ladies of the St. Louis Florists' Society gave a reception to visiting ladies in the Moolah Temple. There were about 200 present. Dainty refreshments were served. Vocal and instrumental music, recitations and dancing composed the program for the evening's entertainment. The Misses Bruenig were called back many times on their piano duet. Miss Elsie Begem received much applause for her Italian dance as well as the Shepherd's Love dance. It was a most enjoyable evening for the visiting ladies.

Auto Ride and Banquet

The convention closed with an auto ride and dinner for the members of the S. A. F. on Friday afternoon. From a point of thorough enjoyment it was one of the prime features of the convention. The ride started from Lucas Garden, within one block of the Jefferson Hotel, promptly at 1:35 p.m. There were 60 autos handsomely decorated with flowers at the start, each containing from five to seven passengers. The itinerary of the tour embraced all places of interest in the city, including the Statler Hotel, City Hall, Lafayette Park, Cit yHospital, Anheuser-Busch Brewery, Busch Place, Tower Grove Park, Missouri Botanical Gardens, Reservoir Park, Cathedral, Forest Park, World's Fair Pavilion (where refreshments were served), Municipal Theatre, University City and Bevo Mill, reaching the end of the trip on Broadway, up to the Century Boat Club, at 6:10 o'clock. The drive was of great interest to visitors, who had the opportunity provided them by St. Louis florists to get a passing view of the notable places of interest in the city. A stop of 50 minutes was made at the Anheuser-Busch Brewery where Bevo, the new temperance beverage was tested and pronounced good. A heavy rainstorm toward the end of the drive caused a portion of itinerary to be abandoned. The Century Boat Club is situated on a bluff overlooking the Mississippi River and proved to be a most delightful place to spend the remaining portion of the evening. A splendid course dinner was served, and patriotic and popular songs were sung while the members enjoyed the feast. Imagine a few hundred enthusiastic florists of the old fashioned, hand-shaking, God-bless-you type singing "Hail, Hail, the Gang's All Here."

Richard Vincent, Jr., was the final speaker. At the conclusion of his remarks the toastmaster stated it was a splendid and most patriotic speech, and called upon the audience to rise, and as a testimonial to Mr. Vincent and the words he uttered asked everybody to sing the Star Spangled Banner.

After a few remarks by President Ammann and other speakers the day's entertainment came to a close, when a large portion of the visitors left for their various hotels and made preparations for taking the late trains to their homes and final destination.

National Association of Gardeners

There was a conference on Wednesday evening in the main hall of the Temple by the National Association of Gardeners. L. P. Jensen of St. Louis presided, and introduced Robt. Weeks, president of the association, who made the principal address of the evening. Chas. Totty spoke next and made a strong plea to the gardeners to keep their business on a high plane and predicted better conditions for the craft in the near future.

W. F. Gude, Washington, D. C., spoke on the "Restriction of Importation and Can We Replace Import Goods with American Grown Material?" The speaker was most optimistic throughout and said in a few years this country will be independent of all import stock. The various climatic conditions that exist from Maine to Florida and from the Atlantic to the Pacific Coasts would enable American growers to produce nearly all, if not all, such stock as we have been importing in the past. The florists and gardeners of this country have to make up their minds to work along these lines and as soon as they do so the restriction of all import stock will cease to be a handicap to the trade.

R. C. Kerr, Houston, Tex., and Prof. H. B. Dorner of the Illinois State University addressed the conference. Benjamin Hammond, Beacon, N. Y., took for his subject, "Where There is No Vision the People Perish." He referred to the beauty of plants and flowers in connection with the home life of all people. Flowers indicated the highest type of civilization; where you saw a home with plenty of flowers on the lawn and the porches you might rely on the fact that the owners of that home were citizens of refinement. On the other hand, where the surroundings of a home were ill kept people could draw their own conclusions.

It was to be regretted that Martin C. Ebel, the secretary of the association, was unable to be present owing to illness. The chairman spoke highly of the good work he is doing for the association.

L. P. Jensen spoke of the great work done in former years by the late W. R. Smith of Washington, D. C., and said that much of the present status of the association was due to his early efforts. In commemoration of his memory all members arose and stood with bowed heads for a few seconds.

President Weeks called attention to the fact that the next meeting of the association would be held in Cleveland, Ohio, Sept. 24 to 26, and invited all present to attend this meeting and make it one of the best in the history of the association.

Save Delay—Use Auto Delivery

Advertisers who are in a position to deliver stock by long distance automobile fifty to one hundred miles, say, will do well by advertising that fact in the columns of The Florists' Exchange. Under agreement for delivery at a certain time it would be easily possible to deliver several orders in the one run. Long distance automobile delivery is taking its place among our commercial utilities. All who can avail themselves of the service, either the advertiser delivering the goods or the customer going for the goods, will find this method of considerable benefit. A letter from the Hillcrest Greenhouses, this week's issue, confirms our statement. This method will eliminate freight delays and vastly promote local business and, what is perhaps best of all, insure receipt of absolutely fresh stock.

Florists Help Save Wheat Crop

The Fargo (N. D.) florists, including the Shotwell Floral Co., the Briggs Floral Co., and the Smedley Floral Co., closed their stores on Monday, Aug. 19, to help conserve the Nation's food supply by joining the employees of the other stores and factories of Fargo in shocking the ripe grain in the great Wheat fields of North Dakota. As farm help is scarce it was up to the city people to lend a hand and they certainly made good.

It is estimated that city shocking crews in all shocked more than 3500 acres of grain, most of the work being done after 5 o'clock evenings or on Sundays. The florists did their full share. In celebration of the successful work done the volunteer shockers of Fargo held a parade, in which 1500 of them marched in their working clothes, the different divisions carrying appropriate banners.

Service Flag of Immortelles

Paul C. Hahn, the Superior ave. florist, Cleveland, Ohio, is specializing in service flags made of Immortelles, and finds that they take well. After conceiving the idea Mr. Hahn had a few specimens made up and displayed them in his store window, where they attracted much attention and had a brisk sale. They are placed on the graves of parents having sons in the Army. Now the Immortelle service flag is a fixture in the Hahn store.

There is a splendid idea here for development and it can be extended to flags for all uses indoors, such as in stores, hotels, public halls and schools, railway stations, lodges and all places of public gathering. Flags for all purposes are in the greatest demand in history now, flag makers working overtime to supply the call. That florists can share this profit by making flags of their own wares has been demonstrated by the preceding. J. McL.

The National Plant, Flower and Fruit Guild

This organization is sending out an attractive circular which has on the front cover the title "Enlist your Garden in the Service of our Soldiers' Camps," urging contributions of flowers, plants, sod or money for beautifying the cantonments. Maurice Fuld is national chairman Soldiers Camp Gardens, and is asking the support of the trade. The guild's national office is at 70 Fifth ave., New York City.

Practical Cooperation

Louisville, Ky., has inaugurated a one-delivery system. For particulars read page 284, issue of Aug. 24. The florists of that city have joined their equipment and inaugurated the one cooperative truck delivery, thus if a number of florists have orders for delivery at the same address (funerals, weddings, socials, etc.), the one delivery wagon calls at all their establishments, taking the entire lot to destination at one time. In view of the unparalleled call upon the florist due to the present and approaching shortage of labor, this mutal cooperation in delivery should be taken up without delay by all retailers throughout the country.

National Publicity Campaign

At the St. Louis Convention of the society held last week, the work of the committees having the campaign in charge was approved and endorsed, and the enthusiasm shown argues well for a speedy completion of the fund projected; $50,000 a year for four years.

The results already secured and the lines of action determined upon and in process of carrying out, as they appeared in the different reports, were sufficient to show that the objects of the campaign were being attained, and that the fund was being expended in the interests of everybody in the trade.

And, right here, we may reflect upon one feature of the campaign which is most prominent—the fund is used as it is collected in so far as the requirements of the first year are concerned. The committees have not waited for the point of completion; they have done the best that was possible with the money available. This is not one of those funds of fable which reached fabulous amounts, only the interest upon their investment being used for their prime objects. Every dollar of the florists fund is being used in its entirety for the objects of the campaign, and in the main these objects center upon the individual benefit of every florist in the land. Therefore, whatever a florist contributes is given for his own benefit, and the amount should be considered as so applied.

The $50,000 fund required to cover the publicity plans for 1918 is not yet fully subscribed, but just a little more enthusiasm on the part of those who have not yet given the importance of the campaign their full consideration should suffice to insure its completion at a very early date, and the committees most earnestly appeal for this final help. Let it be forthcoming.

Snap Shots

Practical illustration of the essentiality of flowers: On the tour of the St. Louis Florists' Club the policemen on the routes were handed sprays of Gladioli, resulting in the florists' touring party having the right of way on the streets of St. Louis.

President-elect Ammann has already established a reputation as an orator. He bids fair to go down into history as the orator president of the S. A. F. and O. H.

Mrs. Julius Roehrs is the ladies' parliamentarian.

Mrs. J. A. Peterson, the president-elect of the Ladies' S. A. F., is one of the popular members of the society, and a large increase of memberships is looked for during her administration.

The trade press was ably represented by Barker, Kift, Howard, De La Mare and Morton. Faulkner and Shaw were the absentees.

The only members who now hold the honor of regular attendance from the second convention to the last are John Evans and John G. Esler.

The Cupples dream of an Arcadian Highway, eloquently outlined by Mrs. Lillian Stuart, may be possible of fulfillment when this war is over. When examined carefully, it is not so much of a dream after all.

The representative of the coal administration satisfied everybody that its rulings were necessary.

Patriotic speeches and patriotic resolutions were the order of the day. A telegram was received from President Wilson thanking the florists for their loyalty.

President Totty maintained a standard of presidential efficiency.

Not in the 34 years of the existence of the S. A. F. and O. H. have its meetings been so well attended and has such interest been manifested in its proceedings.

The F. T. D. meeting was a dead-in-earnest affair. Its success is more than assured, and it will be a valuable asset in the push to save ornamental horticulture from wreck and ruin.

The western trip of the New York Florists' Club's contingent was a sociable outing from start to finish. The weather was delightfully cool en route.

"They gathered at the river," from San Antonio to Winnipeg, from the Rockies to the Atlantic shore, and a hearty handshake with loyal brothers was worth the trip, and more.

Five hundred dollars by the S. A. F. to buy gas for the horticultural motor cars in France was a practical act of patriotism.

The Florists' Hail Association had the largest and most enthusiastic meeting in its history.

Those who prophesied that the Ladies' S. A. F. had gone into a state of "innocuous desuetude" should have been present at its meeting. The room was barely large enough to hold the enthusiastic ladies present.

The business meeting of the S. A. F. and O. H. talked of for years materialized at St. Louis. For promptness in starting the meetings, steady attendance and interest manifested it surpassed all previous conventions since that one held in Washington, D. C., in 1892.

J. S. Wilson of Des Moines, Ia., is the new man on the Hail Association directorate.

The auto ride for ladies on Wednesday afternoon was one of great enjoyment. Automobiles left Moolah Temple at 2 o'clock. Forty autos comprised the party, with an average of six ladies to a machine. The drive was through the western and residential portion of the city, including a run through the famous Jefferson barracks, with luncheon at Sunset Inn, returning to the Temple at 6:30 p.m. in time for the reception by the St. Louis Ladies' Florists' Society that night.

"Near Business"

Two disappointments were noted at the convention: one was the failure to meet the genial Phil Foley, of Chicago and the other was the absence of the exhibit of the Eureka Gardens of California.

John G. Esler, Saddle River, N. J., left St. Louis with the Chicago party Friday night. Judging from the temperature in St. Louis and on the train Mr. Esler did not feel that he would be called on to adjust any losses from hailstorms in the near future. His trip was one of business and pleasure combined.

In the trade exhibit the Nicotine Mfg. Co., St. Louis, staged an exhibit of its various insecticide preparations that came in too late to be recorded in our list of trade exhibits last week.

J. J. Kairns, representing Henry A. Dreer Co., Philadelphia, was "on the job" all the time. He sold his entire exhibit and took many orders besides.

The American Bulb Co., had on display the largest Lilium rubrum bulbs ever exhibited; only eighty to a case. This firm's exhibits of Freesia bulbs was also interesting, especially in the mammoth sizes. Several vases of Gladioli blooms enlivened the bulb display.

In preserved material the display of the Ove Gnatt Co., La Porte, Ind., showed what can be done with American grown products for decorative art. The imported Cycas and Ruscus are not new; it is the preservation and dveing of the natural foliage and grasses that make them singularly attractive.

Allie Zech and Matt Mann, of the well known wholesale house of Zech & Mann started by auto for the convention from Chicago. Muddy roads interfered with their itinerary so that at Bloomington they were compelled to abandon the gasoline route and complete the trip by steam cars and trolley. Notwithstanding the inconveniences of the trip both landed at the convention hall Tuesday afternoon and probably had as much enjoyment out of the convention as if nothing had happened on the trip.

Mrs. Julius Roehrs, Rutherford, N. J., retiring president of Ladies Society of American Florists was presented with a silver platter by the ladies of the organization. This was highly appreciated by Mrs. Roehrs, who exhibited it to the convention visitors at the headquarters in the Hotel Jefferson the same evening. It bore the monogram of the recipient.

Vaughan's Seed Store's exhibit of Gladioli proved to be one of the main features of the trades display as far as natural flowers were concerned. There were about 68 varieties, many of them being seedlings of the firm's own raising. In the new varieties, Owosso, a pale yellow, was admired. It is a light yellow of Schwaben type, without the latter's throat markings.

Chicago was well represented at the Convention. The "bunch" were in evidence at all the business sessions, and social gatherings during the entire progress of the convention. The "booster committee" of the Florists' Club certainly put in some good work in getting such a large attendance from Chicago.

On the auto ride Friday the view from the World's Fair pavilion was highly admired. The pavilion overlooked a valley, on the slopes of which are numerous beds of Coleus, Alternantheras, and other bright foliage plants, that lead the eye down to the valley in which a chain of small lakes gives a picturesque touch to the landscape.

Otto Lang, Dallas, Texas, came to Chicago after the convention to complete his Fall purchases of plants and supplies. A. R. King, Winnipeg, Man., also stopped over and made many purchases from the wholesale supply houses.

The exhibit of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., eclipsed everything in the line of supplies exhibited. Houses in this line in former years that made large convention exhibits were either absent altogether or occupied only a very small space.

Carl Hagenburger, West Mentor, O., was unable to stage his exhibit until the second day, owing to delay in the transportation of his plants. The two new Solanums, Cleveland and Orange Queen, are popular with the trade and will eventually probably put the older varieties off the market entirely.

Not to be outdone by the St. Louis Wholesale Cut Flower Co., which distributed a convention button, the Windler Wholesale Floral Co., presented a metal badge to all visitors with the catchy inscription "Windler's Smiling Service."

August H. Hummert, president of the St. Louis Florists' Club was indefatigable in his attention to visitors. He was proud of the fact that the club now has 115 members in the S. A. F., which entitles him, as president, to a seat on the board of directors.

A. F. Amling, Maywood, Ill., motored to the convention, bringing a party of friends as well as Mrs. Amling and their son. W. A. Kennedy and his wife, of Milwaukee, Wis., also came by auto.

G. H. Pring, and Alex Lurie, of the Missouri Botanical Gardens made excellent guides in showing the visitors through the grounds and greenhouses of the garden on Thursday evening. The water garden, composed of three pools filled with hybrid water Lilies forms a feature of the display at the garden during the Summer months. Both night and day blooming Nymphæas are represented in the collection. In Tower Grove Park, close to the garden, the night blooming Lilies are in a separate pool, which is lighted in the evenings by electricity.

There are some 11,000 species of plants growing in the garden. The hardy forms, numbering about 5000 are distributed in various collections outdoors. The remaining species, approximately 6000 in all, obtained from all parts of the world, being mostly tropical and sub-tropical forms, are distributed in the various conservatories. The entire force of the garden, from Director Geo. T. Moore, down lent their energies well to the occasion and helped in a wonderful way to make the 34th annual convention the complete success that it was.

These totals are equivalent to an insurance upon 43,729,269 sq. ft. of glass.

The number of members at date of closing this report is 1,589.

The total receipts for the year ending Aug. 1, 1918, and including last year's balance, as per treasurer's report, were $58,161.01.

The total expenditures, as per treasurer's report, for the year ending Aug. 1, 1918, were $38,715.96.

The cash balance on hand is $19,445.05 of which $1,251.25 belongs to the reserve fund.

The reserve fund now amounts to $44,251.25, of which $43,000 is invested in Liberty and municipal bonds, and $1,251.35 in the hands of the treasurer.

The amount of interest collected on bank deposits for the year is $239.78.

The amount of interest collected on reserve fund investments is $1,930.00.

Two thousand six hundred and seventy-five losses have been adjusted since the organization of the F. H. A., involving a total expenditure of over $435,000.00.

An equivalent of 83,315 sq. ft. of single thick glass was broken by hail during the past year, for which the association paid $4,165.73. An equivalent of 364,102 sq. ft. of double thick glass was broken, which cost the association $25,487.18.

A few notifications of losses are the only liabilities of the association.

Notwithstanding unfavorable trade conditions, the Florists' Hail Ass'n has increased its area of glass insured, by over 700,000 sq. ft., and its members have reason to congratulate themselves upon the handsome balance in the hands of the treasurer, and the strong condition of the association's reserve fund, which is the back-bone and strength of the association.

What effect war conditions may have upon the future of the Florists' Hail Ass'n, is problematical; but its foundations are securely planted, and those who cling to the ship, will have no cause for regret.

During the past year, the Florists' Hail Ass'n has been called upon to mourn the loss of its Treasurer, the Hon. Joseph Heacock, who through many years of efficient service has proved himself to be an upright and honest official.

JOHN G. ESLER, Secretary.

The treasurer's report shows a balance on hand July 31, 1917, of $9,932.01; the receipts for 1918 were $48,229 and the expenditures for the year $38,715.96, leaving a balance on July 31, 1918, of $19,445.05.

Diseased Asters

About 10 years ago I started raising Asters for market. For several years they grew finely, producing large, healthy plants and fine, large flowers on long, strong stems. About the fourth year I noticed some plants of a light yellowish color. These would grow up and have buds, which would half develop into sickly, yellowish flowers. This would happen only a few weeks before flowering time. Ever since then every year more and more plants have been affected in this way until this year I judge 60 per cent. of the plants are in this condition. I buy the best seeds obtainable and different kinds of early, medium and late. This year I also bought seeds of different dealers but there is no difference at all, so the trouble must lie at home. I sow the seeds in a Violet house from the last of March until the middle of April and transplant to another bench as soon as large enough. I put them in a different place in the field every year, planting 12in. apart each way and keep them clean of weeds and cultivate frequently till the buds are quite large. I always harrow in a good dressing of fertilizer some time before planting. I have tried them on light and heavy soil with the same results. Also if we have a wet or dry season, it makes no difference.—H. S., N. Y.

—The Asters described by the inquirer have a disease called the yellows. This disease is not caused by any organism, either fungus or bacterium; is not communicated from one plant to the other, or carried over in the seed. It is the result of a sort of indigestion of the plant which seems to be brought on by an irregular supply of soil moisture. The remedy then is a constant supply of soil moisture which the plants must have. Soil moisture must be produced in Aster growing, artificially if necessary, and may be conserved by frequent cultivation or when that becomes impracticable by mulching the plants. Yellows rarely, if ever, appear when Asters are grown in a greenhouse where moisture conditions are under good control. J. H. S.

Our Florist Soldiers

The Editor would be glad to receive and publish items of information concerning the lads who have joined our country's naval and military forces.

Wm. J. Smart, until recently Chicago representative of Weeber & Don, New York City, writes from an eastern military camp that his company expects to go overseas within a few days.

Edward Goldenstein, well known in the Chicago seed trade, writes from Camp Grant, Rockford, Ill., that he expects very soon to leave for the front.

Geo. De Muth, formerly with Geo. B. Hart, of Rochester, N. Y., is now stationed at Camp Dix. He expects to leave shortly for overseas duty. Thos. J. Sullivan of Rochester, according to news received, has arrived safely on the other side.

We regret to learn that Wm. S. Gannon, brother of Martin Gannon, Philadelphia, Pa., and with the A. E. F., has been seriously wounded.

Carl Hack, son of Wm. Hack, grower of Ben Davis, Ind., has entered the aviation department at Camp Taylor.

Lieut. David C. Boyle, formerly with the M. Rice Co., Philadelphia, Pa., is now in France and a recent communication states that he is well.

Harry Sunderbaus, formerly of C. E. Critchell's force, Cincinnati, O., is now in the Army, and is stationed at Columbus Barracks, Columbus, O.

Chas. Kohn, well known on the Chicago wholesale flower market, is in Company D, 326th Infantry, France.

The accompanying illustration shows Private George S. Gouldman, who before his enlistment, was employed by the Louise Flower Shop, Washington, D. C., as decorator and designer. Private Gouldman enlisted on July 6. He is attached to the 224th Company, Marine Barracks, Paris Island, S. C. He is enthusiastic about army life and praises the efficient organization of the great camp in which he is receiving his training. "Everything moves with precision," he writes. "We have set hours for work and play and the instructors certainly possess the knack of instilling plenty of 'pep' and enthusiasm into the recruits. I'm glad I enlisted in the Marine Corps and all I want now is to finish my training and catch the first transport to France."

Sam Giddias, formerly with the Alpha Floral Co. of Pittsburgh, Pa., expects to leave Camp Meade shortly for overseas.

Lange, has been assigned to a submarine as a first class gunner's mate and expects to see active service soon. Ragnar Swenson, formerly with Littlefield the Florist, is reported as severely wounded in France. Peter Dorey and Jack McCullough, formerly of Lange's force, and Geo. Moore and William Higgins of Randall's, are also in the Service. Peter Dorey is located at Camp Devens in Ayer, Mass., while Private Moore is with the cavalry in Texas. Wiliam Higgins is a member of the Aviation Corps.

Otto Walter, Cleveland florist, at Clarke st., has been notified to report for duty about Sept. 1. There are about 50 members of the trade in the Service from Cleveland and the vicinity.

Corporal Theo. J. Morris, connected with the firm of Morris & Snow, seedsmen of Los Angeles, enlisted in the aviation section of the Army last October, and is a mechanic in No. 505 Aero Squadron, just now stationed at Camp Greene, Charlotte, N. C.

Louis Pontrich, the fourth son of Nick Pontrich of Louisville, Ky., to be called to the Colors, will leave shortly for the training camp. Mr. Pontrich has three more sons who will come in the draft when the age limit is changed.

Dave Walker of Louisville, Ky., has been called in the draft and expects to go to camp shortly.

The third son of P. D. Barnhart of Sawtelle, Cal., has been accepted as a surgeon in the Army and has already been in service for nearly two months at a camp stationed near San Diego, Cal. It will be recalled that another son, Harvey Barnhart, is doing wonderful work in leading patriotic chorus singing in camps and cantonments.

A telegram has been received by Mr. and Mrs. S. Stephens of Columbus, Ohio, announcing the safe arrival overseas of their son, Walter J. He was formerly manager of Stephens & Son.

W. Walker of the Munk Floral Co., Columbus, Ohio, has joined the Navy, and Ed. Machin of the same concern the Army. The latter is at Camp Sherman.

Joseph Durban and Ray Eck of Cincinnati, Ohio, will both leave for camp this week.

Mr. Leckas, florist of Indianapolis, Ind., has given up business and joined the Army.

Dewey A. Kruckeberg, son of H. W. Kruckeberg of Los Angeles, member of one of our most perfectly trained aviation squadrons, has left for France. It is expected this squadron will shortly be heard from at the front and to good account. "Dude," as he is affectionately called by his comrades, has our best wishes.

Alphonso Rigo, of Rigo Bros., New York City, is with the Allies at the Front. An interesting letter has been received from him by his brother, Paul Rigo, details of which will be found in the New York newsletter.

Attilo Dagnino

We regret to learn that Attilo Dagnino, former employee of the American Florist Shop of San Francisco, Cal., was killed in action in France on July 19. He enlisted in October, 1917.

Pittsburgh Florist Held in German Prison

Private Chas. Dunn of 429 Island ave., McKees Rocks, Pa., a member of the Tenth Worcestershire Regiment, British Army, has been a prisoner in Camp Lemberg, Germany, since April 10, according to word received from Private Dunn by his wife, Mrs. Caroline Dunn, this week. Private Dunn enlisted in the British Army at the local British recruiting station on Aug. 28, 1917, and sailed for England Sept. 25, 1917. He had enlisted in the Canadian Army two months after the war broke out and was discharged seven months later because of physical disability. He was born in England and served in the British Army before coming to this country. He was engaged in the florist's business in McKees Rocks before his enlistment. Mrs. Dunn continues the business during his absence. N. McC.

Southern States

Houston, Texas

There were a number of funerals, which kept the florists busy. As the season is earlier here than in the North, orders are already being placed for Pansy and Daisy seeds and seeds for other early Spring flowers.

Mr. Kerr is expected back at the end of this week from his trip to St. Louis, and will likely have a good talk to make to the next meeting of the Houston Hort. Club. The store was rushed with funeral work. The Roses from the R. C. Kerr Co. are coming in well now, the stems getting better, Mr. Eichling saying that some of them are 16in. to 18in. Other flowers used are largely Bluebells and Asters. Shipments of Carnations and Roses are still being received.

Mr. Hewitt of the Brazos Greenhouses says that he has been finding it very difficult to get stock to supply the demand. He will endeavor to give all the space he can to growing stock which he has usually bought. Mr. Hewitt on a recent trip to the Glenwood Cemetery passed the city greenhouse and was much impressed with the appearance of the grounds, which have been converted by Mr. Brock, within the space of a year, from a barren stretch to a place of great beauty. C. L. B.

Washington, D. C.

The Market

Market conditions have been spasmodic, both with respect to supply and demand. On one day there would be a glut of flowers of all varieties; another day would find the market comparatively empty. Easter Lilies, which have been entirely off the market, are with us again. For several days there were no Gladioli; now there are several growers bringing in quantities of this flower. One grower, apparently a very wise man, delayed planting until late, and now his entire crop is coming and the flowers are good, meeting with a ready sale. An interesting point with respect to Gladioli at this time is the fact that higher prices are prevailing than last year. Good stock brings as high as $6 per 100; few flowers go below $4 per 100. There are two reasons for this: There is a heavier demand all around this year, and last year the market was glutted. Good Americas are to be had and some fine red and yellow Gladioli were offered.

The Aster season locally is nearing an end, many of the growers being cut out entirely. Some early Cosmos was displayed, but it is not good. It will be several weeks yet before the local Cosmos makes its debut. Tritoma is available for window displays and basket work.

Roses are now in short crop and are largely of the usual Summer quality; tight buds and short stems prevail. Little can be said of Carnations. A few Dahlias make their appearance once in a while, but this is not Dahlia weather. Orchids are so scarce that the wholesalers are afraid to accept orders for fear they cannot effect deliveries.

Notes

W. C. Lawrence of Atlanta, Ga., and F. F. Kerpen of Jersey City, N. J., were among recent visitors.

Laborers, porters, janitors and unskilled workers employed in Washington by florists and mercantile establishments generally will have to seek war work under an edict of the Community Labor Board of the United States Employment Service of the District of Columbia, which has declared as non-essential or non-war work the unskilled labor employed in a number of industries and establishments. The board announces that the men who are released from these may apply at the local office of the United States Employment Service, 1410 Pennsylvania ave., N. W., where they will be given employment in essential war work. It is also stated that the board expects employers voluntarily to release such men so that they may be transferred to war work without formal notice from the board. E. A. D.

Louisville, Ky.

Kentucky Society of Florists will meet Sept. 4, regular monthly meeting.

Business has been dull due to the usual Midsummer lull, but indications point to improvement shortly. With the growers the extremely hot weather has affected growing plants and much watering was required. However, the growers report that, considering weather conditions, plants are in good shape and they are looking forward to a good business this Fall and Winter.

The regular monthly meeting of the Kentucky Society of Florists will be held Sept. 4, at which time the main topic of discussion will be the proposed curtailment of deliveries. The local florists have agreed to the plan of centralizing the delivery system and all that remains to be done is the working out of the system in the best possible way.

In the Service

Louis Pontrich, the fourth son of Nick Pontrich to be called to the Service, has been ordered to report and will shortly leave for the training camp. Mr. Pontrich has three more sons who will come in the draft, when the age limit is changed, and he says that they are all ready to go at any time. Louis Pontrich has been in the florist's business at Richmond, Ky., for some time, with two of his brothers, one of whom is already in the Service, and the departure of Louis will leave the entire business in the care of the third brother, who, Mr. Pontrich says, may have to go in the Army if the age limit is raised, in which event the place at Richmond would be closed up.

Dave Walker, son of William Walker of William Walker & Son, who was called in the draft and afterward sent back, has received another call to report for limited service and expects shortly to go to camp.

George Schulz, of the Jacob Schulz Co., is spending his vacation in Cincinnati and is expected back in a few days.

Pontrich Frank, 60 years old, died at his home in St. Matthews, Ky., recently. For the past 34 years he has been connected with the Nanz & Neuner Co., at St. Matthews. He was a cousin of Nick Pontrich and Simon Pontrich. O. V. N. S.

Florists' Telegraph Delivery

In our issue of Aug. 24 we gave a fairly complete synopsis of what proved to be a really wonderful meeting when it is considered that it was just intended to be a get-together gathering, preparatory to the annual convention slated for Oct. 8, and no one expected such a genuine outburst of enthusiasm, nor such a proportionately large attendance from among the delegates of the S. A. F. No wonder then that the officers of this association felt particularly jubilant over the enthusiasm manifested.

Mr. Gude Makes Some Telling Points

Mr. Gude prefaced his written address with bright extempore remarks, elicited by the round of hand clapping which greeted him on his rising to speak. The written word may be a fairly faithful chronicler, but it cannot convey the same satisfaction as the word heard, especially from the tongue of such an impressive speaker as President Wm. F. Gude. Some of his impromptu talk is here reproduced.

Ladies and gentlemen of the F. T. D.: I greet you all. I do not quite understand the purport of this wonderful ovation here this morning, but I wish to assure you from the bottom of my heart that I appreciate it. If in my official capacity I happen to be able to do something to elevate the florist business, why it is done from absolute pleasure and not merely from a feeling of duty. Some of you may think that I am working very hard. I am not. While some of you think that I am working hard, I am doing it for the fun of the thing, just as if I were on the golf links or the baseball field. In playing the game I am playing for the fun that I get out of it, and incidentally the good that I can do for my fellowman. That is my pleasure (applause). * * * I want to say to those who are responsible for this magnificent welcome here this morning, and I challenge anybody to contradict the statement that I am going to make, that flowers speak a louder welcome than any words ever penned; and I want to thank from the bottom of my heart, in behalf of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association, those who are responsible for the magnificent preparations made here this morning as evidenced by the superb flowers presented as you see them right here. (Referring to the magnificent floral display on the stage.) (Applause.)

[President Gude's written address was given last week.]

All of you present I believe know that a few years ago the F. T. D. took on as it were new life. Some reference has been made here to the retailers, the wholesalers, the commission men, etc.; but do not get away from one fact, that the F. T. D. stands for the last word, and that last word is service on the part of the grower and the manufacturer to the final consumer, the purchaser, and all goes to the betterment of mankind. * * * The F. T. D. has grown large enough and important enough to hold a convention of its own. Originally it was the outgrowth of the mother society, the S. A. F. and O. H., and today, to the best of my knowledge and belief, every member of this association is also a member of the S. A. F., and I hope that condition of things will continue, because in union there is strength. This has been more exemplified in the last 12 months than ever before. * * *

F. T. D. Meeting, Cleveland, October 8 and 9

You might divide all retailers into two classes. One class would be made up of those who have made it a habit to attend the annual meetings of the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association, and the other class would be of those who have not attended the meetings of the Association.

The former will need no particular urging to be on hand at Cleveland next October, while it is expected that a large number of the latter will be there, as undoubtedly the benefits of F. T. D. association are being more largely appreciated day by day.

At St. Louis, last week, where the F. T. D. held a rousing meeting, Fred C. W. Brown, one of the association's keen and energetic members, assured the retailers that those who came to Cleveland in October must expect to leave a suggestion there, as well as carry away many valuable ones.

To foster this spirit, Secretary Albert Pochelon, of the F. T. D., through an advertisement on another page of this issue, offers, on behalf of the association, fifty dollars for the best suggestion that will make for the "improvement and betterment" of the work of the association. If you have an idea, read the advertisement and follow it up with a suggestion.

Florists' Telegraph Delivery Meeting

Continued

Secretary Pochelon Offers Worthy Suggestions

Secretary Albert Pochelon followed Mr. Gude, offering a number of suggestions. The first was that in regard to the emblem. He thought it would be the greatest possible mistake to change the emblem, at the same time suggesting that it can be improved upon, without doubt, from an artistic standpoint. He considered it more representative than the new design now submitted. The real reason for changing the emblem, he said, was to produce something that would cut out the word "telegraph" so it would not look as if they were working for the telegraph companies. The cost of producing the new emblem, too, will be found more expensive. He suggested that the committee work on this matter and that it be brought up again at Cleveland, so it can be decided one way or the other.

Mr. Pochelon laid special emphasis on the work of the credit clearing house and urged the prompt payment of bills. If one member owes another member a bill more than 45 days, said bill should be sent in to the F. T. D. immediately and not be held back six months or sometimes a year or more. As soon as the bill comes into the F. T. D. headquarters, it has to be paid to the F. T. D. office; the debtor can owe only one bill to that office, else automatically he ceases to be a member. Secretary Pochelon called for cooperation in the endeavor to get lines on the credit standing of the members and those with whom they transacted business. This information should be sent in to the main office so as to make it useful for all members. The idea was to gather information so that everything necessary could be found under one set of covers—"then you have something behind you that will do you a lot of good and also help the other fellow." He sketched an outline of the work which they would be called on to put through at the Cleveland meeting, and called upon each member for cooperation, this being as essential as money.

As previously mentioned Fred C. W. Brown gave a detailed report of the work of his committee and of the manner in which they had been led to make their selection, leaving it to the association, however, to come to a final decision at the October meeting. He felt assured that the Cleveland meeting was going to be the best ever held, and the ideas of all members were needed in reaching that consummation.

Irwin Bertermann Offers Three Tributes

Irwin Bertermann, an ex-president of the association, offered three tributes: First—To the most live bunch that has ever been organized in the United States, or in any other country, the F. T. D. Second—To its officers, the best or equal to the best of any association. Third—To the memory of the late John A. Valentine, the florist who had no peer in the history of that profession in this country and who was the first president of the F. T. D.

At President Gude's request all arose and bowed their heads in token of respect for their lamented ex-President John A. Valentine of Denver, Colo.

William L. Rock, treasurer, was called upon but had nothing particular to say except that he disliked to see any change in the present emblem of the F. T. D., although he, with Mr. Pochelon, admitted it could bear improvement. The public has become familiar with it. Why change it? Likewise some had proposed a change in the name of the association itself. But with this also the public has become acquainted, so why change it?

Prompt Billing Should Be Followed Out

President Gude again took up the matter of the laxity of many of the members in sending in bills for the telegraphed orders. He maintained that after an order has been received and filled, the bill should follow immediately; if it is not paid by the 10th of the following month a duplicate of the bill should be sent to the secretary of the F. T. D. "It is very easy to do that, but the tendency is to let it drift and then talk about hard times. When you have a note coming due in bank you look over your books to see if you cannot find somebody that owes you something, then you content yourself with paying interest on the note and having it renewed; whereas if you had promptly collected the monies due you from the fellows that owe you the money you could have paid the note in full and your credit would have been better at the bank."

Flowers in Honor of Our Crusaders

Mr. Gude then took up the elucidation of a movement which had met with splendid success in Canada, which is this: "The moment that information comes from abroad that some dear one has passed out on the other side fighting for you and for me, for glory and for our freedom, think how much good we can do by sending a bunch of flowers to the nearest relative. And right there she feels that your sympathies are with her in the sacrifice that has been made by a member of that family. Can you imagine anything sweeter than that?" Just how to work this out and make it of service, make it one of the biggest things that has been done in the world, so far as expressing sentiment with flowers is concerned, I leave with you. I do not know just how to present the subject but I am throwing this out as a thought for each of you to take home with you, and when you come to Cleveland, at that meeting bring something tangible, something in a substantial form in order that it may be put into practice. This idea is already working in Canada, I am told, and I have written there for information. I believe this is a subject which if properly handled will bear wonderful fruit, not only financially, but for the good that we can do for our fellowman, and to mother, the sweetest being that ever lived. (Applause.)

After Mr. Ammann had spoken, as previously noted, A. R. King of Winnipeg elucidated the idea which is being worked out in Canada. On reading the notice of the death or serious wounding of any of these personal friends, he sends to the nearest relative a box of flowers expressing sympathy. The idea has been enlarged upon and has been taken up by the churches where memorial services are held. The public has taken up the idea on a large scale. It is expected to have a lasting effect upon the florist trade, if properly developed, because even after the war is over similar conditions are going to exist, and it is the privilege of the florist to instruct and educate the public along the lines of the appropriate expression of the tender sentiments. It offers an avenue wherein the most precious sentiments of the heart can find expression, and the effect will be marvelous. Anniversaries are celebrated in the churches, sometimes several on the same day, and the pews of the families concerned are decorated with flowers as well as the altar; there is no limit to the idea. To be carried out effectively, however, calls for cooperative effort by the florists as a body, because through them can be best impressed upon the public the sentimental ideas which can be conveyed through the medium of flowers.

Concluding, Mr. King stated he hoped all would take home with them the few pointers he had given and work them out, as to how best educate the public along these lines.

R. C. Kerr then told of the work which was being done in Houston in connection with Red Cross work. For the purpose of distribution the Red Cross will have special boxes printed; that is the florists will not use their individual boxes.

Uniform Commission

President Gude called attention to the fact that in order to obtain business some florists were offering a 25 per cent. commission in violation of the 20 per cent. commission established by the association. It is not right and should be frowned down on. "We can all be fair and honest, and if some one wants to throw a brick the chances are that brick will come back and land on his own toes."

"Service" Should be Given at All Costs

Discussion then ensued on a suggestion to place a minimum on telegraph delivery orders, but as brought out, even though orders had occasionally to be filled at a loss this had to be borne in the endeavor to uphold "service" as the first essential in this special work.

Mr. Gude pointed out that should a customer desire a 25c. Shamrock delivered from Washington to Los Angeles for St. Patrick's Day, and the customer was willing to pay the $1 charge for the telegram, he would not be justified in charging that man $3. This was simply a matter of service, but in the long run would be found to pay the best.

Pochelon Wants Large Membership—Also "Service"

In furtherance of a larger membership and the filling of small orders, Mr. Pochelon said: "Mr. Young's trip has illustrated the fact that personal contact is the only way to get people interested; you have to go and see and talk with them. We have been trying to increase membership for seven years by correspondence, and have tried our very best in that way to get members in towns of 5000 and over. Why will not each one of you, whenever he sends an order to a town of 5000, say in your letter to the florist to whom you send that order, 'Why don't you join the F. T. D.?' Apply that pressure in every case where you send an order to a non-member, and we would soon have members in the smaller towns—but we do not take the time.

"As to small orders, of course we should not encourage them, but on the other hand where people have not the means and cannot afford to spend more money why forbid their expressing their sentiment, which is just as dear to them as to the one who can spend $20 or $25 on an order? I bet I can go in your store tomorrow morning, Mr. Green, and buy a dollar's worth of flowers and you will deliver them. What is the difference whether that order comes to you by a customer who personally gives it to you or by a messenger who carries a telegram, except that in the latter case you lose 20 per cent., which, however, you get back when you send an order the other way? I know of a well-known florist who said that he would not accept any order less than $4, and who put out ads. in the large city wherein he was located advertising delivery of potted plants all over that great big town for $1 a pot. Yet he did not want to take an order for a $2 plant because it came by wire and the message was handed him by a telegraph messenger whom he did not have to interview or spend a minute's time on; all he had to do was to make his own selection from his stock and send it out, certainly less trouble that to wait on an ordinary customer who dropped into his store. This idea of 'I will not bother with small orders' is not right; in this matter of sentiment we ought to cater to the rich and poor alike. These little orders in many cases have brought big results, and have meant later large orders. There is a valuable advertising feature in this F. T. D. business that should not be overlooked; you are advertising at both ends, in the city where the order is delivered and in the city from which the order comes. So do not throw down small orders—but don't encourage them needlessly!" (Applause.)

Still More in Favor of "Service"

In furtherance of the idea of service Mr. Gude related an incident of a young lady in a seminary at Washington who wanted one short stem American Beauty Rose delivered once a week for 50c. Mr. Gude was inclined to turn the order down, because in February and March a 50c. American Beauty Rose is hard to get and, if gotten, is apt to be unsatisfactory. Finally Mr. Gude declined the order, but in due course received a letter from a gentleman in Minneapolis representing a million dollar concern who said that he liked Mr. Gude's flowers and liked his service and reputation, and did not like to trade elsewhere, but presumed that 50c. was not much of an inducement, and if he did not care to accept such an order he wanted him to say so frankly and he would discontinue, and further remarked "with our concern an order for a pound of flour or a trainload received the same attention." Mr. Gude concluded by stating that this was a lesson to him, that a small order should be taken care of.

Max Schling confirmed what all the previous speakers had said in favor of service being the first consideration, and related several instances in which his firm had gone to considerable expense in order to fill an order satisfactorily. In one case it cost something like $600 to deliver a $50 order. "Take all you can get from your customer and then deliver the goods, giving him the full value of what he is paying for, and also make a strong effort to deliver the order at destination no matter where it is." Another case was cited whereiñ a florist in New York was given an order for a 25c. Rose; the order was not refused, and the florist in the three years since has received $10,000 worth of business from the same party.

Max Schling added another thought which was to the effect that the society was strong enough even now to dictate and tell others that if they did not want to become members of the F. T. D., they could have no credit with an F. T. D. member, and would not have their orders delivered. He predicted that such a policy would bring those outside into the fold promptly.

Telegraph Code Not Wanted

In regard to a telegraph code, Secretary Pochelon brought out that this was inadvisable; a night letter was explicit, and the possible slight extra cost thereof would be more than offset by blunders which might be made in interpreting the messages. Code messages cannot be sent to Europe under any circumstances at this time.

In the Closing Moments

In regard to the meeting in October at Cleveland this is intended to last for three days in order to complete all business. Mr. Pochelon wants to see the matter of association membership thrashed out. He wants the society to be in a position to obtain information from traveling men and from seed houses and supply houses. Not only the information but also their help. In return for services rendered he said he wished to see them accorded consideration in return. In regard to the promotion of publicity he trusted that the S. A. F. will pay the F. T. D. annually $1000. In turn the F. T. D. would add another $1500 and turn the full amount $2500 over to the publicity fund.

As to outgoing and incoming orders C. P. Mueller of Wichita, Kans., questioned by Mr. Gude, said he had kept no track of the incoming but that of outgoing orders he had filled 885 in one year, from July, 1917, to June, 1918. He also took as much pains in filling a 50c. order as a $5 one.

In the matter of service President Gude then related another instance of a florist in New York, not one of the largest, to whom he sent an order for $1.50 and that man spent $1.75 in giving service. "If people over at New York City who have to pay $10,000 or $15,000 a year for rent can take care of orders in that liberal way, it would seem that they deserve to reap the reward of doing greater things; and isn't that all the more reason why the little fellow who expects to be the big man tomorrow can emulate that big man?"

After saying some very nice things about the St. Louis florists the meeting then adjourned.

Patriotic Window Display

The illustration on opposite page shows a patriotic window display arranged by Malandre Bros., 2077 Broadway, New York City, on the occasion of the recent visits of the English and French missions. In the center is shown the Goddess of Liberty. Over her head is the word "Welcome." She is wearing a cap and sash of the U. S. Colors and is holding a Cycas leaf in each hand. Directly in front of her is a shield of red and white Carnations and blue Cornflowers; this is surmounted by a screaming eagle. In the foreground, in the center, is a portrait of President Wilson; on the left is one of King George V of England and on the right is seen the portrait of President Poincaire. Back of these portraits is the English flag, made up of red and white Carnations and blue Cornflowers, the same combination being used for the French flag. The setting for the whole is formed of variegated Aucubas and ferns.

The market is in a discouraging condition, owing to the great scarcity of flowers of good quality, on account of the hot, dry weather. The Gladiolus and Aster crops are suffering more than any other flowers, as it is impossible in most cases to reach these with the hose. Hardy Sweet Peas are also suffering from the unusual weather conditions. Good quality Roses are decidedly scarce; only a few Russells are arriving; other varieties which are holding up under the intense heat are Ophelia, Hadley, Hoosier Beauty, Richmond, and Shawyer. There is a poor demand for white Roses. A few growers are cutting Carnations, which, although short-stemmed, are of fairly good quality for this season. Outdoor Snapdragons are helping out the supply considerably, as they do not seem to show the effects of the heat as much as other varieties. Some excellent clusters of Tuberoses are being shown in some of the flower shops. Golden Glow 'Mums of good quality are being displayed, and find a ready sale. Auratum and rubrum Lilies, in pots and cut, are a great standby for the florists. Zinnias and Dahlias are making a fairly good showing. There is a great scarcity of orchids, there being no Cattleyas at all available.

The demand for funeral work has been normal, and there was an excellent call for plants and baskets, both for hospital use and for funerals. There was almost no demand for flowers for social purposes or weddings, which shows a great tendency of the public to economize along these lines.

Lieutenant Will J. Vesey, Jr., who is now stationed at Little Rock, Ark., writes his father, Judge W. J. Vesey, here that he expects to depart for an Eastern port of embarkation soon, to sail for overseas.

Miss Marguerite Flick, secretary of the Fort Wayne Florists' Club, is, in accordance with the request of the U. S. Government, compiling a list of commercial greenhouses which also devote space to the cultivation of vegetables and vegetable plants. This is to help complete a census, which is a war-emergency measure.

The Doswell Floral Co. is cutting fine early Golden Glow 'Mums; also a good crop of Richmond, Killarney, and Ophelia Roses, and a quantity of Carnations from the young stock. They report a good plant trade.

Red Cross Sale

A large Red Cross auction sale will take place here the second week of September, and elaborate plans are being made for this event, by which it is hoped that thousands of dollars will be raised for this worthy cause. Mrs. Edmund Lanternier is one of the lieutenants for the auction, and many of the florists have already pledged themselves to give both plants and baskets of flowers to be auctioned off. Among the florists who have already signed up for generous donations are The Doswell Floral Co., Edgar Wenninghoff, A. J. Lanternier, Flick Floral Co., and the Freese Floral Co.

Judge and Mrs. W. J. Vesey have returned from a several week's vacation trip to Leland, Mich.

Edgar Wenninghoff had a very good window decoration of auratum Lily plants, and baskets of magenta Asters with bows of chiffon to harmonize. He reports an excellent demand for baskets, both for hospitals and for funeral work. D. B.

Cleveland, O.

Regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Club, Sept. 9, at the Hollenden.

Outdoor stock still predominates in this market. Gladioli and Asters holding first place. The severely hot weather had the effect of retarding the development of the former, even the larger sorts being much smaller than usual. Roses are a trifle more plentiful but the supply of good stock is far beneath the demand. Easter Lilies and Cybrums arrive in liberal quantities and are as popular as ever for funeral work. Some Larkspurs are being offered but the chief sources of supply are shut off this year because of the greater profit derived from the seed, which is reported scarce. Tritomas have appeared and are eagerly sought for window trimming.

In the greenhouses the work of housing Carnations is being advanced as rapidly as greatly depleted forces will permit. Stock is very good and there is plenty to take care of local needs, with some surplus. In the Rose sections, cutting back and adding new soil is receiving the greater attention and many houses are already started off for Autumn crops, with more than ordinary promise. Chrysanthemums are looking well and indications point to an unusually heavy supply of this ever popular flower.

Convention echoes.

Cleveland members of the trade in attendance at the St. Louis convention unanimously report a very successful meeting. It was strictly a gathering of business men for business purposes and was shorn of all the non-essential elements. Frank A. Friedley won the prize of a $100 Liberty Bond offered by President Totty for securing the largest number of new members, having turned in to Sec'y. Young the names of 63 new members. The Sixth City was selected as the meeting place in 1920. The addition of a few more names will give the Florists' Club representation on the S. A. F. directorate, which is an honor confined to only a few clubs. F. C. W. Brown was re-elected a director of the Florists' Hail Ass'n. Carl Hagenberger had an excellent trade display, prominent in which were his matchless Melanums.

The F. T. D. Convention

October 8 and 9 are the dates set for the annual meeting of the F. T. D. to be held in Cleveland, with headquarters at the Hollenden Hotel. The time set is just in the middle of the fourth Liberty Loan campaign, which could not well be avoided, as previous to Sept. 28 would be too early and after Oct. 19 too late, as the Chrysanthemum season has by that time begun. This will not prevent florists from taking their full part in the great money raising effort, as plenty of time will be available before and also after the convention. Well-traveled members of the trade prophesy that this will be a record-breaking meeting. The Hollenden offers spendid facilities for accommodating the big event and live-wire committees are already making preparations therefor.

Called to the Colors

Otto Walter, the Clarke st. retailer, has been notified to report for duty about Sept. 1. There are approximately 50 members of the trade from this vicinity to date.

A list of greenhouse operators, including vegetable growers, has been forwarded by request to the Government Bureau of Census, by the Florists' Club secretary and doubtless before long each will receive a copy of the questionnaire for filling out, the object being the securing of definite information by the War Industries Board on the greenhouse business.

L. C. Hecock and Louis Sutliff, of the Hecock Floral Co., Elyria, O., attended the convention.

D. R. White and family of Sandusky, O., motored to Cleveland on Aug. 23. Mr. White is devoting a part of his time to vegetable gardening this Summer and says he finds it profitable.

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Club will be held in the rooms at the Hollenden, Sept. 9, 1918. J. McL.

The Market

Aug. 27.—Since Tuesday of last week arrivals of flowers in the wholesale market have been moderately large, and the demand weak, and these same conditions prevail today. It is hoped that Mayor Hylan's proclamation of Aug. 27, excerpts from which are given in this column, will, if taken proper advantage of by the retail florists of this city, increase the sales of flowers greatly on Saturday of this week for patriotic use on Sunday, Sept. 1, in compliance with the mayor's request.

The abundant supply of Am. Beauty and hybrid tea Roses is moving slowly. Special Am. Beauty Roses are selling at from 6c. to 30c. each, and the other grades at corresponding prices. Top grade hybrid tea Roses in general are realizing from 3c. to 6c. each and bottom grades from 25c. to $1 per 100.

The supply of Carnations is somewhat larger, but there is little call for them at any price.

Cattleya orchids are in extremely short supply, and that rather than a large demand keeps the price at from 60c. to $1.50 each. Lilies are in fair supply, and are selling slowly; whites at from $3 to $5 and pinks at $1 to $3 per 100. Lily of the Valley is in sufficient supply for all demands at $2 to $6 per 100.

Of the distinctively Summer flowers, Asters and Gladioli now dominate the market, but a large variety of others are seen. The best of the Asters are selling at from $1 to $2 per 100, and Gladioli at the same prices.

All greens are in the usual Midsummer supply and are meeting with a slow sale.

Floral Tributes for Heroes

Mayor Hylan on Aug. 27 issued a proclamation supplementing a recent one of the same sort, asking that Sunday, Sept. 1, be observed throughout the city as Heroes' Day. The mayor says in his last proclamation:

"In addition to all other plans for the day I hereby proclaim that there will be a Heroes' Flower Mound in each borough of the city in one of the parks to be designated. Each borough president is hereby called upon to see that this plan is carried out in conjunction with the committee.

"We cannot go through France to decorate the graves of the boys we love, we can have a sentimental representation of those graves in Central Park, Crotona Park and a park in each of the boroughs.

"The citizens of New York, rich and poor alike, should watch for the announcement of the exact place where each borough is to have its Heroes Flower Mound. Some time Sunday, between sunrise and sunset, I hope every one in New York will want to show the well deserved affection for our boys that will cause them all to go to these flower mounds and drop at least one little flower there to help build up a mountain of appreciation for our boys."

The Cottage Gardens Co., Inc., Queens, L. I., has closed its Carnation houses for the duration of the war. This action has been taken not only on account of the coal shortage but also because of the lack of labor for the operation of the Carnation range. Lieut. David Ward, after being 11 months in France, has been recalled by the Government, and made an instructor in anti-air craft heavy artillery at Fort Hamilton, N. Y.

Exhibits for Next Club Meeting

The exhibition committee of the New York Florists' Club, Charles W. Knight, chairman, announces that the committee desires at the next meeting of the club, which will be held on Sept. 9, to make a comprehensive display of Gladioli and asks that growers, both commercial and private, kindly send or bring in their best products of varieties of special merit that may be in bloom at that time; also any other flowers suitable for cut flower work, such as perennials, Asters, early 'Mums, etc. Flowers may be shipped by parcel post or express and addressed H. C. Riedel, 49 W. 28th st., New York, but must reach him before 6 p.m., Monday, Sept. 9. Mr. Riedel will see that all consignments received by him will be taken to the club rooms and properly staged by the committee. This will be an important meeting and will be largely attended, so bring along your flowers, both for your own and the members' benefit.

Mrs. Anna Millang, 86 years old, widow of Frank Millang, died on Aug. 17, at her home at Bayside, L. I. Her husband was one of the pioneer florists of Long Island. She is survived by four sons: Frank, Joseph, Charles and August Millang, all of whom are prominently connected with the florist's business; and by three daughters, Mrs. Bowenque, Mrs. Kelly and Mrs. Brener, and by 20 grandchildren.

Paul Rigo, manager of the Henshaw Floral Co., 127 W. 28th st., has just returned from a two weeks' vacation in Maine. Mr. Rigo recently received letters, dated Aug. 3 and 4, from his brother Alphonse Rigo, of Rigo Bros., Madison ave. florists, who is now with the Allies at the front. He writes enthusiastically of the many courtesies which the American soldiers receive from the other Allies at all times, and of an outlook for a comparatively early complete victory over the Central Powers.

Northern New York Notes

W. E. Kirchhoff, Jr., the Gladiolus grower at Pembroke, N. Y., has left his business in the management of his father, William E. Kirchhoff, Sr., and is now at the Mechanics' Institute, Rochester, N. Y., learning the blacksmith's trade under the instruction of the Government. He has been there for the last five weeks and in about three weeks more he expects to finish the course. He says that he enjoys the new life.

Irving LeRoy Bates, who is interested in the florist's business with his father James J. Bates, at Oakfield, is one of the young men of Genesee County who registered on Aug. 24 as being eligible for service, having passed his 21st anniversary on the 4th of July.

Miss Ruth M. Keeney, daughter of Calvin N. Keeney, the famous Bean grower, has gone to New York City where she will be engaged in Y. W. C. A. work for the next three months. Miss Keeney was connected with the Y. W. C. A. in Washington, D. C., for three years, and has been spending the last two months in her home at Batavia. Her new position places her in charge of the speakers' bureau of the Eastern division of the National War Work Council in connection with the Y. W. C. A.

Annual Outing

On Aug. 15 the Syracuse Florists' Club held its annual outing. Thirty-five of the members left the city in autos for Three River Point, where a very delightful day was spent. The entertainment committee arranged athletic events for the afternoon, which developed a spirited rivalry among the contestants. Tom Quigley showed the boys some speed in the 100-yard dash, which he won very easily. Werner Bultman carried off the honors in the high kick event. Mat Kay and Louis Renz lead the boys in the broad jump. Dick Cirvoli made a good showing in the hop, skip and jump. After these events there was a ball game between the growers and retail men, in which Albert Davis and Quigley did clever work at the bat.

After the games were run off supper was served at Barnum's hotel. Several other members had arrived by this time, and in all 46 members were treated to fish, frogs and chicken.

After supper was served an informal meeting was held, and the arrangement committee laid before the members the program which it is intended to carry out at the State Fair floral exhibit. Every effort is being made to arrange three large groups of plants and cut flowers which will surpass anything that the club has heretofore undertaken.

Secretary L. J. Mulhauser read a letter which he received from the Department of Agriculture relative to the census of greenhouses which the Government is taking, and if any of the members have not sent in the information requested direct to Washington, they should send the data to the secretary who will forward it.

In a trip around the stores I note that customers seemed to be a rarity jus at the time of my visit, although ther was some trade during the day. Ther is no denying the fact, however, that th Summer dullness is with us; it is little late in coming so it will be of shor duration.

The Habermehls of Philadelphia ha the decorations for Major Keiper's bi dinner, with money no object, and the spread themselves accordingly.

The drought here is getting serious although locally the stronger vegetatio has not suffered as yet. Among the flow ers Dahlias have literally gone to pieces and other stock where it cannot b watered is poor. Much of the bedding i showing up badly where it does not hav attention; where it does have attentio the contrast is wonderful. Single Petunia and Portulaca seem to be in their ele ment and never were better. Thes single Petunias are not bad as a cut flower, I decorated my porch with them cut in sprays from 12in. to 20in. and they work up finely in baskets and vases and last long enough to satisfy almost any one.

W. B. Girvin is sending some exceptionally fine Asters to the city stores; these with Zinnias and Gladioli make the principal display in the shops.

The Market

Aug. 27 -The supply of flowers at the wholesale flower market is not large but there is a slight increase over last week's supply. Demand for flowers has not increased much over last week, so that the supply is sufficient for all demands.

There is a slight shortage of Roses but the growers say that there will be a plentiful crop soon. The supply of American Beauties is rather meagre and there is a fair demand at 4c. to 25c. each. Hybrid Tea Roses are still scarce and prices are quite high. There are few Russells and Hadleys and the supply of Ophelia is light; prices on these are from 3c. to 12c. Other varieties are slightly more plentiful and are selling at from 2c. to 8c. each.

There are few Carnations offered; a few of the new crop are being sent in, but they are short stemmed and are selling at about $1 per 100.

The supply of Cattleya orchids is very small and the few that reach the market run in price from 50c. to $1 each. Lilies are not overabundant but the call for them is small. There is still a plentiful supply of Lilium auratum.

There is a plentiful supply of Asters of fairly good quality and these are useful, taking the place of other flowers which are short in supply. Prices for average flowers run about $1 per 100, while a few choice flowers in small lots realize $2 per 100. Gladioli are plentiful and of good quality; they meet with a good demand, from $1 to $4 per 100.

The supply of miscellaneous flowers is quite light; the plants offered are Crotons, ferns and Dracæna Massangeana. There is a good supply of both kinds of Asparagus and Adiantum is of good quality.

Club Meeting

The first meeting of the Gardeners and Florists' Club will be held at Horticultural Hall on the evening of Sept. 17. There will be many important matters to be brought up so it is important that the attendance be large.

One of the prettiest and daintiest flowers coming to the market at this time is Bouvardia Humboldtii. John W. Foot of Reading is the grower.

Children's Show

From the present outlook there will be a big exhibition of children's products of their gardens at Horticultural Hall next Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 31 and Sept. 1. The war gardens and children's gardens in Massachusetts will compare favorably with any in the country and the exhibition will be well worth attending. R. C.

Better Market

Aug. 26.—There has been an improvement in the market since last report. Cooler weather has helped conditions. Flowers are of slightly better quality and there is not so much poor stock; prices are about as good as they ever are at this time of year. There is no surplus of any stock that is of good quality but at this season there are always job lots of outdoor stock of mediocre quality that have to be sold for whatever they will bring. The shipping trade, which is the mainstay of the market, remains normal. The local trade cannot safely be counted on to keep moving half the stock that reaches the market. An occasional important funeral, such as that of Chief of Police Herman F. Scheuttler helps greatly to clean up the market. With the passing of the heat wave and a gradual improvement in the conditions of stock the prospects for a good market for the remainder of the Summer seem fairly well assured.

Roses are coming into the market in considerably better condition than they have been, so that in some varieties some really good stock for this season is to be had. There are American Beauty offered but not in any large volume; all these Roses sell at satisfactory prices. Columbia and Mrs. Russell seem to be nip and tuck for the lead in fancy stock. While the former has made many new friends there are many old-timers who pin their faith to Russell as a money maker, both in Winter as well as in Summer.

Carnations are getting to be slightly more plentiful; there is also an improvement in quality in the cut from the new crop plants; prices range from $1 to $3 per 100.

Gladioli are the most prominent feature of the market and they are the principal stock in trade of the dealers. Their season appears to be at its height and so many different varieties are offered that a list of them would make a respectable sized catalog. At present Pendleton and Autumn Queen appear to be favorites. Gladioli are coming into this market from many sections of the country, both far and near; one firm is receiving shipments twice a week from a grower in New Hampshire. Prices range from 50c. to $6 per 100.

Asters are in good supply; the stock coming in covers a wide range in quality, some can be bought for 50c. per 100, and others sell readily for $4.

There are enough Easter Lilies and the supply also of rubrum and auratum is good, all of which move freely. Valley is on the short side, as well as orchids; the demand, however, is weak and with a little trouble enough can be picked up from day to day for all requirements.

Golden Glow Chrysanthemums are coming in freely and so far they have met with a ready sale, chiefly from the leading retailers, who want to keep up-to-date displays in their windows.

In outdoor Summer flowers Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora is a leader and is selling at from $4 to $6 per 100. Liatris elegans, better known as "Blazing Star," is seen frequently on the market; its tall cylindrical purple blooms are generally admired.

Everybody on the market is talking convention, each one telling some funny experience while away.

The fern supply is ample on some days; on others it is noticeably short.

GLADIOLUS. Our stock includes many of the new introductions and all of the best commercial varieties. We believe that the quality of our Gladiolus is better than we have had for several years.

LILIES. There is nothing on the market that offers better value. If you do any business at all during the summer months you ought to carry Lilies in stock all the time.

LILIUM RUBRUM. We offer them in quantity, both long and short stems. The short LILIES are particularly desirable for design work. You will notice they are inexpensive. $4 00 to $5.00 per 100.

ASTERS. There are a few ASTERS coming in that are exceptional as far as quality is concerned, but most of them grade as Good and Medium. We will have plenty of ASTERS until the end of the season.

neral of Chief of Police

Herman F. Schuettler, Chief of ice, died on Aug. 23. The funeral s held on Monday. The extraordinary mber and richness of the floral tributes wed the high esteem in which he was d. The house was laden with flowers d there was no room for more; some the pieces were so large they would t go through the door. Florists' delery autos and mesenger boys carrying wers came in a steady stream all the ning. There was hardly a design the entire list of funeral pieces that s not represented in the offerings. They me from the rich and poor, from city cials from the mayor down, from varis police precincts throughout the city. m captains and traffic squads clubs, ternal societies, protective, social and ette associations. There were also utes from veterans of the Haymarket t and one particular piece that the al press made special mention of bore e inscription, "From the Mother of arvey Van Dine." Herman Schuettler, ding a platoon of police, trapped Van ine, with others of the "car barn ndits" in a house in the Indiana prairs. It was the work of Schuettler that rt the car barn bandits to their death. ring the trial Mrs. Van Dine came to w the big policeman and when he d buried the flowers from her were on his grave. It took several truck ds to move all the flowers from the me to the burial lot in Rose Hill Cemery. The late Chief of Police was well own to the florists of the city, as up about three years ago he was proprieof an extensive range of greenhouses Wilmette, known then as "The Star ral Co.," which was conducted by his other-in-law John J. Flint. The lat- is still connected with the trade in ilmette. The chief finally disposed of greenhouse property to Pyfer & Ocsem whose business troubles have been mentioned previously in THE EXCHANGE and in which the estate of the deceased is still interested.

Chas. H. Totty and W. A. Manda of New Jersey are spending a few days in the city, having stopped off here from St. Louis.

Lawrence Mathes, who several years ago began his career as a florist with the Weiland & Risch Co., has returned from the West and taken a position in the store.

Victor Young, who recently joined the Army and left his retail store at 1239 N. Clark st., has filed a petition in bankruptcy. The liabilities are $3444.37, no assets.

The report from Washington, D. C., in which the employees of florists are listed with those of other industries as being connected with non-essential work is disturbing the trade.

Local florist's supply houses have had a good business from convention visitors; a number from points north of here stopped off on their way to St. Louis and made many purchases. Others south and west of St. Louis came here after the convention.

Kansas City, Mo.

There has been no change in prices in this market for more than a week. All outdoor stock is about burned up and there is little variety in the flower line. Kansas City is not alone in this respect, however. The complaint of dry weather comes from different parts of the country, and florists generally will be glad to see the end of the very warm weather that has prevailed for weeks past.

Among Kansas City florists who attended the St. Louis convention were Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Noll, H. Kusik, W. L. Rock and W. J. Barnes.

Recent visitors in the city included Miss M. A. Tierney, Davenport, Ia.; R. C. Kerr, Houston, Tex., and Mr. Lang, Dallas, Tex. B. S. B.

Fairly Active Market

Aug. 28 -The market has been fairly active. There is a noticeable improvement in the quality of the receipts. Asters are at their best, with the arrival of the improved and plumed varieties. Gladioli are also showing up better with a fair demand. There are not many Roses, but the market does not lack for variety. There are a few new crop blooms to be had, but they are rather short of stem. Easter Lilies,continue active, with an excellent supply. Rubrums are also plentiful and are taking well. There are no orchids to speak of. A few Dahlias were noted; the bulk of them will soon be in. The first of the Golden Glow 'Mums have made their appearance.

The death of Albert Roney of West Grove is reported as having occurred about two weeks ago. Mr. Roney was engaged in the florist's business at West Grove for years and did business under the name of Roney Bros. The deceased retired from active business about two years ago.

N. Leon Wintzer of West Grove has gone into the growing of Gladioli on a considerable scale. He has 25 acres of the best of the standard and newer sorts. Mr. Wintzer grows principally to supply the market with bulbs but ships a large number of blooms to the Philadelphia and Baltimore markets.

The tragic death of E. A. Seidewitz of Baltimore was a considerable shock to his many friends here in this city.

Edward F. Riley of Wm. J. Baker's departed for Camp Lee on August 26.

Leo Niessen reports the arrival of the first 'Mums; the variety was Golden Glow.

Club Meeting

The September meeting of the Florists' Club will be held in the Grand Fraternity building, 1620 Arch st., Tuesday evening, Sept. 3, The essay committee promises a surprise for the evening. Nomination of officers to serve for the following year will be in order. Refreshments will be served after the meeting. A large turnout is to be expected.

What if the Railroads are Congested?

AN answer to the transportation difficulties, which the trade has labored under, was to be expected. It consists in a greater use of the auto!

This service to customers, assuring early delivery of dependable stock, contains the excellent opportunity to create a volume of business from customers, even as far away as 100 miles, and advertisers in a position to offer this facility should mention the fact in their ads. in

A general shortage of flowers has characterized the market for the past ten days. Warm, dry weather has caused a decided curtailment of Gladioli, Dahlias and other field grown flowers. The drought has not been so severe as in the Western part of the State but the quality of stock received in this section is far from what it should be.

Fairly good Gladioli wholesale at $2 to $3 per 100 and fancies bring as high as $4 per 100. Giganteum Lilies are fairly plentiful at $10 to $15 per 100, rubrums at $5 to $8 per 100 and albums $6 to $10 per 100. The best Roses are being shipped in from the Lake region at $8 to $15 per 100. Local short stock brings $3 to $6 per 100.

The first Carnations of the season are being offered at $1 to $2 per 100. A few Dahlias may be had at $1 to $3 per 100, but the real season will not start in this section until Sept. 5. Quantities of Hydrangea paniculata find a ready market because of the general shortage, at $3 to $4 per 100. Some good Tritoma Pfitzeri are available at $3 to $5 per 100. Second crop Larkspur is a most welcome addition, at $3 to $8 per 100 sprays.

While there has been a dearth of general counter business, there has been a noticeable improvement in the call of flowers for hospitals and for the sick room. Funeral work keeps right on coming and of course constitutes at least 80 per cent of the business transacted.

The new order of the Government in regard to florist's labor has caused much consternation in local circles and will no doubt result in a still further decrease in the quantity of flowers available during the coming season.

Full houses will be the slogan in this vicinity the coming season, as the shortened coal allotment will permit any local florist to get rid of surplus stock at good prices.

The Convention

A. F. J. Baur and Irwin Bertermann have returned from St. Louis. They say that the convention was fully up to other years in point of business transacted and on some of the vital points was far ahead of previous years. The talk given by Dr. Garfield's representative was certainly a good one and was an encouragement in itself in that it tended to show that the Government desired to aid the florists instead of discouraging the flower business. The meetings of the F. T. D. and The Florists' Hail Ass'n. were the best in point of attendance on record. Too much praise cannot be bestowed upon the hospitality of the St. Louis florists and the interest they took in the individual visitors as well as in the convention.

Louis R. Finnermann of Chicago, Geo. C. Shafer of Washington, D. C., E. C. Roberts of Zanesville, O., J. A. Ernsberger of Celina, O., Alfred Warner of Duluth, Minn. and Richard Kootz of Washington, D. C. were recent visitors.

The Smith & Young Co. and the Bertermann Bros. Co. are installing new grate devices under their boilers at the greenhouses.

W. W. Coles of Kokomo stopped over for a few hours en route from the convention at his home.

Mr. Leckas, the S. Ill. st. florist has given up his business and joined the Army.

Otto Lawrenz, who has been ill for a few days, is able to be out.

Several of the local growers are much relieved by the news that French bulbs have been shipped. This will give much needed relief after the 'Mum season.

Edward McDuff of Bertermann's store force is up at the Indiana lakes for a vacation. I. B.

San Francisco, Cal.

Chas. Stappenbach, who conducts the American Florist Shop, at 1217 Polk st., received word last week that Attilo Dagnino, who had been a member of his sales force for several years, up to Oct. 7, 1917, when he joined the Colors, was killed in action on the French front, on July 19.

Visitors in town this week included Chas. Alt of the Huddart Floral Co., of Salt Lake City, Utah, and Wm. Sorenson, also of Salt Lake City.

J. R. W.

Portland, Ore.

Business has been somewhat duller than previously this Summer. Stock of all kinds is to be had at all times to take care of the call. Gladioli are in oversupply and will soon be sold at last year's retail prices the writer is sorry to say. Good Gladioli, however, will continue to bring the top notch price. Carnations are still scarce but the new stock is giving us its first flowers, so that we will soon be in the regular Carnation swing again. Roses are good but not overplentiful. Sweet Peas have suffered from the damp weather and their keeping qualities are not what could be wished for. Asters are good, and plentiful, in both fancy and other grades. Zinnias and Gaillardias are to be had in quantity, in excellent colors. Some good Dahlias of the var. Minnie Burgle are also offered and when this sort is not overdone it makes a profitable cut Dahlia to handle at retail.

Funeral work has been fairly plentiful. The G. A. R. Convention did not call for a great many flowers.

Club Meeting

The August meeting of the Portland Floral Society was well attended. The secretary laid stress once more on the necessity of members reporting poor payers, as the last year has seen but one report. This is directly in line with the article, "The Wholesale House of the Future" which appeared in THE EXCHANGE of Aug. 17 and should be taken more seriously by all growers, as all loss by bad accounts raises the overhead account. It was therefore voted that reports be read and asked for at each meeting. Secretary, F. A. Van Kirk also drew the members' attention to the fact that society expenses for meetings had also been affected by the war and that economy must be practiced. A revival of the campaign for 100 members was also given the "once over." Some members who have pledged themselves to bring in one member are still dodging their pledge.

Mr. Scott of Moscow, Idaho, was a visitor. He says that the recently organized club at Spokane is very popular and is proving beneficial to all. J. L. Seabold an amateur grower of Gladioli showed a few of his finer varieties. Mr. Seabold was nominated for membership. W. Hennings of Courtney Station was elected a member. A discussion of a subject of vital interest to the trade, namely higher prices, was started by D. Tonseth, but this entire matter is affected by the fact that we are not yet hard enough "up against it" to be really willing to consider many things suggested. No doubt the Winter will see a great many of us more willing to discuss things of financial benefit to ourselves and the trade at large. Such is the trend of trade discussions generally.

Worcester, Mass.

The local supply of flowers has been much less than previously and as business has been good there has been little chance of a glut in the market. The flower shops, with a fair supply of cut flowers in good variety, and a good stock of ferns and palms, which are of unusually good quality, are kept attractive and every effort is being made to keep the business going.

The weekly exhibit of the Worcester County Hort. Society was held on Thursday the 22d and was in charge of Leonard C. Midgeley. Asters predominated, variety and quality being excellent. Iristhorpe, the summer home of Dr. Gage was awarded the silver medal for best collection of Gladioli.

Horticultural Hall was also the gathering place on Saturday, Aug. 24 of the little gardeners and farmers of Worcester under the direction of the society and several hundred prizes were awarded. Although there were several good exhibits of flowers they were pushed to the wall as compared with the vegetable exhibits.

News of the Soldiers

Several of the Worcester boys in the service have been heard from recently. John Gibbons formerly of Randall's and later in the florists' business for himself, has been appointed a sergeant and is located at Charleston, S. C. Hermann F. Lange, son of Albert H. Lange, has been assigned to a submarine which will see active service. He will be a first-class gunner's mate. He enlisted in the Naval Reserve in May, 1917 Ragnar Swenson, formerly an errand boy for Littlefield the Florist, until his enlistment, is reported as severely wounded in France.

Peter Dorey and Jack McCullough, formerly of Lange's force and George Moore of Randall's are also in the service. Peter Dorey is located at Camp Devens in Ayer, Mass., while Private Moore is with the cavalry in Texas. Interesting letters have been received from William Higgins formerly of Randall's, who enlisted in the Aviation Corps.

The local Sweet Pea crop is pretty well cleaned up and Asters have shortened somewhat.

Roses brought from $1 to $8; Asters, 50c. to $2.50; Gladioli $1 to $3, and various outdoor blooms from 25c. to $2 per 100. T.L.M.

New Haven, Conn.

The best we can say about business conditions in the florists' line in New Haven is that we are experiencing the usual Summer dullness. Ours is a city of flower gardens in Summer and consequently the demand for cut flowers at the stores is reduced to almost nothing. Funeral work constitutes about all the business we are getting.

Asters and Gladioli, with a few Roses are about the only flowers the florists are using. Although they are asking for Dahlias, no good stock of the latter has come in as yet. Local Asters are poor but some very fine ones have been received from the Western part of the State, the price being $2.50 per 100. Local Asters are selling at $1.50 to $2.00; Gladioli at $3.00 to $5.00.

J. J. McQuiggan has made extensive improvements in his store, the entire interior being finished in white.

Myer Wilson of Congress av. has enlarged his store and is putting in a new show window which will greatly add to the attractiveness of the place. The interior will be finished in white.

Flower and Vegetable Show

The New Haven County Hort. Society has about completed arrangements for the big flower and vegetable show at the public Library. Among the features will be an illustrated lecture on Dahlias and their culture by Richard Vincent, Jr. Many prominent growers of flowers will attend the show this year as it precedes the Boston show and they can stop over on the way.

Newport, R. I..

August Show

The August show of the Newport Hort. Society was held on Tuesday the 27th. The Gladiolus took the lead over other seasonable flowers displayed. C. W. Brown & Son, Ashland, Mass., made a good staging of tested varieties; also of novelties, and took first prize for a vase of white, with Europa; first for a vase of pink with William Falconer, and first for vase of yellow with Mongolian.

Fred P. Webber scored first in the class for vase of any other color with Herada and first for a vase of seedlings of Primulinus hybrids. Many of them showed great improvement over existing named varieties, and will prove a great acquisition to the trade, being a more refined flower than the common type. Certificates of Merit were granted to C. W. Brown & Son, for seedling named Goldfinch, a good variety, and to C. M. Bugholt for a seedling, which is good as a garden variety but not commercially, consequently I shall not attempt to describe it.

The children were out as never before, from home and school gardens with displays of vegetables but no flowers, premiums being awarded to about everything staged. This branch of the show created great interest. ALEXANDER MACLELLAN.

The Civic League has taken over the place of business of Thomas W. Gibson at 36 Washington sq., but he will continue business at the greenhouses on Bliss rd.

E. Kempenaar is doing his bit, having arranged to take charge of one of the threshing machines run in conjunction with a tractor furnished by the State, through the officers of the Farm Bureau. Besides conducting their business as usual Kempenaar & Christensen find time to operate the Bailey farm in Middletown successfully.

William C. Hass, son of florist Henry J. Hass, who has been accepted by the recruiting officer of the U. S. Marine Corps at New York has gone there to enlist.

Marguerite Ritchie, youngest daughter of Stewart Ritchie, is about to enter the Army Nursing School.

Newport Garden Club's Election

The annual meeting of the Newport Garden Club for election of officers was held on Aug. 8, and resulted in the reelection of all the officers, who are: Pres., Mrs. Charles Hoffman; Vice-Pres., Mrs. Thomas J. Emery; Sec'y., Mrs. Frederic Pearson; Treas. Mrs. John J. Wysong. Honorary members of governing board: Governor and Mrs. R. Livingston Beekman. On the governing board of thirteen members Mrs. Lewis Cass Ledyard was elected to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Mrs. Wm. G. Weld.

Following the election Norman Taylor of the Brooklyn Botanic Garden gave a lecture on "Wild Flowers of the Eastern United States." ALEX MAC LELLAN.

Providence, R. I.

Business has been below normal; aside from funeral work there is little doing in any line. Outside stock is plentiful and prices are low.

The writer regrets to record the death on Aug. 15 of Richard Higgins, whose obituary will be found on another page.

J. C. L.

Hartford, Conn.

Gladioli, Asters, Carnations and other stock are at last coming in well and the Rose situation is improving. Prices are all right when there is any business, although things are quiet, as they usually are at this time of the year.

J. Albert Brodrib of Main st., will not operate his greenhouses this coming season.

Peter A. Troiano, of Geo. McClunie's of Main st., has gone to Newport, R. I.; he enlisted in the Naval Reserve about six weeks ago. If he is as good a sailor as he was a florist, we may expect great things from him. GEO. G. MCCLUNIE.

An All Summer Blooming Heliotrope

I need a low growing blue plant in a formal garden. Heliotrope centefleur is not fragrant but a compact bloomer; is there any other all Summer blooming variety?—A. M., N. Y.

—Any of the several varieties of Heliotrope under good culture should bloom freely all Summer. The variety Chieftain which bears large lilac-colored trusses, is very fragrant. Any of the leading growers of pot and bedding plants will be able to furnish you with a fragrant, everblooming variety of Heliotrope. J. H. S.

Disbudding 'Mum Robert Halliday

Please let me know which bud is best to take and the best bud to take for 'Mum Robert Holliday.—A. F. S., N. C.

—The best time to take the bud of Chrysanthemum Robert Halliday is between Sept. 1 and 10, at which time almost any bud will come satisfactorily. The terminal bud is, however, the one favored by many growers. W.

St. Paul, Minn.

During the past month the usual Summer slackness has prevailed, with only moderate funeral work and few weddings; notwithstanding this country orders have been, if anything, above normal. There has been a great shortage in Roses, especialy Russell, and any local stock is quickly disposed of in preference to the shipped in stock. The last of the Carnations finished up poorly and in a week or 10 days new stock will be running. Gladioli sold as low as $1 per 100 but have been a good filler in for sprays, etc. The remaining local stock of Asters are only culls.

All classes of outside stock, while of fairly good quality, especially Sweet Peas, have hardly paid for the cutting. The retail stores have complained of a greater drop in price than usual this year; this is due probably to an excess of garden flowers. Easter Lilies have been on the market during the past month and while not in excessive demand they have moved fairly at a good price.

P. J. Hermes has completed planting his large house of 25,000 Carnations. He has only two men left on his staff, the others having been called into the service. However, his four boys are working hard early and late.

There is a big call for field grown Carnations, especially from Iowa, owing to the June floods demolishing practically all the stock there of that kind. Mr. Schultze from Sioux City was in town looking for stock.

State Fair

The State Fair grounds have never before been in such excellent condition. The various beds are a blaze of color and the new greenhouse that was completed a year ago is planted with a fine batch of Golden Glow, which will be in full bloom for fair week. The horticultural program will be about as usual, but it is questionable whether there will be much competition as weather conditions have been, as a rule, unfavorable; there have been excessive rains and hot, sultry days with little sunshine.

Pleasant Outing

On Aug. 15 Minnesota State Florists' Ass'n had their annual outing. They left the Armory, Minneapolis, in autos at 9 a.m., and after visiting several florists' establishments had a basket luncheon at A. Swanson's. The outing also included a trip around Big Island and a visit to the game reserve. A ride on lower Lake Minnetonka completed a very enjoyable day. E. C. T.

Columbus, O.

The unusuallly hot weather continues and is bringing to a quick end many outdoor flowers. Gladioli, which recently have been very plentiful, at the present writing are scarce. Some fine Asters are being received from amateur growers. Most florists in recent years have discontinued trying to grow them, on account of the disease and insects. Some fine Roses from the new crop are on the market. Carnations from young stock are rather short and small but find ready sale at 2½c. wholesale.

Most of the florists report that their business this month has been well up to that for the same month last year. Funeral work at times was rather heavy, with some wedding orders and the usual flowers for the sick. Most of the growers have made their plans to get along with the 50 per cent. coal allowance. Many of them have part of their coal supply and some their full supply of coal laid in.

Few of the florists are taking a vacation this Summer as all are short of help.

Notes

The Livingston Seed Co., which last Summer gave up its flower store but grew flowers in its greenhouses for wholesale, will discontinue entirely the growing of flowers and will close its entire range for the Winter; in the Spring the firm will grow vegetables.

The Frank Krouse Floral Co. has closed its store on Mt. Vernon ave.

Mr. and Mrs. S. Stephens have received a telegram announcing the safe arrival overseas of their son Walter J., formerly manager of Stephens & Son.

The Munk Floral Co. has added two more stars to its service flag. W. Walker joined the Navy and Ed Mackin the Army. The latter is at Camp Sherman.

Prof. Alfred C. Hottes, E. A. Munk and E. Helm motored to Dayton to visit some of the florists there.

Mr. De La Mare of THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE stopped in this city on his way back to New York from the S. A. F. convention. He reported a very successful and enthusiastic meeting.

WALTER J. ENGEL.

Kalamazoo, Mich.

Extremely hot and dry weather has taken all the life out of business the present month so that things are very quiet at the stores. The old standby, funeral work, also dropped off, while shipping trade is practically nil. At the greenhouses, however, a different story prevails, as the great shortage of labor is severely felt and everyone is on the jump (that is, when the weather allows it), for believe me, a temperature of 103 deg. and 105 deg. in the shade is not much calculated to make a man hustle. Still the work must be got on with, for the season is advancing and soon the busy season will be upon us.

The florist trade here has not been drawn on very heavily in the previous draft registration, most in the trade being exempt on account of age or dependents, but how the present draft will affect us remains to be seen; I imagine, however, the labor question will soon be as interesting as the fuel proposition, and together will make such a combination that it will make many in our business "sit up and take notice," especially of the cost price mark. S. B.

Cincinnati, O.

Roses are fairly plentiful and insofar as the good ones are concerned, cleaned up fairly well. Asters are again plentiful and move well. They consist of stock from out-of-town and are generally of a high quality. Easter Lilies continue to meet with a good demand. Rubrums are rather scarce. Gladioli are not as plentiful as they were nor on the whole are they of the same high quality, although many good ones may be had. Other offerings include outdoor Carnations and early Dahlias.

Joseph Durban and Ray Eck will both leave for camp this week.

Will Shafer who has been with the Hoffmeister Floral Co. for eighteen years at its greenhouses in Lick Run is now operating the greenhouses. Mr. Shafer is a hustler, is capable and will make good in his venture.

Louis R. Finnerman, representing Grosberg, Tyler Finnerman & Co., Chicago, Ill., called on the trade. Other visitors were Mrs. J. E. Young and Olive A. Ritter, Dayton, O. TEDDY.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

The week ending Aug. 24 was the dullest the flower business has experienced here this Summer. There were not many good flowers to be had, and it was just as well, as there was no business worth mentioning. Gladioli are still flooding the market but the quality and varieties are very poor. A few good specimens of America are to be had but have little demand. Roses have been poor all week. Beauties are arriving in larger quantities but are moved only at low prices.

Good Asters are now coming in in larger numbers but on account of business being poor did not move well. There will be a steady cut of good Asters from now on. The early crop of Gladioli is almost over and the late cut has indications of being much better. The growers have had a very poor season, partly on account of the dry weather and partly on account of the varieties grown. There has been a heavy crop of Lilies recently but very little demand for them. Greens of all kinds have been flooding the market.

B. L. Elliott left for Portland, Ore. to visit his father-in-law, John Bader, and accompany Mrs. Elliott home. She has been at Portland since last June.

Joe Fineberg who was discharged from military service is now working in the shell department of the Westinghouse Co. He formerly conducted a retail flower store on Liberty ave.

Sam Giddias, who was with the Alpha Floral Co. of Penn. ave. was home for a few days before embarking for overseas. N. McC.

GARDNER, MASS. — The greenhouse property purchased some time ago from Fred Murdock, Pine st., by the John A. Dunn Co., will be sold by the latter concern, to be removed during the next month.

Charles Seabrook Tells How He Grows Greenhouse Cucumbers

They are in our new Greenhouse Vegetable Book.

Some Hints on Packing Greenhouse Vegetables

IF you are not prepared to take the trouble to pack your vegetables with care, for those who care, then make up your mind to take a back seat.

So important is the right packing that we have devoted considerable space to it in our new Vegetable Book.

It is one of the ways we are trying to help the grower help himself to better profits.

What Combusto Draft System is:

COMBUSTO DRAFT SYSTEM is the result of months of technical research and exhaustive engineering tests in application and utilization of well-known laws in the field of combustion, and as applied to boilers and furnaces used for heating purposes, consists of Devices (supplementary air channels) made of cast iron, attached to the inside of the feed doors in such manner that they cover the slides or air vents in the doors. The System is indestructible under proper usage—has no mechanism —requires absolutely no attention—adapts itself to all draft conditions that may be necessary to meet load changes, and is as constant as the sun in performing the function for which it is designed and intended.

Economical combustion of coal is dependent primarily upon the maintenance of a fuel bed of standard thickness for the kind of coal used, and upon proper air supply—both through the fuel bed and OVER THE FIRE. Under such standard conditions (and coal cannot be burned economically otherwise) the air introduced over the fuel bed must suit the requirements of the furnace. In COMBUSTO DRAFT SYSTEM the supplementary air channels vary in size and combined length according to size and air requirements of furnace, thereby introducing, under control, the proper volume of air to meet the requirements of combustion under varying draft conditions.

The U. S. Fuel Administration and the Florists

At St. Louis on Thursday afternoon, August 22, a special hour was set apart to listen to an address by Henry G. Martin, Associate Administrative Engineer of the U. S. Fuel Administration of Missouri. In previous issues we have alluded to Mr. Martin's presence at the S. A. F. convention, and today we are in a position to give a full synopsis of his talk, and for those florists who are interested in the coal question—and how many are not?—the material which follows should prove highly informative.

Is There a Real Fuel Shortage?

Opening his subject, Mr. Martin stated: One question that is constantly asked all over this country, particularly of those of us who are connected with the Fuel Administration is, "Is there a real fuel shortage? If there is, can it be overcome? Is it anybody's fault? Is it our fault? Whose fault is it? Can we get after it and eliminate the shortage? How much is the shortage? How are we going to eliminate it?" These are the questions that are constantly brought before us. In the first place, there is a tragic shortage. I say "tragic" because it is requiring small sacrifices from everybody but is being met not in a tragic spirit, but simply met in a glorious patriotic spirit; the people are denying themselves things that they need just as they denied themselves Wheat when Wheat was needed in Europe.

When the Fuel Administration EngineeringDepartment was inaugurated last year about the first of July, as representatives of the Conservation Division of the Fuel Administration when it was organized for the purpose of conserving fuel and avoiding a shortage, it was known to us that we would have to find the means of saving from the normal consumption of this country fifty million tons a year for the season April 1, 1918 to April 1, 1919. Those figures were rather strong and made us stand aghast. I have been in engineering work of all kinds and have seen many great crises, but I never thought we would have to face a shortage of fifty million tons of coal. Big corporations have asked for coal economies in the past, running into hundreds of thousands, but we are dealing to-day with the corporation of the nation, and not only with one nation, but with her allies. The shortage has run up from thousands of tons first, into hundreds of thousands of tons and now up into the millions; but when the word came that we must save fifty million tons a year of coal the Department of Engineers immediately set to work, and we soon saw our way clear to save fifty million tons a year.

Overcoming the Shortage

On the other hand, the Department of Production thought that they saw their way clear to overcome part of the shortage by increasing the production several million tons in the year. After we had been at work three or four weeks but had not yet put our plan into active operation, a new order was sent down the line that we must save one hundred and one million tons. That was a big problem. We asked ourselves, "Will the people do it? Can we force them to do it?" And I want to answer that by saying that the people will do it and that we did not have to force them to do it. Let me say right here, in connection with our organization, that among the people merely as a matter of curiosity, the inquiry arose, "What is the status of the Fuel Administration?"

Mr. Martin then went on to say that while the strength and standing of the Fuel Administration were established by law with a penalty attached, the real power of its enforcement lies in the people themselves. The State and local administrators are practically forbidden from making threats under the law. Dr. Garfield has the power of enforcement, but the endeavor has been not to exert that law because it would be like whipping a horse that was already pulling hard. A greater power than the law was in the people themselves.

The greatest care is used in making rulings that may be damaging to some industries as in the case of the florist and others who are making similar curtailments or losing incomes while other industries are going ahead and making money out of war necessities. The fairness of these rulings has not been questioned. The people seem to be willing to go further than the Fuel Administration directs.

The Cause of the Shortage

Now as to the need of coal and why the shortage? Mr. Martin pointed out that it came in part through the enormous number of ships under construction—production of these ships alone has eaten a big hole in the increased coal production in this country, and it is going to require still more coal during the year to come. When these ships get into the water they will use still more fuel to carry our men to Europe: they will consume an enormous amount running into thousands of tons. The navy takes millions of tons of coal a year: our boys can neither be transported across the ocean nor safeguarded without this consumption of coal.

Mr. Martin then spoke of the manner in which men working for wages were saving to lay in their domestic coal supply now. Pointing to a gratifying increase of coal shipped into St. Louis to the home consumer (a movement which is widespread throughout the entire country) he added.

There is a constant need on the part of the industries for coal to speed up the war program. Each day we look forward to sending more and more men to Europe and more materials to supply them, much more than we sent in the early days of the war so that our blow may be the cleaner-cut and more forcible and the end of the war will be brought that much nearer. If we want to save lives we have to make sacrifices to do it; and the American people are doing that all the way through.

I want to state this, that not once have I met a real objector. Sometimes people come to us saying that a ruling seems unduly harsh to this or that community, or to this or that industry, and that they do not think that the saving for the Fuel Administration means as much as their sacrifices would indicate. We want to hear those things. We want to make adjustments; and modifications are constantly coming forth of these orders to which there have been any real objections. If we find a man violating an order of the Fuel Administration we go into his store or place of business and tell him that he is violating—not an order, but he is violating the law, perhaps he does not know the law, and in every case we never find it necessary to do more than throw our coat back and show our badge, our authority, and if he is burning unnecessary lights he will put them out at once; he will do anything to prove he wants to obey the law. We find a welcome everywhere we go. We do not find it necessary to use our authority unduly like a new policeman who uses the club too much. We do not have to do that. When we enter a man's office and say that we are representing the U. S. Fuel Administration, he welcomes us and invites us in. He asks for advice, he is not afraid of us. I consider that one of the greatest indications of the cooperation of the people because where they are nervous and afraid it is proof that somebody has exercised authority too harshly and has not been reasonable with them, so that they are objecting. We have found practically no objectors.

How the Saving is to be Effected

The question is, how are we going to save this coal? One of the first things that occurred to us before the 101,000,000 tons was sprung upon us, when the shortage was only fifty million tons, was to carry out our own part of it as engineers and look after that part that applies to economy of coal consumption in the industries. We know that in the past in designing power plants if we could put in a feed water heater at an initial coast of $700 or $1000, the manufacturer was glad to do it provided that we could show him a saving on the credit side of his books by the installation of the feed-water heater; that has been done in a good many plants. One of the first details that we started on, and which has been put in practice in most of the cities, and has proven to be a great saving as well as a success from the fuel standpoint, is the skip-stop for street-cars in the large cities. It has been carefully estimated, based upon experience in Boston, Washington and other large cities of 50,000 inhabitants and over throughout the country where they have inaugurated a skip-stop program that if the citizens will walk another block to get on a car we will in that way save 1,000,000 tons of coal a year. That is one per cent. of our present shortage, and it represents two per cent. of our original shortage. You can figure very quickly how many families a million tons of coal a year will supply, at ten tons each. You can divide one million by ten and see how many families would be kept warm in this country or in Europe through that saving. In some cases it is apparently a hardship to have to walk an extra block but it has effected a real economy. . . . The National Fuel Administration has as its policy not to wreck any institution, whether it be an association or a private institution or any other institution in this country, but only to so regulate them that the industries may contribute their bit to remedy this fuel shortage.

The Spirit Governing Modifications

Mr. Martin then proceeded to point out how when the first direction for curtailment went out there came back immediately a request for modification, and that since, as special sacrifices or losses are brought to the attention of the Fuel Administration at Washington, through the local offices, full consideration is given to all the conditions and a modification order may go out to set aside some of the unnecessary sacrifices. He pointed out also the fact that the shortage was not evenly distributed over the country, but existed in central points.

In the saving of coal there are some one hundred non-essential industries to curtail from, and with savings of more or less in each one this should save one hundred million tons. The car skip-stop will save one million tons. The curtailment in the clay production industry will save two million tons, and so on.

Coming Direct to the Florist Industry

Coming down to the point of greatest interest to the trade, Mr. Martin then said:

Then comes your industry. It was never said nor thought, nor can anybody ever say of them that the florist industry is an unnecessary industry; nor can anyone ever say it is a strictly non-essential industry from the standpoint of ordinary life; but when the term "non-essential" is used we mean that it is not essential for the immediate prosecution of this war, the intensive prosecution of this war. Food is. But the florist realizes that while we love flowers and want them, and the Administration is not going to do anything that will permanently cripple the industry if we can help it, but in a crisis we are compelled to cut down their fuel fifty per cent. and in that way they will do their part. They have made numerous suggestions individually here and there, and following some of these suggestions there have come modification orders. One of the first modification orders was that allowing you the use of wood and peat wherever it can be transported otherwise than by rail. Other orders have eliminated some of the unnecessary hardships to people who were locally fortunate enough to have that class of fuel that could not be transported beyond the local boundaries.

The next modification came through the allowing all of the smaller greenhouses using forty tons a year or less to go unrestricted on the basis that a curtailment of an establishment of that type would be making more sacrifices than justified by the saving they would make, and it would be better to put part of that burden on some other industry.

Use of Screenings and Standard Mine Run Coal

The next modification, which came through a few days ago, allows the use of screenings until Sept. 10, without restriction. We interpreted that order as meaning that you can store screenings; and this is the reason of it—in the coal mining industry a large percentage of the coal brought up from the mine is foul, it contains dirt and slate which has to be taken out before it is shipped. That in itself is a big loss and materially hinders the production of coal. That is a problem in itself. Some special industries have to use slack. What was commonly called slack is now being called "screenings" because the coal is run over screens that take out quarter inch pieces, half inch pieces, and so forth. Getting rid of these screenings is a great problem with the operator and if we can remedy that difficulty we are going to increase his production; so that the order has been temporarily lifted referring to the use of screenings; they are to be allowed to be used and stored without restriction. Those who are located in this vicinity in the State of Missouri will be interested to know that Governor Crossley yesterday extended that order as to screenings in the state of Missouri to include standard mine run coal.

This is going to let out a large number of Missouri florists who can very easily use mine run coal, which means coal that is brought up and cleaned from the slate, but which contains slack. It is very readily used if used intelligently, and information will be furnished by the U. S. Government as to how to use poor grades of fuel.

Incidentally we hope that the Shaw's Garden officials will be able to see their way clear to obtain a supply of mine run standard coal for the Winter. If they can do that, we will pull Shaw's Garden out of a pretty bad hole and prevent any setback to the plants there.

Directions in re Storing Coal

Now it might be well to give you a little further information about the storing of coal for your power plants or small heating plants. There is a direct danger of fire in the storing of fuel, and you are apt to ruin your fuel if you do not store it properly. Do not attempt to store coal unless you understand the business thoroughly. In storing screenings the pile should not be over three feet high, and a pipe should be run down into the pile by means of which you can put a thermometer down in that pipe and take the temperature. Do not wet your coal no matter how dusty it may be when put in. If you wet the coal you will start chemical action, because the water combines with the coal physically, there is oxygen in the water, and while that combination is

Burpee's Sweet Peas

NEW Winter-Flowering SPENCERS

THE coal problem is one of great concern to the commercial florist, and there appears to be no alternative except to produce such crops as can be grown with the smallest amount of heat. Sweet Peas can be successfully grown under conditions that would not allow production of other popular flowers. We recommend to our florist friends that they sow Sweet Peas under glass for a commercial Winter crop. Sweet Peas are the logical paying crop for the coming Winter. They may be grown with very little heat.

Ericas for Christmas

Gradually we are all getting well acquainted with those beautiful flowering plants the Ericas or Heaths, and that means our customers also will know them in time. There isn't any good reason why Ericas shouldn't be every bit as well known and as popular as the Cyclamen. With the many wonderful sorts the day will surely come when we will see a steady supply of them in the store or show house of every up-to-date florist. The most popular, best known and ideal Christmas sort today is Erica melanthera —a plant in full bloom whether in a 3in. or 10in. pot—with just a touch of Holly ribbon and a suitable pot cover or basket, makes as desirable a gift as any plant you might mention. The question is will you have a supply on hand this year? If you don't grow your own stock the present is the time to get busy; the plants have made their growth pretty well now and anyone with a cold house can handle them nicely from this time until they are in flower by the middle of December; so the sooner you get what you want the better. Don't wait for anything; there is going to be a good Christmas business this year if we have the stock to do it with. There will be a shortage on certain things, to be sure, so why put things off? We have never tried to grow Ericas here but a few left over plants, which were put out in some nice soil and had several drinks this Summer, are in the very best of shape now and promise to be as good as any.

Primula malacoides

Nothing finer for the cold house during the Winter months, no end of flowers when once they start—and there isn't a florist who can't make the very best use of them. While the obconicas want a little more than a Carnation house temperature this would mean damping off for the malacoides, while in a house of 48 deg. they will do finely. Small stock now out of 2in. shifted into a 4in. wont give you much bother for the next three months. For the present they can be placed with the obconicas or the Chinese Primulas, but as soon as forcing begins watch out so they get a cool place.

Ferns for Dishes

How about the little ferns for dishes next Winter? You will need them later and if not in your own establishment you may have to have them shipped a long distance—not a very pleasant thought under present conditions. You can purchase nice transplanted stock in flats from the specialist at a most reasonable price; in fact cheaper than you can grow them on yourself. These plants given a 2½in. pot now and placed on a shady bench will, in a few weeks, grow into large enough stock for dishes. At the present time it takes fully a week to get the average express shipment through from New York to Chicago. Take a hint before it starts to go down below the freezing point—in other words, avoid disappointment.

The Propagating Bench

Get things ready in the propagating house; the sand in the benches a few days before needed doesn't do any harm and it is better than running around at the last minute, with a batch of cuttings ready to go in, looking for it. Nowhere else is cleanliness more necessary than here; get at the corners and cracks; clean thoroughly and keep things clean. Make use of a strong spray below the benches; if wood is made use of, a good dose of hot whitewash before the sand goes in is a fine thing for the benches. With each day we are drawing nearer Winter and delay in taking certain soft wooded cuttings is a risky thing for any of us. In most Eastern and Middle Western localities around the 15th of Sept., a frost hard enough to kill many tender plants outdoors, is nothing uncommon. Most likely the propagating bench will be occupied from now until late next Spring and the only chance for a real good cleaning is right now before you start putting anything into it. We all realize what it means to try to do something with diseased stock and what a job it is to get certain plants, once sickly, into shape again. The propagating bench oftentimes is the beginning of a lot of trouble and a good deal of it could be avoided if things were kept clean.

Erica melanthera

Stevias

It is time the Stevias were brought indoors if they are still out in the field. Usually they make a short, hard growth when outdoors, not the best kind for flowering, but a few weeks indoors changes that. When once indoors and given plenty of water they soon make up for lost time and if planted out on a bench proper supports should be given to obtain best results. The least frost hurts Stevias, but anything above 35 deg. will do for the plants to be used for late flowering. Plants from the field can also be potted up now. In that way they are easier handled, but the best stems and flowers usually come from benched stock.

Solanums

The plants which were grown in pots outdoors, plunged up to the rim in soil, and had just the least kind of care are in splendid shape now. In fact with many the plants are not only full of berries but are unusually early this year in coloring. Keep them outdoors yet for awhile, but don't get caught by frost. Stock in the field should be potted at once; pinch back straggly, long growth; you don't want leaves and long branches but shapely plants and all the berries possible. Take three to five small plants and make up a few attractive pans.

In the Carnation House

The Importance of Proper Watering

You can't pay too much attention to the newly housed plants from now until firing begins. It is now that you lay the foundation for the plants which are to give you flowers during the Winter months. Bear in mind that though it didn't matter much whether it rained or not while the plants were in the field, once well established you must not let them suffer now for the want of water. The man who will arrange things so that the soil in the benches is kept evenly moist right along will have the best results. That doesn't say to keep the soil soaked by any means for that would soon finish the best plants in a short time. Go over the benches each day; it takes just a few minutes to find out the exact condition of the soil; if it feels dry in spots don't water the whole bench but just where water is needed. By going over newly planted benches a few times that way one can get them just right and after awhile the whole bench can be watered alike. Whenever the soil is wet never apply water no matter what the day or the hour; a little bit on the dry side is far better than a little too wet, but a Carnation plant once indoors and started into new growth due to indoor conditions will be set back if permitted to suffer only a day or so on account of a dry soil. The best way by far is to keep the plants going right along. A fairly moist soil, plenty of cultivation, open doors and ventilators and not a sign of aphis or greenfly—that means healthy stock and good flowers later on.

Primula obconica

Benching the Plants

Have you had trouble with your obconica Prim. Roses? They are subject to a number of diseases and frequently we find good gardeners who have or are about ready to give them up for a bad job and won't be bothered any longer with them. There is one way, and a good one, to grow this beautiful Primula with the least trouble and it is well worth trying for those who are having trouble at present. Instead of growing the plant on in pots just plant them out on a bench 2½in. stock at this time will do nicely—allow about 12in. of space between the plants and arrange it so that they will get a 53 deg. to 55 deg. house by November, and a little shade. When planted out it seems that the plants make a far better growth which enables them to overcome, or not mind, a dose of red spider, thrip or leaf rot. You will be able to cut flowers from these plants from December on and whenever you want a plant in a pot there is no trouble in lifting it. If kept a couple of days shaded and watered it will go right ahead and won't show the least bad effect of having been disturbed.

Pruning Roses

Will you please tell me whether it is desirable or necessary, in pruning Roses, to cut above a perfect leaf to prevent blind wood?—F. E. S., Cal.

—It is very desirable, to prevent blind wood, to cut above a perfect leaf. In the case of a strong growing plant it is sufficient to cut above one leaf, but where the plant is of weaker growth we recommend that the cut be made above at least two perfect leaves. J. H. S.

Calendula and Wallflower

Please tell me if Calendulas and Wallflowers will flower in December if seed is sown Aug. 1. What distance apart should they be planted on the benches and which is the right temperature?—J. W., N. J.

—Calendula and Wallflower seeds planted at the date mentioned by the inquirer will probably flower in December, if the young plants are given good attention from the first and allowed to receive no check in their growth. J. H. S.

Do Gladioli in Mixed Bed Affect Each Other?

I am inclined to believe that in a mixed bed of Gladioli containing red and dark purple there is a tendency for the entire lot to become dark colored. If the dark colored ones were cut off as they appeared would that eliminate the trouble? These Gladioli are Groff's hybrids, mixed, so that I cannot separate them before planting, but I thought that by cutting off the dark flowers as they came into bloom it would prevent the pollen from mixing, and the lighter flowers would not be affected.—M. E., Iowa.

—I do not think it possible for red varieties of Gladioli to affect light varieties because of their being planted together or near each other, and I have never heard of such a thing. What happens is that dark colored sorts are apt to be stronger growers than the light colored kinds and if these two colors are in a mixture the dark colors will predominate in a few years, simply because they multiply much faster and perhaps some of the light colored plants die out or are very shy producers, and it would seem that the light colored ones have turned dark, whereas the latter have simply disappeared altogether or have simply held their own while the dark ones multiplied and thus predominated the mixture. I. S. H.

European Notes

August thus far has not quite fulfilled the promise of its beginnings, but it "tearfully" aids in the development of our crops, and as it at the same time helps our newly transplanted plants for the 1919 harvest to get comfortably settled in their new homes we have little reason to complain. Stock seeds for Rutabagas, Turnips, Beets and Mangels have been sown under promising conditions and the plants should be ready for transplanting much earlier than for several years past. As the prices which are being paid for these articles are likely to be very remunerative to the growers, we may rest assured that every effort will be made to secure a bumper crop.

Regarding the present season's crops, Spinach is now nearly ready for delivery, and although the Dutch crop is still held up, there should be enough to go round from other countries. On the whole the growers have fairly good reasons to be satisfied. A shortage of the New Zealand variety appears to be inevitable this year. The crop is a late one and troublesome to harvest, and the price is always too low.

The more important varieties of herbs will be difficult to secure as in many cases the land has been devoted to the culture of foodstuffs or other more important crops. In the case of the seeds of herbs, for which we have to depend upon collectors, the absence of the collectors, who are engaged in more vital occupations, satisfactorily accounts for the non-appearance of the seed.

Carrot is making a good stand and is one of our most promising crops, and Parsnip appears to be a good second. Onion leaves much to be desired, although there are a few exceptionally good pieces to be seen. Leek looks very healthy but there will not be any surplus.

Lewis McKenzie Judkins of T. W. Wood & Sons, Richmond, Va., was a recent caller. He was on his way to take up Y. M. C. A. duties with the A. E. F. in France. European Seeds.

New York Seed Trade

Up to this time (Tuesday), no French or Dutch bulbs have arrived in this city, except the 500 cases of the former and 100 of the latter previously reported.

A steamship supposed to have on board French bulbs is expected to arrive at an Atlantic port soon, and more Dutch bulbs are reported to be on the way via London.

There is beginning to be a considerable demand in the several seed stores for lawn grass seeds for large estates, and for meadow grass, Winter Wheat and Rye seed, and also for Mushroom spawn.

J. C. Vaughan, who has been spending several weeks in New York and vicinity, returned to Chicago on Thursday of last week.

Sergt. Thomas Carr, formerly with David D. Howells, Oyster Bay, L. I., in a letter to Harry Goldberg, of Wm. M. Hunt & Co., says that he is now with the Canadian Engineers at Brockville, Canada, and that he likes the life of a soldier, and expects to go across soon.

William M. Hunt & Co. have recently received advice by cable that their Dutch bulbs are on the way via England.

Max Schling, 22 W. 59th st., reports an extremely large sale of motor lawn mowers, and that grains and Spinach for September planting are moving well.

Chicago Seed Trade

A. M. Goodwin of the W. W. Barnard Seed Co., and his wife, returned home from a vacation spent in New Hampshire. They reached Chicago Monday, Aug. 26, in time to get tagged for the Belgian babies. Both Mr. and Mrs. Goodwin feel much improved in health.

J. C. Vaughan reached home Saturday after spending several weeks in New York and other points in the East.

The new draft will seriously effect the seed trade of the city. There is not a seed house in the city which will not lose some of its most important employees and the heads of two progressive firms are also within the draft limit.

Winterson's Seed Store has received advices that its French bulbs are in transit. The indications are, however, that the supply will be limited. No advice has been received about Dutch bulbs so far. A. L. Schaefer, for several years bookkeeper at this establishment, has resigned his position to take a similar one with a large coal company.

Vaughan's Seed Store continues to keep up its Gladioli display and it is proving of great interest to visitors. Bermuda Lilies, Dutch Hyacinths and Tulips are shown on the retail counters.

Wm. Langhout, a well-known Dutch bulb salesman who figured prominently in the purchase of the Anton Then greenhouse property a couple of months ago, has been forced into involuntary bankruptcy by the agent of Van Zonneveld Bros. & Philippo, Sassenheim, Holland, whose claim, given as $21,703.20, is stated to be the result of a purchase of Lily of the Valley pips. There was a hearing before Judge Landis on Aug. 27 which was deferred until Sept. 3. There is much local interest in the outcome of the case.

Intricacies of the Seed Trade

This article was written several months ago and was reproduced in the Horticultural Trade Journal of England. Naturally, it deals with conditions as they were ruling in that country at the time in which the article was written.

Today, perhaps more than ever, we see tradesmen and dealers of all descriptions dabbling in garden seeds, and the idea seems to be pretty general that the seed trade is a business which can well be handled by the corn chandler, the grocer, general stores dealer, or even the draper. Even in the legitimate trade itself we are familiar with youngsters who imagine that a couple or three seasons behind the counter of a retail seed shop has enabled them to grasp the business and justifies their application for a post as fully qualified seedsmen. And yet I am constrained to opine that of all branches of horticulture none is so deluged in intricacies as the seed trade, and the men who have the widest experience and have studied most assiduously will most readily admit the vast extent of that which still remains beyond their ken.

One may handle seeds until there are few he cannot name at sight. He may be keen enough to tell from a sample in his hand whether it has the weight demanded of a good stock. The presence of "foreign" seeds or weeds may never escape his eagle eye, and he may know at a glance an old or a badly harvested sample, still there may be much of great and far-reaching importance he does not know and, I sometimes think, does not seek to learn.

A well-known seedsman recently remarked to me that no trade exists to which goodwill is of such vital importance as the seed trade. I heartily agree, for the seedsman is every bit as dependant upon his reputation for vending good seeds as the K. C. is upon his successful handling of great cases in the courts of justice.

It was maintained and, so far at any rate as reputable houses are concerned, with truth, that seedsmen habitually do for their own safeguarding all that the recent Government order insists upon in regard to seed testing. No good seedsman would risk his reputation by sending out seeds of bad germinating capability, but I fear that both the Government and a large proportion of seedsmen are disposed to overestimate the real worth and importance of simple germination tests.

A high percentage of germination does not always indicate value; indeed, I venture to say it is not infrequently a very misleading estimate of the actual worth of the seed.

Let us bear in mind that, whether of vegetables or flowers, our finest and best varieties are the result of high breeding and constant reselection, and the higher the standard of perfection the weaker, in most cases, the vitality. Once allow a high-class strain or choice variety to deteriorate, or fall into reversion, and rude vitality returns, with the result that the seed will germinate to practically 100 per cent., but if the quality is gone of what advantage is the quantity?

As an illustration, let us take Ailsa Craig Onion. A home-grown stock of what I will call the bluest of blue blood will probably show to great disadvantage in a germination test beside a sample of rough-grown Californian stock, but grown to maturity the former would produce grand bulbs of rich and even quality, true in all respects, and give capital weight for area. The latter would likely enough have lost character almost to the point of baffling identification. Is it not infinitely more satisfactory to the customer and creditable to the seedsman to handle seed as low as even 50 per cent. germination, but right in quality, than a 98 per cent. stock that produces an inferior crop?

Let it not for a moment be thought that I am straining after an excuse for sending out seeds that grow badly, nor belittling the importance of properly conducted tests, but what I am anxious to impress is the need for even seedsmen to more fully realize the need for studying points other than simple germination.

We know that certain seeds come from certain countries, but it is frequently apparent that a seedsman fails to place sufficient importance upon the precise source of his seeds. I believe it is far less realized than it should be that seeds of a vegetable grown in one country produce vastly different crops than seed of similar stock grown in another country. Has it ever occurred to the reader that Italian Cauliflower seed, although of pleasing appearance and weight, will frequently throw an inordinate proportion of "blind" plants, while Danish seed, much less attractive, will scarcely produce an abortive plant?

Californian Celery will germinate much more than French, but the quality is decidedly on the side of the latter. We have in the country at the present time various stocks of Canadian Wonder Beans. Already, in the germination tests, a wide disparity in germinating power has been revealed. We cannot, this season, attribute this to a great amount of old seed, for the demand of the past year or two has surely absorbed that which was becoming ancient. The real secret is to be looked for in the country of production.

I wish to refrain from making mere dogmatic assertions, but would invite any interested seedsman to grow for test side by side, home-grown, Continental and American grown Beans, and just watch, first the germination and ultimately the cropping of each. I fancy the results will correspond with the order in which I have named the three stocks. When such points as these are considered, we are drawn to the conclusion that the man who studies the intricacies of the seed business with greatest zeal may place himself in a position of advantage over the competitor whose principal guide in buying is the relative price of different samples.

It should be one of our greatest concerns to avoid handling any seeds that are tainted with disease. It has been established that certain plant diseases can be, and are transmitted through the seed from one generation to another. Tomato seed is particularly susceptible to hereditary disease. Celery, too, carries the germs of the disease that has wrought havoc with many crops of recent years. Bean beetles, we know, secrete themselves in the seeds and emerge to carry on their work of destruction in the succeeding crop.

Do we investigate as thoroughly as we ought to do the extent to which infection may be carried through other families? It is possible, at any rate in the case of many fungoid diseases, to trace them in the seed by the aid of scientific apparatus. In the case of seed Corn exported to some countries it is compulsory to secure certificates of freedom from certain diseases. We are wont to resent and protest against every regulation of this kind, but does not careful consideration convince us that despite the additional irksomeness, it would in the long run be of immeasurable benefit if every possible precaution were taken to ensure that all the seed coming into this country from abroad should be healthy and free from the taint of disease? And now that we have compulsory testing shall we not reap the full advantage by making the test comprehensive enough to cover these points as well as mere germinating power? It all makes for the raising of the standard of the seed trade and for the greater production of essential food crops, and surely that is an end worthy of endeavor

UTILE DULCE.

Preserving Seed Beans from Weevils

Beans being kept for seed may be freed from the attacks of the Bean "weevil," says the Ohio Agri. Exp. Sta., by adding two tablespoons of hydrated or air-slaked lime to each quart of Beans when stored away. The weevils enter the Beans while in the pod, emerge after hulling and continue to multiply, feeding on the stored Beans until their germs are destroyed.

Height of Sweet Peas Under Glass

Sweet Peas, T. A. Weston (Eng.) says, have apparently no limit to growth under glass. They simply never leave off growing all Summer.

Mr. Ireland, of Dobbie & Co., Edinburgh, when pulling out his plants has found them to run anything from 19ft. on. At Dobbies the houses are not high enough to allow continuous growth upward, so when they reach the roof they are united and bent in the shape of the general appearance of the letter "S", the plants during the season being thus brought down two or three times.

War Gardens in Sweden

Sweden has been carrying on a campaign by means of the press and of bills posted throughout the cities to urge people to grow war gardens. In the city of Gothenburg some 5000 plats of ground, each about 2000 sq. ft. in size, have been rented from the city, and the number under cultivation this year will be probably six or seven thousand.

These plats are owned by the city and are disposed of by the city real estate office. The municipality owns a great deal of real estate, some of which is improved, but a great deal of which can be put at the disposal of people who wish to have war gardens. The garden plats are leased out for one year at a time only. For the 5000 first taken there is an annual rental of 80 cents each. Because of the heavy demand new lots are being staked out, and as these are of unbroken ground and involve additional work in cultivating they are rented for 26c. a year.

A model Potato and vegetable garden has been prepared in one of the large city parks. Here are given lectures on the subject of vegetable growing. The city has been divided into five districts and has employed a professional gardener to give free advice and instructions in each district. The gardeners must furnish their own seeds, but the city victualing board supplies at a fixed price the seed Potatoes. The long northern daylight makes it easy for working people to do their gardening after the evening meal.

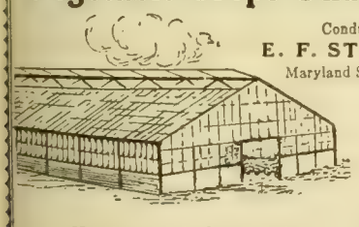
Vegetable Crops Under Glass and in the Open



Conducted by
E. F. STODDARD
Maryland State College

Herein practical suggestions are given for the growing of two excellent cool greenhouse crops.

Methods of Planting Greenhouse Lettuce

The method the florist will use in planting his Fall crop of greenhouse Lettuce, will depend upon the kind of beds or benches used. No doubt many florists have a method for planting small plants which can be used in this case with some modification. Where benches or beds are of such a width that planting distances have to be changed a little, the method of planting will be changed also. Many growers of vegetables under glass do not have benches or beds, but plant their crops down on the ground level. This does away with the expense of maintaining benches, as well as of other greenhouse operations such as the application of manure, soil preparation, soil sterilization; and the crops may be handled with less trouble, time and expense. The main thing at present, in this case with the Lettuce, is to use the space economically and to employ a method of planting by which the work may be done well and in as short a time as possible. A few suggestions will be offered here which growers may use or modify to suit their conditions.

The soil should be in fine condition, and raked level on the surface of the beds. Water the soil the day before planting.

On raised benches and beds, a straight stick may be used on which is marked one of the planting distances. Place the stick across the bench and punch a small hole in the soil at each mark. Then move the stick along parallel to the first line as many inches as the other planting distance and punch holes again across the bed at each mark on the stick. Continue this until the whole bed is marked.

Another scheme on benches is to mark lines across the bed with a stick pressing slightly into the soil, as far apart as one planting distance. Then with a longer straight stick, mark lines running lengthwise the bed, as far apart as the other planting distance. The plants are set at the intersections of these lines.

NATIONAL FLORISTS' BOARD OF TRADE
56 Pine Street, New York City

Another scheme combines some of these ideas. Some growers make a board 2ft. to 3ft. wide by fastening two or three 12in. boards together with cross strips. On the bottom of this board they have nailed narrow strips in both directions at the proper distances apart for planting. Thus when the board is placed on the soil and pressed slightly, several lines are marked at one time and the whole bed may be marked for planting in less time. If the beds are 5ft. wide, the board could be made 3ft. x 5ft., 6ft. x 5ft. or longer if desired. A large board will be heavy and two men will be required to do the marking, but the work may be accomplished with considerable speed. The bed must be level in order to use a long board satisfactorily.

When Lettuce is planted on the ground level the ground may be marked in both ways with a straight stick. Here the Lettuce is planted in blocks that are considerably wider than raised beds or benches and practically all the greenhouse space is planted. Since the men must step on the soil to mark it off and to plant, it may become somewhat packed in places. While this may be overcome partially by cultivation, many growers prefer to use another method.

A board 3ft. wide and as long as desired may be made as suggested above with the strips for marking on the bottom. Beginning at one end of the house, the board is placed to mark the soil and then moved along to mark the soil next to this plot. The men doing the planting may stand on the board and do the work with ease, while the soil will not be packed. When the marked section is planted, the board is lifted along again, and the planting may continue. The planters usually remain with the board, and someone else keeps them supplied with plants.

A modification of this board device is to fasten small blocks of wood, about 2in. square and 2in. deep, on the bottom of the board at the regular planting distances. This makes a hole large enough to set a plant with plenty of soil attached.

When the plants are being set it is important not to set them too deeply. The central bud of the plant should be at the surface of the soil. The soil should be pulled up to the plant from both sides and firmed evenly. A plant which is twisted or bent when it is planted will not grow as rapidly or as large.

Swiss Chard as a Greenhouse Crop

Swiss Chard will offer good opportunities as a greenhouse crop for many growers this year. It is an excellent crop for greens and should meet with ready sale this Fall and Winter. Many people enjoy Swiss Chard as well as they do Spinach. The white stems may be boiled and creamed like Asparagus. The greenhouse product will be tender and delicious.

The crop may be started from seed right where the crop will grow. If the ground is occupied with another crop, the plants may be started and handled in a manner similar to Lettuce. While Swiss Chard is a member of the Beet family, only the tops are used, and the roots may become branched.

The crop will remain where it is planted all Winter. The leaves may be removed for marketing when they are of proper size, and care should be taken not to injure the heart or central bud. Lucullus is the best variety for greenhouse use. The soil should be rich and kept moist to develop the best product.

FOR SALE At WHITESTONE, N. Y.

On account of death of husband, must sell 4 acres of the finest black soil procurable, with 5 greenhouses containing 8500 sq. ft. of glass, with 7 room dwelling. Property must be sacrificed.

Optimistic

R. C. Kerr has returned from the St. Louis convention very hopeful as to the outlook for the coming season. He says that it was just a business meeting and that much good was accomplished, the most interesting matters brought up being the reports of the committee on publicity and the committee on trade and collections. He said it was one of the most instructive and interesting meetings he had ever attended. He says he found that all the florists, despite the labor and fuel questions, anticipate the greatest Winter they have yet had, as they believe they will be able to overcome the labor and fuel shortage by the advance precautions they have taken. The R. C. Kerr Co. is getting along finely. Four of the houses are already completed and four are in process of construction. Everything is expected to be finished by Oct. 15. Mr. Kerr states that excellent Roses are already being cut. Mr. Koehle, manager of the company, has gone to Sherman to get his family.

Wm. A. Reynaud, of O. P. Jackson & Co., has returned from his wedding trip, which he made in his auto to Galveston and environs. On his return he found that the last heavy rain had started the seed business with a rush. He says that indications point to a brisk business this season.

Grow the New Improved Primula Malacoides

Of all the many varieties and strains of Primula on the market now there is not one of them compares, even favorably, with the Rohrer Primula Malacoides. Years of patience and hard labor have developed this one to perfection, both in growth and size of plant, color and production of bloom. A season, such as this, when coal is scarce and expensive, it is one of the most profitable, economical and popular plants for you to grow. The colors are most beautiful shades of Rose Pink, Light Lavender and Snow White. A cool temperature, 40 to 45 degrees, produces the best results. For September and October delivery:

Continued

Louisville, Ky.

Business has been fairly good, comprising mostly funeral work. The funeral of Senator Ollie James, senior Senator for Kentucky, was held at his home in Marion, Ky., on Aug. 29, and the Louisville florists had a number of orders for this from his many friends in this city.

The growers in this part of the country report plants in excellent shape, with indications of the best supply of flowers for this Fall and Winter they have had for many years.

Asters have been unusually good this Summer and Carnations promise to be above the average.

State Fair

The Kentucky State Fair, to be held in Louisville, during the week beginning Sept. 9, according to plans that are being pushed, will no doubt be the best ever held in the State. The entire office force of Secretary Fount T. Kremer has been moved to the fair grounds and is being kept busy making final arrangements for the opening. Premiums totaling $78,000 have been offered this year and some attractive exhibits are looked for.

The Jefferson County Bee Keepers' Ass'n, recently organized, held a meeting at the residence of Dr. J. B. Jordon, at Middletown, Ky., and H. R. Niswenger, bee specialist with the extension department of the College of Agriculture, Lexington, made an address.

Lee Pontrich, son of Simon Pontrich, florist, and connected with his father in his business, has been laid up for several days with rheumatism.

Anders Rasmussen, New Albany, Ind., has been appointed on an advisory committee of the War Industrial Ass'n, recently organized in that city by the Chamber of Commerce. Each industry is represented. O. V. N. S.

Washington, D. C.

No Foundation for "Labor Press" Story

In our issue of Aug. 31, under the Washington newsletter, we published an item for which we had full warrant, to the effect that the florists of that city had been called upon voluntarily to release their unskilled labor and transfer these men to war work without further and formal notice from the U. S. officials. This statement was published by the Washington papers and copied broadly throughout the country, with the information that this same action was likely immediately to be followed in all the States. However, we confined our statement to the exact facts as conveyed to us.

It is now understood that the order referred to was sent out erroneously, and that it was definitely stated to Wm. F. Gude, Washington representative of the S. A. F. and O. H., by an official of the Labor Administrator's office, that in point of fact there were no "official" non-essentials.

In commenting further on this matter, Mr. Gude states that the Community Labor Board simply wants the cooperation of the so-called non-essential interests.

Secretary Columbus of the Merchants and Manufacturers' Association of Washington, after investigation, made the statement that the Community Labor Board of the District of Columbia had no authority to issue such an order or ruling as was published. In making his investigation Mr. Columbus went to the highest sources of authority in various Government branches, but to a man all disclaimed any such intention as was contemplated in the published announcement. Mr. Columbus added: "The circumstance was most unfortunate and should be a warning to all concerned to wait until they know they are right before they go ahead. Washington business interests have nothing to fear, and the matter should be dismissed."

Although Washington newspapers at once published official disclaimers, the original announcement had a serious effect on the employees of so-called non-essential businesses, particularly on that of the florist. In one of the Gude Bros. Co. plants five men quit on the Saturday night, and all would have gone out by Monday unless they heard something definite and reassuring to the contrary.

Fortunately the fact that the order was non-official was discovered in time and all three plants are now running on a fairly normal basis, with everything in good shape.

Wm. F. Gude, Mrs. Gude and son enjoyed their stay at the St. Louis convention, and Mr. Gude was highly gratified with the progress made. He speaks particularly of Mr. Martin's talk on the fuel situation; this is published in another column. The family had a delightful trip home, with four hours layover in Pittsburgh, which was spent in driving around the most beautiful parts of that city. Mrs. Gude said she had never enjoyed herself more at any convention previously attended.

Robert Hilton Lacey, son of R. J. Lacey, a grower located on Morris rd., Anacostia, D. C., today carries a Hun-made scar as a result of having been in action "over there." In a letter to his mother, written on July 11, young Lacey tells of his experience. "I have been slightly wounded," he said. "My helmet saved my life, but I will bring home a scar to show that I have met a Hun bullet. I am in a French hospital, but will soon be able to be back on the firing line. You would be proud that you have a boy over here, after seeing some of the things I have. The boys realize what they have before them and go to their task without a murmur."

Young Lacey enlisted in the Army in June, 1917, and was stationed at Fort Myer, Va., just across the river from this city. He was later transferred to Camp Greene, N. C., and went to France last May.

Another youngster known to the florist trade is J. E. Baker, formerly employed by Gude Bros. Co., writes interestingly of the war. He told of seeing an English Tommy on the Belgian frontier looking at the illustrated sections of a Washington Sunday newspaper which contained an advertisement of the Gude firm telling of their beautiful Sweet Peas. "The florist business here isn't anything compared to what I saw at your store," he said. "All funeral wreaths and designs are made of wax and other artificial material. One never sees funeral designs made of fresh flowers. They have a large Rose that looks something like an Am. Beauty, while the Lily of the Valley here is as common as Daisies back home."

In telling of how our boys are bending to their tasks of making the world safe for democracy, he says, "I sincerely hope that it won't be many months before we will come home victorious, which I know we will."

A conflagration in the basement of the store of the American Florists' Co., at 53 Fourteenth st., N. W., caused a little flurry in that section last week. Little damage was done as the blaze was confined to a pile of trash that had started the mischief.

Explaining an Order Which Was Unwarranted

The published announcement of the proposal of the District of Columbia Community Labor Board of the U. S. Employment Service to denude of labor certain industries which it had declared "non-essential," created consternation in the florist trade last week. The Board proposed to take unskilled laborers out of this business. It developed, however, that there is a great deal of uncertainty as to its jurisdiction over labor and also that it was overzealous in its activities. The Board is charged with the work of recruiting for war work men from industries which are not directly connected with the prosecution of the war. In an explanation the U. S. Employment Service says it is not purposing to use any form of compulsion in such recruiting other than an appeal to the patriotism of the worker and employer. The power to determine priority among industries, and to close up non-essential industries by shutting off supplies, rests with the War Industries Board. E. A. D.

Begonias for Winter Blooming

Please inform me if the following three Begonias are good Winter bloomers and do they make good pot plants; Luminosa, Prima Donna, Erfordia.—G. A. R., N. Y.

—The Begonias which the inquirer names are highly recommended, both for bedding purposes and for Winter flowering pot plants. We suggest that the inquirer buy of some plant grower who makes a specialty of Begonias several of the leading varieties of fibrous rooted Begonias; also such as Haageana, Metallica, Rubra, Pres. Carnot, etc. He can easily propagate these from cuttings and in time they will make good Winter flowering pot plants. J. H. S.

Removing Tree Stumps

Please advise if there is any other way of getting rid of tree stumps other than the pulling method. The trees in question are sound but have to be removed entirely in order to use the ground for burial purposes.—R. V., N. J.

—Tree stumps may be removed by the use of dynamite. Write to the Dupont Chemical Works, 120 Broadway, New York City. We believe that they issue a pamphlet on the uses of dynamite in agricultural operations such as removing tree stumps, draining land and making holes for tree planting. J.H.S.

YONKERS, N. Y.—Alexander Douglas, for the past 3½ years outside foreman for Samuel Untermeyer at Greystone, has accepted a position as instructor in horticulture and agriculture at the Mount Berry (Ga.) Mr. Douglas assumed his new duties on Aug. 26.

Rose Registration

The following request for registration submitted by Clarke Bros., Portland, Ore., has been approved by the Rose registration committee. Unless objections are received within three weeks from the date of this publication, the registration will be permanently accepted:

Name, Mrs. J. C. Ainsworth; class, hybrid tea. Parentage of Rose, sport of Mrs. Charles Russell. Description: habit of plant, upright and vigorous; character of foliage, light green, leathery; freedom of growth and hardiness, free grower; flower, large; color, light rose pink; form, high built centre, fairly full; fragrance and bud, finely fragrant; petalage, 45 to 50 petals; freedom of bloom and lasting quality, remarkably free and most noticeable for keeping qualities, absolutely fadeless. The Rose is similar to Mrs. Bayard Thayer, but is different in size, form, growth and color, and superior for the following reasons: Its fine form, opening freely and evenly; its excellent one shade of color. More vigorous and more easily propagated than Mrs. Charles Russell.

E. A. WHITE, Secretary.

NURSERY DEPARTMENT

American Association of Nurserymen—President, J. R. Mayhew, Waxahachie, Texas; Vice-President, J. Edward Moon, Morrisville, Pa.; Treasurer, J. W. Hill, Des Moines, Iowa; Secretary, Curtis Nye Smith, 19 Congress St., Boston, Mass. Next Annual Convention to be held in Chicago

Trees for a Nursery Show Grounds

Herein Samuel Newman Baxter gives practical recommendations to the florist-grower who is intending to start a nursery show grounds. The writer suggests desirable sorts and specifies the merits of each

Despite the many shortcomings of the Carolina Poplar and the ill repute in which it is generally held, there is no gainsaying that it has been the means of educating the planter to buy more and better trees. Its ease of propagation, quick growth, and resultant cheap selling price, made many a sale for the tree agent which would not have been made with a more expensive tree. Then as the buyer's love for trees grew and his knowledge increased his taste led to additional purchases of better sorts—like the youngster broken in on an old or cheap piano seeks a better instrument with advancing appreciation of music.

Just as the Poplar may have served as the entering wedge for the sale of more and better trees, so also may the florist-grower boom the nursery business, and help himself by either acting as agent for a nursery, or growing a little stock on his own account. To him this article is intended to prove helpful in making a selection. It is based upon a knowledge of the "best sellers" from the nurserymen's experiences, not forgetting such merits as may be especially applicable to the florist's trade.

The florist with no knowledge of the nursery business might easily, in making a selection, be carried away by some plant which appeared very attractive or apparently uncommon, but which the nurserymen regarded as a poor seller. Why, therefore, stock up with this unless the florist be an advertising genius? Granting his ability to create a demand, it might jeopardize his established trade to push as a novelty something that is as old as the hills or—as was found to be the case with the "blue" Rose a few years ago—failed to make good.

Personal preferences or taste, therefore, should be subordinated to those of the buying public, for after all it is the demand or commercial end for which we are all in business and looking for the profits with which to meet old "Hi Costoliving."

To the grower who has less than one-half acre of ground available, the growing of shade trees is inadvisable, particularly if there is a nurseryman nearby. Compared with other nursery lines, trees require more labor to handle; occupy more ground; are longer coming into salable size; and in addition necessitate careful digging and suitable conveyances for delivery. They should be transplanted or root pruned if not sold after reaching a certain stage, otherwise, they will possess fiberless roots and fail to transplant for the customer. If the florist-grower is prepared to meet these requirements, and local conditions suggest a market for shade trees the following are recommended as the most worthy:

Maples.—Norway, Sugar and possibly Red. Plane.—Oriental. Oak.—Pin, Red and possibly Scarlet. Elm.—American. Maidenhair Tree. Linden.—Silver Leaf.

If a vote were taken on the best all-round tree the Norway Maple (Acer platanoides) would be a strong contender for first honors. The Sugar Maple (A saccharum) is splendid for the country but is disappointing under city conditions, and is heir to many ailments. The Red or swamp Maple (A. rubrum) have more merits than their limited use would indicate but their scarcity in the trade may be accounted for in that they are difficult to raise with straight stems unless trained constantly. To overcome this and their rather slow growth they are sometimes worked on the fast-growing Silver Maple (A. saccharinum syn. dasycarpum)—don't stock up with it!— but own root trees are to be preferred.

Planes (Platanus orientalis) will come into salable size quicker than any of this list. Two or three years from the cutting, in good soil, is not unusual for it to make a tree of fair size.

Oaks.—Pin (Quercus palustris) is the most popular; Red (Q. rubra) is faster growing and better. Scarlet (Q. coccinea) is more adaptable for dry ground, is a good seller but scarce at the present time.

Elm.—American (Ulmus americana) is most popular.

Maidenhair Tree (Ginkgo biloba syn. Saliburia adiantifolia) is a coming tree. Practically immune from insect attack but of rather slow growth. The pyramidal type should displace the Lombardy Poplar.

Lindens may be called for. Our native sort is less desirable than the European, and of the latter the writer's observation gives the palm to the silver-leaved variety (Tilia argentea). It withstands unfavorable conditions best of all; holds the foliage later and is invariably of faultless symmetry. This latter may be an objection for informal landscaping.

Except for Silver Linden, which is budded, all may be grown from seed though the Plane is mostly grown from cuttings. Much time is saved by getting small trees—say 6ft. to 8ft.—from nurserymen. These require three to five years' growing on to become of salable size.

Such are the facts as they relate to the growing of shade trees. If the florist-grower has less than one-half acre available and wishes trees marketable without waiting, a selection of small growing trees noted for their flower, form or foliage may be more desirable, and for this purpose the following are recommended:

Japanese Maples.—These are always popular and may be obtained in purple, green and variegated foliage; also various leaf forms, a description of which appeared in The Exchange of July 20. Two varieties, however, should suffice to meet the florists' trade. They are the Blood leaf (Acer polymorphum atropurpureum) which grows eventually to the height of a peach tree, unless pruned, and the Purple Cutleaf (Acer polymorphum dissectum atropurpureum) which grows only about 4ft. high but spreads considerably, forming an umbrella outline. The latter is a less vivid purple than the former but is often preferred on account of its more compact growth. The purple leaf forms are suggested as they are more in demand than the green sorts. These trees are also suitable for growing in tubs. Try a pair of blood-leaved sort for your entrance, as specimen plants by which to book orders.

Catalpa Bungei or Umbrella Catalpa is popular with those who desire a formal, Bay tree effect. They are grafted on stems 6ft. to 8ft. high. Buy a few trees with one or two-year-old heads.

Japanese Weeping Pink Flowering Cherry (Prunus japonica rosea pendula) is another tree grafted on stems 6ft. or 8ft. high and may be purchased as one or two-year-old heads from nurserymen. It is a magnificent sight when in bloom (pink) and is well worth a place on the show ground.

Cutleaf Weeping Birch (Betula alba laciniata pendula) is popular for its white bark and drooping branches of cut foliage. Very ornamental and a good seller.

Dogwoods—pink and white flowering—(Cornus florida and florida rubra) are well entitled to rank as our most popular native flowering trees. Some planters object to the pink flowering but the fact that nurserymen seldom have enough of it—it is budded on the white—gives assurance that it sells well and is the better of the two to handle.

Mountain Ash or Rowan Tree (Sorbus aucuparia) is an ornamental, small tree de-desirable especially for the clusters or orange berries which follow the corymbs of white flowers.

Magnolias (Magnolia Halleana or stellata). The Star Magnolia is a dwarf white flowered sort, the earliest to bloom, and forms such a compact bush that with a little pruning it may be used in formal positions. M. conspicua or Yulan is the large growing sort with fragrant white flowers. M. Lennei is the dark purple and M. speciosa and Soulangeana are the pink forms. Others could be mentioned for a collection but these are the best and suffice for a limited area.

Flowering Apples (Malus ioensis) is the well-known Bechtel's double flowering Crab Apple, the individual pink flowers of which could easily be mistaken for Rose buds. Malus coronaria is the native sweet scented Crab having bright pink blossoms. Many others are admired as flowering trees and ornamental when in fruit.

Flowering Peach.—Amygdalus Persica rubra or crimson flowering Peach is striking for its vivid bloom. The pink and white flowering sorts are also attractive though ordinary. The flowering Apple and Peach must be seen in bloom to be appreciated. For this reason they may be regarded more as an ornament to the show ground, for when not in bloom they resemble an ordinary Apple or Peach tree and as such not likely to attract attention as being unusual. A possible exception to this statement might be when the Crab-apples are in fruit.

Pussy Willow (Salix Caprea) is a good plant to grow. The "pussies" may be used if plants are not sold and their removal serve as a pruning to make plants more bushy.

In conclusion our suggested selection by no means includes all the good things to be found in the nurserymen's stock, but is purposely limited and intended as a beginning for the florist with a half acre or so of ground. The florist-grower who has more than one-half acre available to plant in trees should have no difficulty in obtaining an assortment, for whether it be shade trees, flowering trees, trees of special bark, foliage or fruit, the catalogs of the nurserymen who advertise in The Exchange are replete with illustrations and descriptions of plants which would appeal to the florist's trade. Write for these descriptive catalogs, a perusal of which will make you feel like buying the whole assortment. The growth of trees is not dependent upon your coal allotment. Write now for the catalogs and be ready in October to plant your purchases.

Coal for Private Growers

Private growers and gardeners in the States of New York and Connecticut having brought to the attention of John Scheepers of the firm of John Scheepers, Inc., New York, the fact that they were having considerable difficulty in obtaining their 50 per cent. allowance of coal and, in fact, several of them having, it is claimed, been told by their local fuel administrator that they had been ruled out of coal entirely, Mr. Scheepers wrote directly to the United States Fuel Administration at Washington from whom he received confirmation of the facts we have repeatedly published in these columns to the effect that a private grower is entitled to an allowance of 50 per cent of his average annual fuel consumption for the years 1915, 1916 and 1917, with the exception, of course, that in congested districts where the coal supply is short, there must be enough fuel to take care of the essentials and private dwellings with a surplus left for general distribution in which case private growers would have to suffer along with other less essentials so that the carrying on of the war to its successful termination may not be retarded. He was advised that there was no intention, however, on the part of the Fuel Administration to discriminate against greenhouses to any greater extent than as above given.

In addition, the Fuel Administration reported that it was calling to the attention of the State fuel administrators, both in New York and Connecticut, the facts presented by Mr. Scheepers accompanied by a request that they advise that gentleman more fully as to the stand they were taking on greenhouse requirements.

Limitations Upon Storage of Bituminous Coal

Referring to the item under above caption published on page 337, issue of Aug. 31, there was very little time remaining for us in which to obtain additional information direct from headquarters. The circular we published, as will be noted, was an official one issued by the U. S. Fuel Administration, and the essence or intent of the order, so far as the florists are concerned, was given by Mr. Gude in his brief telegram.

Since then Mr. Gude has had an interview with a representative of the Fuel Administration, who said that that bureau had no more idea today than they ever had had of closing up florists' establishments, but that the order had gone out limiting storage of fuel by the non-essential industries. Mr. Gude called the representative's attention to the fact that the order, so far as the florists were concerned, should be more elastic, because, due to the nature of their work, they will burn all their coal in eight months instead of twelve. The representative's reply to this was that it would be all right and that allowance would be made. Asked as to what about the man with his 50 per cent. of coal on the ground, the representative said that man was surely all right, as because of the fact that he had his 50 per cent. on the ground, that was just so much relief from now on to the prevailing freight congestion.

Mr. Gude writes: This vindicates and bears out my statement ever since last April, and my answer to hundreds of letters and telegrams:

Get Your Coal Physically on the Ground
Pay No Attention to Contracts or Promises

Many florists to date have paid little, if any, attention to this advice, trusting to luck to get more coal when they ran short, or perhaps, thinking that the war might be over before the Winter comes on with all its severity, and that they would then be enabled to get all the coal required.

Mr. Gude further obtained assurance from the Fuel Administrator's office that it was not the intention that any business should be closed up, owing to lack of its proportionate share of fuel, and that if any florist should find himself in such a predicament he should at once notify the headquarters of the Fuel Administration in Washington who would see to it that he would be amply helped out.

Higher Than the Law

Speaking for New York and vicinity, the practical disappearance of the gas driven pleasure machine from our streets and all the avenues of travel frequented on a pleasant Sunday by tens of thousands who take their enjoyment on that day by means of motor trips here, there and everywhere around, has given assurance in the most striking manner of the oft repeated saying in recent years "Leave it to the people; let them be the arbiters."

So far as we understand it, no edict was issued restricting the use of gasoline on Sunday; it was simply a request from headquarters for abstention from its use on that day, due to the necessity of conserving our stocks of oil.

And how willingly and entirely this request was observed is known to all in the parts of this country affected, extending from the Eastern seaboard to east of the Mississippi. This Sunday abstention is to continue until the close of October, thus cutting off the most pleasurable season of the year. However, there is no doubt that the remaining Sundays during that period will be equally well observed.

National Credits and Collections

Last week we published in full the address delivered before the S. A. F. at St. Louis by F. S. Webb, for the reason that we wanted every subscriber to read this article with attention, because from now on credits and collections are going to form a more essential feature of the florists' business than they ever have in the past.

Owing to the conditions which surround every avenue of trade, florists must look more carefully into the credits they give, and likewise to their collections. This for their own self preservation in order that they may be able to meet their bills with due promptness through the collections which they have made with equal timeliness.

Mr. Webb was correct when he said that "there is nothing wrong with the florists' business, but there is something decidedly and radically wrong with some of the methods employed in the transaction of the business, and this applies to the wholesaler, the retailer and the grower." If such a statement had been made by an ordinary collection agency, we would not give it this prominence, but Mr. Webb, through his connection with the Wholesale Florists' Credit Association of Chicago, having come into close touch with the florists of Illinois and surrounding states, must be accredited with knowing whereof he speaks.

The Committee on Credits and Collections made their report immediately after Mr. Webb's talk. It was decided to accept Mr. Webb's proposals of cooperation with the S. A. F., and a committee of three from that body is to be appointed to work with him and settle final details for a bureau which will be independent of but officially recognized by the S. A. F., as, owing to its constitution, the latter cannot legally adopt this bureau as part and portion of its own organization.

Carefully worked out, this bureau should result in much good for the members of the S. A. F., not alone in point of service rendered, but because the subscribers to the bureau, if members of the S. A. F., will benefit from a greatly reduced fee. For instance, the membership fee is $75 a year, but this will be reduced to $35 a year when there are 400 subscribers to the bureau who are also members of the Society. This should easily bring about an addition of several hundred members to the parent society. The service at $35 per annum will be far more effective than would be the service at $100 a year which many are now paying to one or other of the national mercantile agencies; it will be more effective because it will be confined exclusively to the florists and allied industries.

Cost and Overhead

Following President Totty's paper on "Present Day Cost of Production," a committee is to be appointed to investigate Cost and Overhead, and present the result of its work at the next convention. This is another feature of modern business which the florists and allied trades cannot further neglect. With as simple a system as can be devised for getting out these figures, the grower will be fully informed as to which crops pay him the best, and therefore he will know what to continue to grow and what it will be advisable for him to discard. The retail stores in like manner will learn which auxiliary stocks it is best for them to handle and which it will be advisable for them to discontinue. Further, they may learn, through reference to their tabulated statements, the advisability of raising or lowering prices on cut flowers and design work at certion seasons of the year. The keeping of cost and overhead figures, after they have been properly introduced in an establishment can, as a rule, be attended to by one of the employees without extra expense to the house, and will certainly be worth all and more than any expense which may attend its installation.

Cooperative Delivery Service

In these days of shortage of labor, how many retailers in towns and cities to date have formed an agreement whereby one or two of the delivery wagons will do the work hitherto performed individually? In a town that has been running five or six delivery wagons, each retailer for himself, is it not possible for these men to come together and use one or at most two wagons which will perform all the needful service for them?

Retailers cooperating could plan so that their individuality, or the advertising given them by their wagons moving through the streets, need not be lost. The car or wagon could have in bold letters the designation "Cooperative Florists' Delivery," with the names on its sides of all in the agreement.

Consideration of this cooperation service is eminently proper just now, and would prove fully as satisfactory to the customers themselves as would the financial saving effected prove to the retailers.

We will welcome reports of such moves, as we reported were being made in the city of Louisville, Ky., in our issue of Aug. 31.

Cooperative Growing

The same cooperative idea holds good for the growers, where one, two or three, each one using over forty tons of coal per annum but restricted to fifty per cent. of that consumption, could come together and grow all their material under the one range. There could be sufficient output to probably recompense each one of the trio, as with a diminished labor payroll, coal consumption, and a unified effort on the part of all to each one grow that which he understood best, this should enable all three to keep their heads well above water, and be a great step forward toward that cooperation which has become absolutely essential, especially among the so-called non-essential industries.

Running Full Until Christmas

From a great number of sources we learn that a prevalent idea is to run greenhouses full until December, and then put the use of the coal remaining to keep the houses sufficiently warm to tide the stock over until the open season.

There may be those who believe that by Christmas conditions will be such that coal will be released, and that they will thus be enabled to obtain additional supplies. This idea may not be a fallacious one, but it certainly is not the part of wisdom.

It is quite a nice question, if this movement of running full until Christmas is generally adopted, as to what Roses, Carnations, and the like of commercial cut flowers, are going to be on the market in January, February and March. There most decidedly would not be a glut, but a remarkable shortage, which would redound to the profit of those who have decided to run fifty to sixty per cent. of their glass area in full throughout the entire Winter.

The first frosts are not far off in this latitude, and it would be well for growers to make up their minds without delay as to just what course of action they are going to pursue this coming Winter, planning on the basis that fifty per cent. of the average of their coal consumption of the past three years is absolutely all they will be able to obtain for the purpose of heating their houses.

Extending Officers' Credit

In our Indianapolis letter the question is raised as to the advisability of extending credit on officers' accounts held by the flower shops, our correspondent putting it that "seemingly many of these men when taken into the army forget all their business responsibilities."

The question is raised here which must be decided by the proprietors themselves, judging each individual case on its own merits. It can be safely assumed as a business axiom that a customer who has always paid his bills will continue to do so, whether he is a subject for the next draft, or actually in the army. In view of all the conditions surrounding the army officer, the uncertainty of his movements, and in many cases the limitations of his pay, the latter often being lower than that which he had previously been earning, would it not be advisable, where credit is given, to ask for a note of hand acknowledging the indebtedness; possession of this acknowledgment of the debt would, in the majority of cases, enable the florist to collect in due course.

The Labor Situation

The latest bulletin of the U. S. Employment Service, dated Aug. 27, 1918, states that at a conference of examiners who are recruiting skilled labor for war industries the examiners were told that skilled workers for war work must be found at any cost. Assistant Director General Densmore of the Employment Service is quoted as saying that "There must be a curtailment of non-essential production to release skilled men for war work; the country must adapt itself to a 100 per cent war basis right away. There is no time for further fiddling on the tune of 'Business as usual.'"

In regard to the common labor situation the prediction is made that all able bodied men in the country will soon have to find work in some essential industry. It is stated that there is an acute shortage of unskilled labor, totaling 1,000,000, and the State directors of the Employment Service have been instructed that drafts must be made upon the non-essential industries, which must be prepared to give up their workers. It is expected that the workers will enter the war industries voluntarily, being moved by the force of public sentiment.

Apropos Sugar Conservation. That the restaurants in mining districts are aiding the sugar conservation program is illustrated by a sign which appears in a restaurant near Tonopah, Nev. The City of Richmond, Va., has a clergyman who is well versed in flowers and horticulture, and practices his knowledge in maintaining a beautiful landscape and flower garden. On a certain Sunday he said in his pulpit: "In each blade of grass there is a sermon." The following Monday one of his flock discovered the good man pushing his lawn mower, and paused to say: "Well Parson, I'm glad to see you cutting your sermons short, weekdays, but why not do it as well on Sundays?" *

The Fuel Value of Wood

Persons who plan to relieve the coal shortage by burning wood can figure, roughly speaking, that two pounds of seasoned wood have a fuel value equal to one pound of coal, according to experts of the Forest Service. While different kinds of wood have different fuel values, the foresters say that in general the greater the dry weight of a non-resinous wood, the more heat it will give out when burned. For such species as Hickory, Oak, Beech, Birch, hard Maple, Ash, Locust, Longleaf Pine or Cherry, which have comparatively high fuel values, one cord, weighing about 4,000 pounds, is required to equal one ton of coal.

It takes a cord and a half of Shortleaf Pine, Hemlock, Red Gum, Douglas Fir, Sycamore, or soft Maple, which weighs about 3,000 pounds a cord, to equal a ton of coal, while for Cedar, Redwood, Poplar, Catalpa, Norway pine, Cypress, Basswood, Spruce, and White Pine, two cords, weighing about 2,000 pounds each, are required.

Weight for weight, however, there is very little difference between various species. Resin affords about twice as much heat as wood, so that resinous woods have a greater heat value per pound than non-resinous woods, and this increased value varies, of course, with the resin content.

The available heat value of a cord of wood depends also on the amount of moisture present. When the wood is green part of the heat which it is capable of yielding is taken up in evaporating the water. The greater amount of water in the wood the more heat is lost. Furthermore, cords vary as to the amount of solid wood they contain, even when they are of the standard dimension and occupy 128 cubic feet of space. A certain proportion of this space is made up of air spaces between the sticks, and this air space may be considerable in a cord of twisted, crooked, and knotty sticks. Out of the 128 cubic feet, a fair average of solid wood is about 80 cubic feet.

This, however, applies to the standard cord, in which the sticks are cut to 4 ft. lengths and piled 4 ft. high and 8 ft. long. Instead of buying the 4-ft. lengths, however, most people nowadays have the sticks cut into 2-ft. lengths. This results in a saving of both time and labor. The purchaser should, however, take care to see that he gets full measurement when wood is bought in this way. In parts of New England a stack of 16-in. wood 4 ft. high and 8 ft. long is commonly sold as a "run," but contains only one-third of a cord.

Mrs. J. A. Peterson, President-Elect Ladies S. A. F.

Where wood is to be burned in a stove or furnace intended for coal, it will be found desirable, the foresters say, to cover the grate partly with sheet iron or fire brick, in order to reduce the draught. If this is not done the wood is wasted by being consumed too fast, and makes a very hot fire, which in a furnace may damage the fire box.

Report of the Committee on Nomenclature

(Before the S. A. F. and O. H. At St Louis)

The work of your committee for the past year has been merged with the activities of the American joint committee on horticultural nomenclature, representing the American Ass'n of Nurserymen, Ornamental Growers' Ass'n, American Society of Landscape Architects, American Pharmaceutical Ass'n, American Ass'n of Park Superintendents and the S. A. F. and O. H. From time to time the chairman has received reports of the meetings of the sub-committee, consisting of J. Horace McFarland, chairman, Harlan P. Kelsey sec'y, Frederick Law Olmsted and Frederick V. Coville.

At the annual convention of the S. A. F. and O. H. in New York in 1917 this organization voted to become an active participant in the work of the American joint committee on horticultural nomenclature and voted an appropriation of $300 for the work of the committee for 1917. Previous to this action the 1917 Official Code had been published, copies of which were sent to all members of the affiliated organizations. Because of the delayed action of the S. A. F. and O. H. in participating in the activities of the joint committee, but 100 copies of the Official Code were available for its members. These were mailed in January to those members of the society to whom it was thought they would be most useful. If other members desire the code and will write the chairman of this committee, an effort will be made to obtain them. The code has been generally accepted as authoritative for commercial scientific nomenclature in the horticultural trade.

In reporting the activities of the committee on horticultural nomenclature, I cannot do better than to quote from the report of the secretary of the sub-committee, J. Horace McFarland:

"The 1917 Official Code related wholly to scientific names. It was necessary to arrive at a determination on these names before the work, which your committee considers of vast importance, of providing uniform common names, could be undertaken. That work has now been considerably advanced. Information, lists and authorities on common names the world over have been consulted and are being codified. The energetic sub-committee, consisting of Frederick Law Olmsted, the great landscape architect, F. V. Coville, the United States Botanist, and Harlan P. Kelsey, our own indefatigable secretary, met first in Washington, Jan. 5, 1918, and are now continuing the work so that the forthcoming edition of the code shall include usable common names for the plants in commerce.

"We are glad to report that the Bureau of Plant Industry of the Dept. of Agri., through Mr. Coville, has been able to assist by putting several of its experts to work in verifying and connecting botanical and common names, so that the sub-committee may more readily have at hand the material for its expert labor. It is the fervent hope of the committee that the new edition of the code, including the common names, may be in shape for publication not latter than Jan. 1, 1919. When this shall have been accomplished more will have been done toward the aim back of the founding of this committee, which was and is to make buying easier, than it would have deemed possible five years ago.

"It is incidentally noted that the committee has adopted a plan of page and printing which will be more easily read than the 1917 Official Code, which was reprinted for the most part from the plates of Bailey's Standard Cyclopedia of Horticulture kindly loaned us by consent of Dr. Bailey and the publishers, the MacMillan Co. Both the editor of this great work and its publishers have been in hearty sympathy with the work and the purposes of the American joint committee and this has been evidenced in the supplying to that committee, without charge, of a complete set of the Standard Cyclopedia as by consent above noted. Moreover, Dr. Bailey is continuing his help and has under consideration the material adoption of the determined names which will be published by this committee in another great work he has now in prospect."

The work of the American joint committee is far-reaching in its effects and promises to be of increasing value. Your committee feels that the S. A. F. and O. H. should give the work of the committee its hearty support and it, therefore, recommends:

First: That the S. A. F. and O. H. hereby formally adopt the 1917 Official Code published by the American joint committee, as its recommended standard and that it urge all its members to use this standard in catalogs, trade lists, nursery labels, check lists and all other relations with the plants and trees involved, making exceptions by cross-indexing, but not altering from the determined and accepted Code.

Second: That the society continue the appropriation of $300 to provide for the publication of the Official Code, including common names as soon as it is ready, it being understood that the funds so voted be paid over to the treasurer of the American joint committee for use in common with the funds of the other constituent organizations.

E. A. WHITE, Chairman.

Catchings Ants in Pie Tins

In the Western States there is a large red ant whose bite is very painful and lasting in its effect. When a nest of these ants becomes established it can only be eradicated by persistent and continued application of a strong poison in the form of powder sprinkled around the hole. No amount of water will drown them out. As the poison method is slow and somewhat dangerous, the writer devised a trap which is very effective, and if kept in place long enough will eliminate the whole tribe.

The base consists of an annular disk of tin about 8 or 9 in. in diameter. On this are mounted two rings made by cutting out the bottoms of two pie plates, one large and one small. When the three parts are assembled the result is a circular track with two sloping walls, separated by a space ⅜ in. wide at top. The outer walls should be coated with paint so that the ants can easily run up. The trap is then placed over the nest with the hole in the center. Now, ants are always either coming or going, so that in the course of a few minutes almost every ant must run either up the outer or inner wall. This they do with great speed, as the entire nest becomes excited. The result is that they tumble in by the hundreds, and are unable to escape, as they cannot climb up the shiny interior surface when they are upside down. In the hot sun the inside of the trap becomes very warm. The heat soon kills the ants.—JOHN D. ADAMS, Popular Science Monthly

The upper view shows a cross section of pie plates placed over the ant holes to trap the ants. The lower view shows the ants being trapped going on a certain amount of the oxygen will combine and heat will develop. You will not notice it at first but it will finally start smoking. Watch your coal piles and keep them cool.

[While the ant trap just described is intended for the large red ant of the West there seems no reason why it should not prove effective with ants of other sorts, which often prove very troublesome. Ed.]

On the Benefits of Cooperation

The suggestion has gone out in this country from this Department that where hardships ensue from curtailments they are trying to recommend that the different industries or different concerns in the different industries combine their plants if they can. In time of peace a good many people combine their plants and save money by it. A good many people, of course, stand off from jealousy, and refuse to combine with the other fellow because they say he would get the best of the business; that is true, he would. But now, during this war, if you are short of fuel under curtailment you can produce your plants next Spring ahead of time by combining and getting together. That is one of the things that is going to be brought forth in all the industries. The National Association of Laundrymen and owners have carried out this matter to quite a fine degree. They have a national organization similar to yours, but of course their industry involves a far greater use of power than yours does, and they are greater consumers of coal. They have an engineering department, and their national engineer, Mr. Baer, has finished a survey or inspection of every laundry plant in St. Louis that is a member of that association, and wherever their equipment is not modern they have been advised to make it so in order to help along conservation of fuel.

Recommends Florist Committee to Confer with Fuel Administration

They have stopped all leaks; they have stopped steam from leaking through the apparatus and make the most of every bit of their heat. Mr. Baer completed the survey yesterday; and as a result of the campaign that has been carried on by them for the last six months the laundry plants in St. Louis have brought themselves up, we think, to a point where they are making a good record on conserving fuel. It would be beneficial to your industry if your organization would appoint a committee to confer with the national Fuel Administration as to conditions existing in the floral industry where unnecessary hardships are being enforced, or where greater economies could be had. The national Fuel Administration is welcoming such committees from the different industries and ruling on their complaints.

A Questionnaire to Owners of Steam Power Plants

I do not know how many of your plants are going to come under another plan that we have for the conservation of fuel. I am sure that some of you are large enough steam users to come under it. We are sending out to all the steam power plants in the United States another questionnaire. This is a general questionnaire which will be sent to every industry and will go into every detail of power plant equipment systems. The plants will be graded and classified according to the efficiency of their plants for producing certain fuel which is called essential because it is food; also as to their equipment for saving fuel or making the coal produce the greatest quantity of food in the plants producing food products. In the case of a power system that shows up badly, pressure will be brought to bear upon that plant and if the trouble is not corrected it will have slight consideration with regard to future contracts.

Increasing Efficiency

I do not want to state this as being authority from Washington, but that is going to be the policy. We are going to put pressure upon them. Take as an illustration two plants in a different line of industry from yours, producing something that is sold by them and not keeping within the lines of necessary curtailment. One of them is saving the exhaust steam and using it to run a little auxiliary that heats his glue-pots and so forth; another factory is saving live steam by using exhaust steam for heating. That might be done in the case of greenhouses and the cost of fuel reduced that way. No means should be overlooked that will tend to increase efficiency. We are going to give consideration to the man who is trying to save fuel. One of the ways to produce efficiency is to weigh your fuel. The plant that has a system for weighing the coal fired in their furnaces will be more efficient than the one that has no such system. Human nature is such that the fireman is going to reduce his fuel if he feels that there is a record being kept against him. Here Mr. Martin suggested that if need be the florist could keep track of coal used in each watch by chalking up the number of wheelbarrow loads used.

The Careless Consumer will be Curtailed

If a real crisis arises where one man can turn out two pounds against another man's one we are going to curtail the man who is unable to turn out the larger quantity. In general we want improvement in the financial condition of the firm. We do not ask the florists to put in some modern so-called fuel saving device that will run the whole plant on fifty per cent. of the fuel; but whenever we can help we will do so and will send the Administration inspector to check him up and see where he can make a saving.

The question has come up, "Will it pay me to cover my small steam boiler to prevent the radiation of heat with an asbestos cover?" Yes, it will pay you to make that investment. Do it if you can.

I have tried to cover some of the different points that we have found come up in our work. I want to leave this one message with you, that there is a real shortage of fuel; secondly, the necessity for conservation. The Fuel Administration has a great task upon its shoulders. It is not the fault of the miners and operators in not getting out coal. The miners increased their output thirty thousand cars last week over the corresponding week in the middle of July last year—thirty thousand cars increased production in one week (applause) that is over fifty tons of coal to the car. The coal miners are doing their part, the coal miners are not objecting to any conditions that the national administration are making. There are today a large number of foreigners in the mines but the American miners have responded to all calls made upon them.

There has been another department paralleling the Conservation Division and that is the Division of Production. There are men in every coal district who are making sacrifices. Let me leave this request with you: that you get together in your respective districts and form committees locally in your own districts, and nationally, and get in touch with the Fuel Administration and help us to keep from placing unnecessary hardships on you. We will not hesitate to ask you to make necessary sacrifices because I know you will respond.

I thank you. (Applause).

The Gardeners' Convention

The annual convention of the National Ass'n of Gardeners will occur at Cleveland, O., on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 24 to 26. The local convention committee, consisting of Herman Knoble, Walter E. Cook, Frank A. Friedley, M. A. Vinson, R. P. Bryden, Luther Wells and H. P. Rapley have left nothing undone to make the event a memorable one and it is looking forward to a large attendance, both from distant and nearby points. Business is to be the keynote of this convention and the subjects selected for discussion, will furnish material for thorough consideration of the gardeners' relation to the war and the conditions to be met during the reconstruction period.

The program follows:

Tuesday, Sept. 24

Morning: Registration of members; executive meeting.

Afternoon: Opening of the convention by chariman, Herman Knoble; address of welcome by Mayor Davis of Cleveland; reply by M. C. Ebel; President Weeks' address; routine business and committee reports; consideration of 1919 meeting place; nomination of officers.

Evening: Illustrated lecture by J. Otto Thilow, Philadelphia, on the "Flora of Hawaii", to which the members of the Cleveland Garden Club and Florists' Club are invited.

Wednesday, Sept. 25

Morning: Election of officers; unfinished business; paper by Edwin Jenkins, Lenox, Mass., on "The Gardener and the War"; discussion.

Afternoon: Visit to Cleveland's private estates and public park system.

Evening: Banquet.

Thursday, Sept. 26

Morning: Unfinished business; paper by M. C. Ebel, Madison, N. J., on "The Gardener's Opportunity after the War"; discussion.

Afternoon: Bowling contest.

The Hotel Hollenden has been selected as the headquarters of the association, where the business sessions, lecture, and banquet will take place. Members traveling from a distance should provide for their railroad transportation at an early date to avoid disappointment with last minute arrangements. A party will leave by way of New York City on the evening of Sept. 22. Eastern members desiring to join this party should communicate with the secretary of the association, M. C. Ebel, Madison, N. J. Members desiring to join the Chicago party should get in touch with Ex-president Thomas W. Head, Lake Forest, Ill.

"Close-Ups"

Two greenhouse proprietors can legally combine, abandoning one plant and operating the other, but both must keep on the job.

Engineers will shortly report on efficiency boilers in all establishments, which will include those of the florist.

The man with least efficiency is likely to be the first curtailed.

Keep track of your coal consumption. Weigh it before firing. If you have no weighing machine, keep track of the wheelbarrow lots used by each watch, and chalk this up on the wall until a record is taken down on paper.

A keen observer, one who apparently is on the constant hunt for facts, reported that he had not discovered in St. Louis a single bug of any description whatsoever, fly or mosquito. There was no carnage of insects under the electric lights as noted in some other cities. The question has been raised, was the successful outcome of the convention due to the absence of bugs?

Is the world moving? I guess yes!

Conserve Ice

The U. S. Fuel Administration at Washington has sent out an urgent appeal to all to conserve ice. This is to save fuel, as it takes 500 lbs. of coal to make a ton of ice. The Administration states that the large users of ice waste the most and it urges all to use no more ice than is absolutely necessary. The following suggestions are made:

"The principle of ice conservation is to keep warm air away from the ice. See that ice is put into the refrigerator as soon as it is delivered. Keep refrigerator in a cool place. Open refrigerator doors less often, be quick about puttings things in and taking them out and close doors tight as soon as possible. Keep the refrigerator thoroughly clean. See to it that the trap on the bottom of the ice box is in working condition. The meltage of ice passes through this trap and when working properly is full of water, keeping warm air on the outside from entering the box."

New Method of Labeling Trees

Linen cloth is now being used in some of the experimental work of the U. S. Dept. of Agri. in tagging trees and has been found to be very successful. Writing on wooden tags, which were formerly used, soon becomes illegible, while copper tags are not only expensive but are not large enough for sufficient data. The linen tags are first soaked several days in water to remove the sizings and then dried and smoothed with a hot flat iron. Data are written with India ink using a round-pointed pen. The ink soaks in but does not run. Such tags will last a year or longer. When they are to be used for longer periods or under conditions where the tags come in contact with the ground, they are coated with paraffin after labeling. One method is to dip them in a mixture of gasoline and paraffin (proportion 1 quart of gasoline to ½ lb. paraffin). The gasoline evaporates leaving a film of paraffin. If the tags become coated with mud they can easily be washed and the ink shows up clearly. Such tags may be used in a variety of ways, for when treated in this manner they last exceptionally well.

An Overland Trip Through East Texas

The writer has just returned from an overland trip through East Texas, visiting a number of the larger nurseries.

Everywhere the spirit of patriotism was paramount among the growers, and prospects for the coming season's business were encouraging. Seasonable rains have stimulated a strong growth and stock looks unusually fine.

At one of the Griffing Nurseries, large blocks of field-grown Roses were a feast for the eyes and were even at this time averaging well into the heavier grades of plants.

In some sections of the South both Peaches and Plums succeed best on Plum roots, and are being grown successfully in commercial plantings where they are a complete failure on Peach stocks. On Plum roots they are long lived and productive. Larger blocks of Peach and Plum grown in this manner, together with hundreds of thousands of vigorous Plum stocks of budding size were seen, which should in due time help to supply the homes of the South with more abundant fruit, as well as supply distant markets with the early products of the South where our mild climate and rich soil produce fruit of great excellence.

Staff of Truck Owners' Conference on Coast to Coast Educational Tour

This league, or whatever it may be styled, has obligated itself to arrange for conferences in nineteen cities. These will be open without charge to all truck owners and proprietors of these cities and the surrounding territory. The first conference will open in Detroit, Sept. 19, and hold over through the next day. The idea is to develop helpful facts and valuable data on truck operation.

Harold P. Gould, Chairman of the Truck Owners' Conference, Inc., summarized its motives when he said: "At this time when freight cars are at a premium the development of more efficient ideas for motor truck transportation is a vital factor. Every foot of space so saved represents one more shell to harass the Hun, or another bit of flour for our Allies. Thus the conference is a patriotic movement toward helping to win the war."

From what we gather of the intent underlying these conferences, florists operating large trucks will receive benefit through attendance as they will hear many ideas applicable to their own particular business, ideas that may save them hundreds of dollars; for instance, there will be an explanation of how a complete routing and dispatching plan saved one concern $100,000 in truck expense; how another firm saved $1200 in gasoline every month by paying its drivers bonuses amounting to $300 per month, and many other practical plans and money saving ideas.

National Publicity Campaign

The cordiality with which our slogan "Say it with Flowers" has been accepted by the general public is, to say the least, most remarkable. The 20,000 paper signs embodying the slogan which our Promotion Bureau supplied to the National League for Woman's Service were speedily exhausted through its seven hundred or more branches throughout the country, and, like Oliver Twist, the League is back for more. Chapter houses of the League which received a quota of twenty-five signs complain that the "ration" was too small to meet the opportunities for local publicity, and their motor cars have been obliged to operate with "just one sign." The Promotion Bureau, therefore, is arranging for another large output of these signs, not only for purposes of the League, but to supply a great demand coming from other organizations engaged in similar work. Does anyone give a thought to the vast amount of direct publicity for flowers which is accomplished in this direction—and it is only a single feature of our campaign, maturing because we are organized sufficiently to be able to influence it?

There are many ways of obtaining publicity other than those for which our campaign fund was more particularly expected to provide; and it is the object of our Promotion Bureau to embrace all opportunities presented. But, we must not forget that such opportunities become apparent only because of the expenditures made according to our program. Consequently, if we do not progress on the lines laid out, and which entail the expenditure of the major part of our resources, the auxiliary publicity which costs practically nothing is hardly possible of accomplishment.

All this is said because it is imperative that there should be no let-up in the influx of subscriptions to the fund. We are nearing the attainment of our object. The committee has asked for the subscription of $50,000 per year to meet the expense required by its efforts to obtain all this publicity for flowers, and are but a matter of $6000 short of its aim. There are enough florists in the country who have not yet subscribed a cent to the fund to cover this shortage many, many times over, even with an aggregate of small contributions. Will they wake up to the necessity of performing the small part asked of them? The committee think they will. There is every reason to believe that a sense of loyalty to the trade of which they are members, and from which they make their living, will prompt them to make a contribution to our fund in proportion to their means. This done, the plans for the completion of the 1918 program may be at once put into effect and a continuation of the good results already obtained assured.

The Promotion Bureau has in contemplation the issue very shortly of a new line of dealers' helps toward direct publicity. As these aids are provided at actual cost they will only be sent upon a cash order basis. This opportunity is taken to remind the few to whom shipments were made last season on faith of their individual responsibility and who have not yet discharged their obligations, that remittances are expected forthwith, as these transactions were not of an ordinary commercial character and advantage should not be taken of a courtesy.

Through the miscarriage of a communication, a seeming neglect on the part of the secretary to note, during his recent trip in the interests of the campaign, his visit to Denver, Col., leads him now to acknowledge with gratitude the many courtesies extended to him in that city, and particularly the kind assistance and support given him by Messrs. N. A. Benson, Sam Lundy and Ben Boldt, through whom he was enabled to take the best advantage of the limited time at his disposal.

Just What is War Time Thrift

Under this heading, in the Ladies' Home Journal of September, Bernard M. Baruch, chairman of the War Industries Board, asks the women to use as little man power as possible, which means to use as few things as possible, for the consumption of any thing, whether it be clothes, shoes, personal adornment, etc., consumes man power. While Mr. Baruch says in a general way that man power suitable for war work is being consumed in many directions otherwise than that having to do with the progress of the war he hits on the florist as a shining example of what he looks upon as a waste of man power, as follows:

"I can illustrate by a comparatively small industry which is almost wholly in the field of luxury. We have in the United States about twenty thousand men who work in greenhouses. These twenty thousand men are almost all engaged in raising hothouse flowers. (A few are engaged in raising early hothouse vegetables.) Now if we go on consuming hothouse flowers, this twenty thousand of man power will not be available for war work. But if we will put intelligence and the spirit of patriotism into thought on the subject, we shall stop using these luxuries which we can get along without, and this twenty thousand man power will be released to go out on the farms and raise Wheat for our soldiers, or to go into the factories and make shells, guns, airplanes, and the like."

With all due respect to Mr. Baruch and his position, we take issue against his statement as to the waste of man power in growing flowers. In the past few months it has been proved over and over again that flowers are the one thing which our wounded soldiers crave for. We feel confident in maintaining that flowers are really among the essentials necessary to win this war for, were it not for their cheering influence in every direction, their solace to the afflicted, and the brightness with which they illumine the gloom brought about by the war's tragic events, the morale, not only of the army, but as well of our citizens at large, would be considerably affected. Flowers are playing a large part in this war. In proof one has only to read the daily papers.

Deprive the people of America of flowers and what is left for them in the way of visible tokens of the happier days to come?

By all means, we say, take every man that can be utilized, but let the greenhouses run as best they can under their reduced elderly man (much of it these days, woman and child) power. That the government itself does not look upon the florist as unnecessary at this time is evidenced by the fact that it is giving him sufficient coal to run at 50 to 60 per cent. efficiency.

Labor Saving Devices

Take Profit out of These and Send us More

Most florists use a piece of rubber hose fitting on the thumb when taking cuttings. I have found this in the way, and instead use the leather device which is illustrated herewith. This fits over the knife, the curve following the line of the thumb. Having used this on all kinds of cuttings I find that by its use one gets a good, clean cut, and the leather guard is not in the way when stripping the leaves. I have found it a great help.—CHARLES O. BARKE, with Stevens the Florist, Plymouth, Mass.

Finding the ordinary garden rake too coarse to use among the plants just appearing, I made a rake and used it where I could not handle a larger rake. The illustration clearly shows the whole construction. Wire

By having tooth-holders equipped with teeth of different sizes and set at various distances apart a combination rake is obtained.—JAMES M. KANE, Popular Science Monthly.

RETAIL DEPARTMENT

The Retail Florist and the Undertaker

Do We Owe the Undertaker a Commission on the Orders he brings in, or not? W. Cleaver Harry in this article expresses himself strongly on the subject and undoubtedly many of our readers will agree with him in his conclusions. The remedy he offers is worthy of careful consideration. This subject might well be taken up by the S. A. F. and O. H., as Mr. Harry suggests, for consideration by the proper committee.

MANY retail florists allow a commission, running from 15 per cent. to 33 1/3 per cent., on all orders received directly or indirectly through undertakers. These florists, I can safely say, represent the majority of the craft. Why should they pay tribute on business that rightly belongs to them, not in part but wholly? Is it good business to continue to do so? And why? Please give reasons. The metropolitan stores, as far as my observation and experience go, give no commissions or discounts on this kind of business. The average florist bids against himself when he caters to the undertaker, instead of doing business directly with the customer. Anyhow it seems pretty "soft" for the undertaker.

When I was a boy in the old home town, my school teacher boarded with the undertaker. I remember quite distinctly hearing her pass the remark that she could always tell when Mr. Shroud had a funeral because they had flowers on the table and ice on the butter. Personally, I have very little use for the undertakers, but it must be perfectly understood that personal feelings must not enter into or influence the discussion of this important question.

If I owe this gentleman in the well-worn Prince Albert a portion of my earnings on my mortality business, I want to pay him; although, just why I am in his debt is not quite clear to me. Once I worked for a good firm that catered almost exclusively to the undertaker business. The firm advertised persistently to undertakers, both in town and out, by mail and by personal solicitation. The commission given was 25 per cent. on all orders they influenced. The object was to get all of the undertakers lined up to do a business of great volume. The designs we sent out were conscientiously executed, with the idea of encouraging the funeral man to work harder, by pleasing his customers. The store was busy always with this work. At the end of one of the busiest years, an auditor was called to balance the books and it was found that the store had lost just $770 that year, in spite of an ever-increasing business. But the undertakers got their "velvet" and those who forgot to pay their bills got more.

I never met a retail florist who was entirely satisfied with the arrangement of allowing the undertaker a commission. Some express partial satisfaction; others tolerance only, and others nothing but disgust. One retailer and small grower in an industrial town where there was a large foreign population found an ally in an undertaker who collected the bill for flowers along with his own and immediately turned it over minus his commission.

Fair and Unfair Competition

This commission basis has often led unscrupulous retailers to take unfair advantage of their "brothers in arms," by offering a higher commission than the rest were paying, with the intent of getting a controlling interest in this business; but he does it in every case at his own expense. By taking chances, he decides to take the extra out of the orders, but fails to figure that when stock is scarcest and highest is the fateful time when his undertaker will send in the most aggravating orders. But the orders are taken and must be filled in spite of what you told him over the 'phone about Lily of the Valley. There is nothing to do but go on with the hope that you can get back at him in the Spring or next Summer.

With the undertaker this business is a side line, a by-product as it were; it is just like finding money, with no trouble and no responsibility; for he sees to it that the florist shoulders that. Strike a balance some day, like the store I mentioned in a previous paragraph, and see how much profit there is in allowing someone else to do your business for you and get the credit for it.

The florist who caters to the undertakers loses his own individuality. He plays into the hands of his agent. In this way he is ultimately working against his own best interests. If it were not for the commission, no undertaker would offer to take care of the flower orders, and the customers of the florist would do business with him direct, choosing their florist as they choose their undertaker.

A Problem for the S. A. F.

If this business is to be placed on a commission basis why not have the national society take it up and union-

ize the tariff with fines and penalties for those who try to exploit it? There is absolutely no parallel between the F. T. D. commission arrangement and the one in question. The former is a trade arrangement where the one who gets the order is not an agent for the one who fills it, but a partner in the sale.

The undertaker proposition is legally right as far as that goes, but the question on the table is: Why is it necessary to employ agents with all the risk, bad debts, trouble over commissions and loss of prestige, when we are paying a main street rent, advertising locally and nationally? There is no need for a fine store in a fine location, where agents get the work and collect for it. A back room or a good basement on an unknown street at a nominal rent will cover all.

Times Have Changed

Business is going through a process of realignment. "The old grey mare isn't what she used to be." We can no longer give something for nothing. At one time we thought it really didn't matter, but now we frankly admit it matters considerably. The selling cost has got to come out of the goods. Long credits are impossible on both sides of the transaction. Neither the wholesaler nor the retailer can wait beyond the 30 day limit for the money.

No florist ever dabbled in the undertaker commission business who did not have to wait for his money, and often wait in vain. Therefore, the retailer will either have to take it out of the goods he delivers through his agent or face annihilation for his stupidity. Even the man who has but small respect for his business shudders at the thought of sending out a double grade of work: One for the customers who buy directly and another of much inferior quality for those who order through the agent. To sum up the situation, the commission given to undertakers is just plain "graft."

The Remedy

The solution of the problem, to the man who is aroused to the question, why continue? is to advertise direct. Discontinue all commissions and thereby do away with the undertaker competition which has been established by ourselves against our business and our whole trade generally. If you follow this suggestion it will not be long before we are in control of the situation.

Direct advertising will change conditions so that customers will not even think of asking an undertaker to get flowers for them. "The problem of business today is the problem of markets. Advertising creates and insures markets. Therefore, advertising is the safeguard of business," says Associated Advertising, in the August number. I know an advertiser, a retail florist with three stores in a large city. His business is such that he must do plenty of funeral work. Yet he employs no agents; gives no commissions. He creates his own market by the only legitimate method, advertising. He uses a stock booklet illustrating the work and conveying a direct solicitation in a dignified manner. These booklets are mailed every morning to people who are likely to need this work, information being obtained from the death notices in the newspapers. He says: "I know I get returns. We are always busy with funeral work and frequently the customers come into the store bringing my catalog. Furthermore, this is nearly all cash business and I know exactly where I stand."

How to "Say It"

It was not at all a remarkable nor an uneducated man who told Max Schling he wanted to "Say it with Flowers," but didn't know how.

Both the idea and the slogan "Say It With Flowers," is in its infancy, so to speak, and we have repeatedly called attention to the fact that comparatively few of the public up to today know of the facilities ready to their hand wherewith to do the saying.

To educate the masses calls for publicity and more publicity. A million dollar fund spent for advertising in leading publications would have its due weight, but even that expenditure would serve to educate a far less number of people than one not a close observer of advertising results might be apt to give them credit for.

It should be the effort of every retailer to cooperate to the full with the National Publicity Campaign through the dissemination of his own literature—always more literature.

The Undertaker and the Florist

Editor The Florists' Exchange:

In THE EXCHANGE of Aug. 17 I noted a letter in regard to giving undertakers a commission. Now I do not know what kind of a florist our friend is, but I never saw an undertaker who wouldn't "come across" with a "five spot" for a good tip. As far as giving 25 per cent. to 33 per cent. is concerned, 20 per cent. ought to be enough, the same as the florist gets, but if our friend thinks that the florist can cut out the undertaker he has another think coming, for it cannot be done. I know it comes hard sometimes to part with $1.25 on a $5 order, or take a $50 order and give the undertaker $12.50 out of it, but the chances are that you would not have got the order if it hadn't been for the undertaker.

"Have him keep in his own back yard," this florist says. Do we always keep in ours? Does the undertaker get so much? Well, I know a lot of them, and if I had as much on my books as they have I'd be a fit subject for "Middletown, Conn., on the hill." I do not think that we can cut out the undertaker, and if some of them want you to give them a commission, why "cough up," and thank heaven you got the job.

We florists are all honest and would not stick together even if we did agree to cut out the undertaker. You will have to go to him anway some time; he is bound to get you in the end. The answer is "Why is Ann?" I do not think it can be done. We all hate to give the other fellow a "rake off," but as some of the prominent florists all over this glorious old U. S. A. do the same I could name a few but THE EXCHANGE would not print their names—why fill the paper with something that "cannot be did." Give us a tip, Brother T. S. of N. J., as to how to get business without parting with some good coin.

You say that you could not make a $10 pillow with the words "Mary Ann" on it, give the undertaker his commission, and make a fair profit. Well, I've seen it done at a place where they make a pillow and put in flowers that I could not buy at wholesale for less than a "ten spot" and still give the "comm." to the undertaker; not 25 per cent. but 33 per cent.; and do it every day; not certain seasons of the year, but all the time. So, my brother from New Jersey, I think that we will have to let this matter stand for the present.

G. G. MCCLUNIE.

The Boutonnière Idea

The statement was made by Richard Vincent, Jr. on the floor of the S. A. F. convention that if a fair proportion of the business men and women (and we might add the "shopping" women) could be educated into the wearing of boutonnières and modest corsages, this one factor alone would consume more commercial flowers than we raise.

To this we add our own suggestion that if the florists generally would make up and expose for sale on a table outside their doors these boutonnières and small corsages, in tasty assortment, offering them at reasonable prices, the resultant sales would be gratifying and show in most cases a constant increase. If placed in full view it would be so handy to pick up a boutonnière and drop ten cents or a quarter on the table as to be irresistable to many. Eventually it would become a habit.

Why not try it, some of you readers? See that your boutonnières are stylish and made of absolutely fresh flowers that are not going to wither in an hour or two.

Abandon the idea, too, that exposing flowers for sale in this manner would be "cheapening" the store.

Saved Freight—Saved Delay—Got Fresh Plants

Editor Florists' Exchange:

In a recent issue you told of several florists in the Pittsburgh region making an extended auto trip for their plants, but previous to reading that article we had determined that it would be necessary to procure our Carnation plants from some source where we could effect the delivery through the medium of our automobile.

Therefore, on Sunday, Aug. 25, we journeyed to Hightstown, N. J., to the establishment of Jas. H. Black, Son & Co., a round trip distance of 110 miles, for our Carnation plants; secured them in first-class condition, and reached home without a mishap (which goes without saying, our "automobile" being a Ford).

Aside from being a pleasure trip, we accomplished something that will more than repay us—as we secured stock that had not suffered by delayed transportation, and we further assisted somewhat in relieving congested traffic conditions.

I feel sure that if your paper would place before its readers the benefit derived from procuring stock that has not suffered through being in transit too long, wilting and heating, more florists would avail themselves of the convenience of their auto service for such purposes; but it is only through continued publicity on these subjects that these innovations are proven to be practical. It is my belief that the running cost on such trips will be more than saved if better stock is finally delivered at destination by the adoption of such methods.

Regarding THE EXCHANGE, I am a subscriber and a reader, and I fail to understand why all subscribers are not readers, as THE EXCHANGE always contains articles of value to the trade from all angles.

Our Florist Soldiers

The Editor would be glad to receive and publish items of information concerning the lads who have joined our country's naval and military forces.

Arthur K. Rupp, whose portrait is shown herewith, and who is now at Camp Lee, Va., is the son of John F. Rupp, the well-known grower of Shiremanstown, Pa. Young Rupp was graduated from Oberlin (O.) College in 1914, and after graduation assisted at the Rupp greenhouses at "Ruparka." For the past two years he was engaged in munitions work and when called to the Colors was on the office force of the Bethlehem Steel Co., at Steelton, Pa.

Russell Kober of the Chalfonte Cut Flower Co., Philadelphia, Pa., is now in the Army.

Eman Frana, till recently employed on the Capt. John S. Phipps estate at Westbury, L. I., N. Y., has volunteered in the Bohemian Corps and is in training "somewhere in France."

Lloyd and Floyd Holmes of Westboro, Mass., have been accepted for special war service and are being trained as auto mechanics.

Burt Huttinger of Pittsburgh, Pa., who enlisted in the Navy last May was assigned to an ocean-going tug in convoy work, and has made two trips across.

Harry Langhans of the Empire Flower Shop, Pittsburgh, Pa., has been sent for military service to Camp Forest, Lytle, Ga.

Andrew G. Bisset, son of Peter Bisset, has been made Senior Lieutenant in the Navy. He is stationed at New London, Conn. Another son, Peter Bisset, Jr., is Corporal in the 23d Engineers, now overseas.

Charles Conley, for many years in the employ of Welch Bros. Co., has also joined the Colors.

Martin Strumph, salesman with Henry M. Robinson & Co., Inc., Boston, Mass., is now with the Colors. This makes the eighth star on the Robinson flag.

We are glad to learn that Lieut. Robert Holmes, son of Eber Holmes, of Madbury, N. H., who was severely wounded in France, is now on the road to recovery. Eber Holmes is well known to our readers for his articles on Rose culture which have appeared in THE EXCHANGE.

Mail for Soldiers

The Post Office Dept. invites the special attention of the public to the ruling that soldiers' mail, including letters as well as parcels must be specifically addressed to military units in order to reach the addressee for whom they are intended. Soldiers letters and parcels not specifically addressed to company and regiment or other military unit will be withheld from despatch in the mails.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

The ending of August was very welcome in this section as it was the poorest month the cut flower business has experienced for some time. Business has been dull all through the month, making things discouraging to growers of outdoor flowers. There have not been any really good flowers all month and prices were extremely low, especially for Gladioli. There have been large quantities of these on the market but all of inferior quality. There is a good demand for good Gladioli but few are to be had. Some excellent Asters are reaching this market and have a good demand at fair prices. If good stock can be had the writer feels there would be a fair amount of business. Roses are plentiful again but meet with little call, on account of their poor quality. They are most short stemmed. Ophelia is the best variety being received. American Beauty Roses are slow in moving, especially the longer stemmed stock. They have to be sold on the day received as they open rapidly. Lilies are in heavy supply.

In the Service

Bert Huttinger enjoyed a five days' furlough with his friends recently. He enlisted in the Navy last May and has been assigned to an ocean-going tug in convoy work. He has made two trips across. Before enlisting he was employed by G. P. Weaklen & Co. of the East End.

Harry Langhans of the Empire Flower Shop has been sent to Camp Forest, Lytle, Ga., for military service.

The employees of the McCallum Co. had a very pleasant outing on Labor Day, at the home of Edw. Niggel, Wildwood, Pa. The feature of the day was a Corn roast and a dance in the evening.

Rochester, N. Y.

Market conditions have shown a slight improvement. Demands for stock are a little more active and the general tone of the business seems to have a little more snap to it. Whether this is just a temporary spurt or not time alone will tell, but judging from the past few months' business it does not seem that the business, insofar as the war is concerned, has suffered much to date. The market here is abundantly supplied with all the flowers that are needed. Asters show a falling off in supply and it will be no surprise if late Asters are scarce; at least from present indications that will be the condition. Roses are fairly plentiful, with demand just about equal to the supply. Gladioli, which have been a glut on the market all season, are shortening up and there is a fair demand for them, but at very moderate prices, as they have been selling at extremely low prices all season.

Industrial Exposition

A number of florists and growers are planning for a display at the Rochester Industrial Exposition, but owing to the conditions caused by the war there will not be as much done as in other years. However, a very creditable display is promised.

Mr. Vick, of Hart & Vick, Inc., reports excellent prospects for the coming season. Alterations are contemplated which, when complete, will provide Rochester with one of the finest seed stores to be found anywhere.

Stephen Green of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, was a recent caller, reporting very satisfactory trade conditions existing along the line. W. F. Bultmann and Mrs. Bultmann, of Syracuse, were also visitors. H. B. S.

Lancaster, Pa.

No news is usually considered good news and this will aply to Lancaster for the past week. There has been nothing startling and yet trade has been good, being pretty evenly divided among the various stores.

The growers are all busy getting into shape for the Winter, and this means a little more work than usual, as many little cracks and crevices that are ordinarily left open in the rush of Fall work are being carefully closed up.

Lancaster is getting to be a noteworthy source of supply for florists in other sections. We have for a long time been larger distributors of Geraniums in the form of rooted cuttings than any other one city in the United States, and now come the Rohrers with their improved strains of Primula and Myosotis, sold through a middleman, it is true, but a Lancaster product all the same.

Express Service

Express service from here is good. There is no delay in getting goods away from the city, but it seems that when they reach the larger cities, either for transfer or delivery, they get lost just long enough to have the stock ruined. It is a gamble all the way through. One shipment will get through all right; five others for the sames place will be held up somewhere in transit and be ruined. Parcel post seems a bit expensive when shipments go beyond the third zone, but they seem to get there and that is the most important point.

T. J. Nolan made a sort of a farewell visit to Lancaster the past week. He expects to be called off the road for the duration of the war, but we hope his expectations wil not be realized, as he is always a welcome visitor to our club affairs.

The drought has been broken by a good heavy rain and the weather cooled almost beyond comfort; the change came as a welcome relief from what August had given us. ALBERT M. HERR.

The Market

Sept. 3. The pronounced features of the wholesale cut flower market this week are seasonably large arrivals of most items of stock, and a weak demand.

On Saturday of last week, according to general report of the wholesalers, there was no perceptible increase of sales of flowers for use on Sunday, "Heroes' Day," on the "Heroes' Flower Mounds" in the city parks. However, Mayor Hylan's request in his recent proclamation that flowers should be used in that way is highly commended, since it inaugurates a custom which may become permanent.

American Beauty and hybrid tea Roses, mostly of indifferent quality, as is usual at this season of the year, and largely in the shorter grades, are all moving slowly, No. 3 and No. 2 grades at 25c. to $1 per 100, and the best grades at from $2 to $6 per 100, with a few choice selections of preferred varieties selling at higher figures.

There is an increasing supply of Carnations, but about the same demand as previously. Prices of those sold range from 25c. to $1 per 100, but many cannot be disposed of at any price.

Cattleya orchids are still in short supply and the best command a price above the $1 mark. There is a fair supply of white and pink Lilies, the former moving slowly at $5 and $6 per 100 and the latter at from $1 to $3. The best of the moderate supply of Lily of the Valley is selling at from $6 to $8 per 100.

Asters, Gladioli and other Summer flowers and greens are in abundant supply, and are meeting with a weak demand at quoted prices.

Heroes' Day

Sunday, Sept. 1, designated by Mayor Hylan in a proclamation as Heroes' Day, was observed throughout New York City, which on that day bowed its head in reverence for its sons who laid down their lives on the battlefields of France. In virtually every church and park and in many of the principal meeting halls throngs gathered to pay tribute to the heroes in whose honor Mayor Hylan had appointed the day as a special memorial day.

In the parks men, women and children heaped flowers on the mounds raised for that purpose in accordance with Mayor Hylan's special request in his proclamation. From airplanes circling overhead were also dropped bouquets of Roses and other flowers. There were patriotic speeches and music in all the parks and other meeting places, especially in Central Park, Battery Park, Hamilton Fish Park, Mount Morris Park, Van Cortlandt Park; Highland Park, Queens; Curtis Field, Richmond; Poe Park in the Bronx; at the Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument, at 180th st. and Boston rd., and in McKinley Square, but the largest turnout was in Prospect Park, Brooklyn, where it is estimated 75,000 people gathered.

While the park ceremonies were in progress "taps" were sounded at 3:59 p.m., and traffic stopped at the same time in all of the streets, and pedestrians stood with uncovered heads in silent prayer for our soldier dead.

The observance of this day was closed by a monster memorial meeting at 8 o'clock in the evening at the Hippodrome. Mayor Hylan and his guests occupied a box at the right of the stage, and official representatives of Italy, France, Belgium, Great Britain, Cuba, Japan, Argentina, Serbia and Spain occupied boxes draped with their national colors. There was a storm of applause as a group of wounded soldiers, sailors and marines passed down the aisle. There were present 1000 seamen in white uniforms flanked by American veterans from France. Music by the Naval Band from Pelham Bay Training Camp, singing by John McCormack, and a recitation by Ethel Barrymore were features of the occasion. Mayor Hylan pinned medals on 75 women who had lost sons in action and spoke of the city's and nation's pride felt in their service.

There was noted at the flower mounds in the several parks a close mingling of the people of all classes and walks in life, the rich throwing on the mounds elaborate bouquets, and the poor casting their simple sprays of flowers and green foliage. Many of these had evidently suffered, as their tear-stained faces showed, the loss of one dear to them.

Eman Frana, formerly gardener on the estate of Capt. John S. Phipps, Westbury, L. I., N. Y., has volunteered in the Bohemian Corps and is in France.

Club Meeting

The attention of the members of the New York Florists' Club is called to the fact that, as stated with some details in our last issue, the first meeting of the club for the season will be held on Monday evening, Sept. 9, at the club's rooms.

Jewish Welfare League

The Jewish Welfare Board of the U. S. Army and Navy is sending out a call for workers in its organization for home and overseas service. Big men, between the ages of 36 and 55, men with personality, "pep," and executive ability and ideas, possessing the gift of leading and inspiring youth are wanted. The national headquarters of the board are located at 149 Fifth ave., New York City, where all those who are eligible are urged to apply. The board states that "no man is too big for this job."

Trafalgar Square London Flower Show

Giving further details of this most successful enterprise, our correspondent, T. A. Weston, writes us that the National Sweet Pea Society, the British Carnation Society, and the National Rose Society, cooperated under the leadership of the Royal Horticultural Society, and that this latter really organized the show for the benefit of the British Ambulance Committee, a body of philanthropists which devotes its time to helping the French Red Cross. The British Red Cross looks after its own men, but the British Ambulance Committee is an independent institution presumably being formed to aid the French who were not too well served with cars.

The total of the week's sale of flowers was in the neighborhood of $25,000, the Carnation Society itself taking in $1100.

Business Difficulties

Alex. McConnell, 611 Fifth ave., New York City, has filed a petition in bankruptcy with liabilities at $82,419. The assets in real estate stock in trade, etc., are given as $99,080. The accounts scheduled as due him show money in comparatively small amounts from many prominent New Yorkers. Mr. McConnell has nurseries at New Rochelle, N. Y., which he values at $33,000. He also owns No. 265 West 54th st., which he puts in at $22,000; also 61 West 49th st., valued at $22,000. The largest unsecured creditor is George Kemp, real estate, $10,116. The secured creditors' claims are $54,076. He also owes for taxes $5365.

We keep in close touch with the best buyers, post shippers on market conditions; in fact, we leave nothing undone that makes for a satisfactory service.

Market Report

Sept. 3.—Conditions at the wholesale flower market are not any too bright. There is an oversupply of a number of varieties, with no sign of increase in the demand. After the spell of hot weather the nights have turned decidedly cooler and flowers are of much better quality.

The supply of American Beauty Roses is unusually large for this time of year, and those offered have 3ft. and 4ft stems. The demand is rather meagre for such fine stock and they are selling for from 4c. to 20c. apiece.

About two weeks ago there was a dearth of hybrid tea Roses but conditions have changed; there is now a heavy oversupply and prices have slumped; they are ranging from 50c. to $6 per 100 for well grown stock.

The supply of Carnations has increased but the stems are short and they have very little call, as there is so much other material that can be used as a good substitute. The price is from 50c. to $1 per 100, although few reach the latter figure.

Cattleya orchids are extremely scarce but have little call.

The supply of Asters is large; they are of good quality and sell fairly well, although the price is not high, ranging from 50c. to $1 per 100. Lilium longiflorum is not abundant; prices are from 8c. to 12c. apiece.

Gladioli dominate the market. They are of good quality; the price is from $1 to $3 per 100. A full supply of Cosmos sells well. Dahlias are abundant, but meet with little call. A number of miscellaneous flowers are offered but these are moving sluggishly. Chrysanthemum Golden Glow is being sent in by a few growers and they sell nicely. There is an ample supply of greens, but the demand is light.

Children's Exhibit

The Mass. Hort. Society's exhibition of products of children's gardens, on Aug. 31 and Sept. 1, was a great success. The three halls were well filled and the vegetables and flowers were of excellent quality and the competition was keen. A remarkable improvement has taken place in the exhibits in the past two years and undoubtedly the next generation will know a great deal more about the production of food than the present generation does.

The first meeting of the Horticultural Club of Boston will be held at the Parker House on Wednesday evening, Sept. 4.

Joseph E. O'Donnell, assistant salesman for Thomas Roland at the Cooperative Market, was married on Aug. 17 to Miss Olive M. Rice of Medford. They have been spending their honeymoon in Maine. The young couple have the well wishes of their numerous friends.

With the Colors

John Elliott, son of William H. Elliott of Brighton, has been promoted to captain and is in charge of an aviation squadron in Florida. George T. Elliott, Mr. Elliott's eldest son, has been in active service in France for some time.

Martin Stumph, a salesman with Henry M. Robinson & Co., Inc., has joined the Colors. This makes the eighth star on the Robinson flag. Chas. Robioson has returned from Millington, Mass., where he spent a month with his family.

Frank Connely, who has been in the employ of Welch Bros. Co. for many years, has joined the Colors.

The writer is glad to learn that Lieut. Robert Holmes, son of Eben Holmes, who was severely wounded in France, is now convalescing nicely. R. C.

Continued Improvement

Sept. 3—There is a general trend towards better market conditions; each week sees an improvement over the former one. Cooler weather has in a general way improved the condition of stock, especially Roses. The shipping trade is good and well up to the normal of past seasons. City trade is slow, funeral work proves so far to be the main outlet for the retailers' stock.

American Beauty Roses are having a good call and the limited stock that now comes to this market sell freely at good Summer prices. In other varieties there is a good supply, mostly of short stock, which is sold cheaply. Dealers have some trouble in getting remunerative prices for good stock the buyer wanting good stock at short stock prices. The supply of Carnations is greatly improved; they are coming in of better quality. The stock so far consists of the cutting from field-grown plants as well as some stock from early planting in the greenhouses.

The supply of Gladioli is large and only the fancy is bringing anything like satisfactory prices. Some of the poorer grades are difficult to move at any price. Fancy stock like Mrs. Pendleton is selling at from $5 to $6 per 100, the lower grades sell at from $1 to $3.

Good Asters are scarce; at least more could be sold than are coming in, but poor stock is in oversupply and is hard to move, even at low prices. They are to be had in all colors. Fancy stock brings as high as $4 per 100. Valley is scarce, at from $5 to $6 per 100. Orchids are also on the short side, but there is no strong demand for either. Easter Lilies are in good demand, with a liberal supply and their presence in all funeral work is noticeable. In auratum and rubrum Lilies there is also a good supply.

'Mums are fast assuming a prominent place on the market and the variety is increasing; besides Golden Glow there are good whites, chiefly October Frost and Smith's Advance.

There is a rapid falling off in the supply of outdoor stock; Tuberoses, Cosmos, and Gypsophila, are the principal offerings in miscellaneous stock. There is plenty of everything in greens; the new crop of fancy ferns are selling at from $2 to $2.50 per 1000.

All the wholesale houses closed on Labor Day, a few keeping open a short time in the morning to accommodate customers. The express company did not pick up or deliver any stock that day. The Victory Parade of 250,000 city workers started promptly at 9 a.m. and took nearly four hours to pass a given point, which blocked all the traffic in the loop district for the time being. It was estimated that there were a million spectators along the line of march.

Chicago observed its first gasless Sunday yesterday. It is estimated that 350,000 gallons of gasoline were saved for war use. No one was killed in an auto accident, an unusual condition for a Sunday. The stopping of auto traffic made but little difference to the trade, as Sunday funerals have been abolished. Such deliveries as had to be made were taken care of by messenger boys on the street cars. The absence of all automobiles from the boulevards, parks and streets of the city was a marvelous demonstration of Chicago's patriotism.

Flowers were freely used in the Labor Day parade on Monday. Many of the members of labor organizations wore Roses in connection with their badges while on parade. One float scattered flowers to the spectators along the line of march.

With the Soldiers

Jack Jacobs and Art McGruge of the E. C. Amling store force left last week for Camp Wadsworth, S. C., having joined the Colors.

Albert LeRock of the flower seed department of Vaughan's Seed Store left Saturday for one of the training camps.

The greenhouses at National Grove near Harlem ave. were closed a month ago. For the past three years they were operated by Martin Radtke, who, with the termination of his lease, abandoned them, owing to coal and labor troubles.

Meyers & Wagner, who have been operating a modern range of about 20,000ft. of glass at Lyons, are putting in a partition in their greenhouse, preparatory to the closing of half their glass area. Valves are also being put in the steam pipes. Mr. Wagner states that it is impossible to get help and Mr. Meyers and himself could not take care of the entire range for the Winter.

The Chicago Florists' Club will meet at the Hotel Randolph on Thursday evening, Sept. 5. This is to be retailers' night and a number of prominent retailers have promised to read papers giving their views of trade conditions from a retailer's standpoint.

Allie Zech of Zech & Mann has not yet returned from the convention at St. Louis. He is calling on his customers in various cities in Western Missouri, and reports an enjoyable time.

'Mums Under Canvas

H. C. Rojahn, head gardener at Forest Home Cemetery, has made a noteworthy success this season in raising a large crop of early-flowering 'Mums outdoors under a canvas shading. The varieties are Golden Glow and October Frost.

At a meeting of the Illinois State Florists' Ass'n, held in St. Louis during convention week, it was considered best not to hold the customary trade exhibit and display in connection with the meeting to be held this year in Springfield.

The J. D. Thompson Carnation Co. of Joliet, Ill., recently filed a petition in bankruptcy in the District Court of the United States. A special meeting of creditors was held on Saturday, Aug. 31, at 10:30 a.m., at the office of the referee, Oscar R. Laraway, Room 203 Clement Building, Joliet. An offer of $8000 which has been bid for all the greenhouses and their equipment and the leasehold interest in and to the real estate was considered.

Personal

Edwin Matthews, who has of late written many articles of value for the nursery columns of THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE, advises us that he has become a member of the Outdoor Arts Co., Inc., with offices at 8438 Germantown ave., Chestnut Hill, Pa., also at 547 Drexel bldg., Philadelphia. This new enterprise will undertake a regular line of landscape gardening, town planning and all work along that line. Mr. Matthews has associated himself with Louis U. Strassburger, C. E., architectural engineer, and Ernest Hemming, a widely known horticulturist. The company reports quite a line of business on hand, although it is not yet a month old.

Mr. Matthews writes: "It takes considerable courage to start such a project in these precarious days when rapid changes occur which upset the best laid plans. However, we are taking these chances, for along with courage we must also have a vision, and I have a 'hunch' that with the end of the war will come a time of planting and beautifying as has never before been experienced."

We believe you do possess a clear vision, Mr. Matthews.

Plumbago capensis

If the man who wants Plumbago capensis and whose inquiry appeared in THE EXCHANGE of Aug. 3, p. 170, will get in touch with nurserymen in this neighborhood (Sawtelle, Cal.) he will have his wants supplied, and, I suspect, at low cost. It is easily rooted, and wood for cuttings may be had in any quantity. It luxuriates in our dry climate, but it must have water applied to the roots during the dry season. P. D. B.

The Market Improves

Sept. 3—Business for the past week shows improvement, with the market at its best on Friday and Saturday. There is a liberal supply of all flowers now in season, with Asters and Gladioli much to the fore. Dahlias are now coming in with an increasing supply, but are not meeting with much success. Ruling prices are $1. to $2. per 100.

There is a fine supply of Asters, some of the late varieties coming in in superb form. They are taking well. Gladioli is moving nicely, with a free supply. There is a fair supply of Roses, with short grade stock too much in evidence. Long grades are taking freely. New crop Carnations are to be had but are vey short stemmed. Orchids are few and far between. Lillies are in full supply and meet with an excellent demand. The 'Mum season has started with Golden Glow and Smiths Advance.

Notes

Russell Kober of the Chalfonte Cut Flower Co. has joined Uncle Sam's great army.

Most of the stores and wholesalers observed Labor Day and there was little business to speak of.

Recent visitors include Will Rehder, Wilmington, N. C., Robert Pyle, West Grove, Pa., Mr. Johnson of Sawyer & Johnson, Bethlehem, Pa., John R. Andre, Doylestown, Pa., M. W. Rosen and W. H. Fox of Parker Ford, Pa.

Pennock Bros. have had an exceptionally busy week with an extensive line of funeral work.

Leo Niessen comments on the excellent Asters his house is receiving in indoor and outdoor stock, stating that they were the finest he has ever seen.

Dennis Conner is installing a new heating apparatus for John Wescott; several of the houses will be discontinued.

Alvah R. Jones of the S. S. Pennock Co. states that business was better with them this July and August than for the same period last year.

Samuel F. Lilley has been sending in good new crop Carnations to Chas E. Meehan.

Club Meeting

The September meeting of the Florists' Club was principally confined to the nominations of officers to serve for the ensuing year. The nominees are as follows: President, Mark P. Mills and Chas H. Grakelow; vice-pres., Edmund A. Harvey; sec'y, Robt. Kift; treas., George Craig. Refreshments followed a brief business session.

Not Afraid to Raise Prices

The Autumn, 1918, list of trees, evergreens, shrubs, Roses and other stock of the Elm City Nursery Co., New Haven, Conn., a copy of which has just come to hand, shows an increase in prices on many items. The firm writes as follows concerning this catalog "Many say 'raise prices.' We believe in doing it as well as saying it. It is our opinion that these new prices are none too high if we are to stay in business. It is better to sell less if necessary, and what we do, do at a living margin."

Fargo, N. D.

The Shotwell Floral Co. and the Smedley Floral Co. were kept very busy recently with orders for the funeral of Miss Leimbacher, a young woman who was a leader in all the war activities of Fargo and who met death by drowning while trying to save the life of another. Miss Leimbach, at the time of her death, was engaged in war camp community service at West Point. The Shotwell Floral Co., among other designs, made a service flag and a 36in. American flag. Red Geranium blossoms and white Asters formed the stripes and the ground for the stars was composed of blue Immortelles. For the service flag the same flowers were used except that Sunburst Rose buds were used for the gold star.

The Middle West

Cleveland, O.

The month of September has opened with favorable temperature, improved stock and the market in a healthy condition. Late Asters are of much better quality than the midseason stock, and Roses are showing superior substance and color. Trade is brisk, buying being well sustained both by local and out-of-town purchasers. As usual at this time of the year the demand for accessories and supplies is noticeably augmented. Liberal advance orders are being booked for green materials for September store openings, the volume indicating that merchants are anticipating an increased Autumn business. Vacations are over, and although many familiar faces are missing in the line-up of the various establishments, a spirit of optimism is everywhere in evidence throughout the local trade.

August Business

The volume of business transacted in August equals the records of last year, and from some sources gains are reported. Early in the month the unprecedented hot weather operated as a detriment to business; this, however, was offset by the more favorable conditions of the latter part of the month. Much more business is being done on a cash basis than formerly. The new amplified draft measure is causing considerable uncertainty, as it is expected to remove many trained men from trade forces. Collections are normal, in but few instances pressure being found necessary.

J. McL.

The Kraft Paper Situation

According to local jobbers the supply of Kraft paper—so popular with florists for wrapping purposes—has never been so short, due to the tremendous demands made for Government uses. No. 1 Kraft is now selling at 12c. and No. 2 at 11¾c., with reported probabilities of an early advance. Being extremely tough and moisture resisting it is the ideal paper for enclosing bundles and boxes of flowers, and unfortunately there are few, if any substitutes. Manufacture is far below normal at present, on account of the acute scarcity of labor, which makes it difficult to secure the fiber pulp required in its composition.

Notes

Chas. H. Totty, wife and daughter, stopped to call upon Cleveland florists, on Aug. 28, en route home from St. Louis. The party went to Buffalo by night boat, whence the motor trip East was to be resumed.

The Elyria Flower Store executed a mammoth liberty bell design which was borne upon a float in the Labor Day parade in that city. The huge bell was 6ft. high and was made of Asters and Gladioli.

Henry Eichoff, the Woodlnd ave. florist, has added another Ford truck to his equipment.

Cleveland florists again displayed their patriotism by refraining from using their autos on "autoless Sunday," Sept. 1.

Mr. and Mrs. James Salmon, of Akron, Ohio, spent Aug. 30 and 31 visiting Cleveland friends in the trade. Other recent visitors were E. F. Fetters, Detroit, Mich.; C. C. Beingesser, Lorain, Ohio; Mrs. Nellie Ziegler, Bellevue, Ohio, and Mrs. H. B. Fearn, Elyria, Ohio.

J. McL.

Indianapolis, Ind.

General flower conditions have been quiet, there being little business aside from funeral orders. Heavy rains in this section of the country have caused all kinds of garden flowers to be much more plentiful. This is particularly true of Gladioli at $2 to $3 per 100; Tritomas at $3 to $4; Larkspur at $5 to $6, and Physostegia at $3 to $4.

New crop Carnations are coming in in small quantities, at $2 to $3 per 100. Small, short Gladioli bring $1 to $1.50 per 100. Giganteum Lilies at $12.50 to $15 per 100, and rubrums at $5 to $6 are very plentiful. Good Roses are being shipped in from the Lake regions at $8 to $15 per 100. Home grown stock is also improving with colder weather at $3 to $6. A fine Dahlia season is close at hand and the few now received bring $1 to $2 per 100.

Arrangements are being made for an extensive flower show at the State Fair this year, and if stock is fairly plentiful there should be a really good exhibit.

The New Draft

The new draft will undoubtedly affect the flower shops and greenhouses very decidedly. Probably a large number of those included in the draft ages will be in service within the next two month and unless flower business is commensurate with the general order of thing there will be a decided shortage in thi line.

F. H. Hustedt, florist and proprietor c the Midway Greenhouses, Midway, Ind is visiting the growers in this section.

An auto party, consisting of John Ri man, Oliver Steinkamp and Smith Young, visited the Northern Ohio grow ers this week. They especially went t see the establishment of Rolf Zetlitz, a Lima, Ohio.

Harry Klusmeier, formerly with th Circle Flower Store, is leaving to take similar position with the Fred Lemon Co at Richmond, Ind.

The death of Mr. Hurley, the well known Tomlinson Hall florist, has bee reported. Mr. and Mrs. Hurley had man friends among the trade and his loss wil be deeply regretted.

Elwood H. Kline, with W. H. Culp Co. Wichita, Kan., and J. J. Karins representing Henry A. Dreer, Inc., Phila delphia, were recent visitors.

Some attractive yellow 'Mums from th J. H. Budlong Co. of Chicago are bein received in this section.

The visit of Secretary of the Navy Daniels at Indianapolis on Labor Da called for extensive decorations at Tom linson Hall.

The question of what to do with th many officers' accounts held by the flowe shops and also of those who came withi the draft limits is getting to be a bi question with some of the florists. It i difficult to deny an old reliable patron credit, but seemingly many of these when taken into the Army forget all about thei business responsibilities. It is a questio whether it is wisdom to extend any credi to those eligible for the next draft in view of the past.

The lightless night order strikes some of the Illinois st. florists strongly, as they have show case stores and are unable to operate as usual.

I. B.

Fort Wayne, Ind.

There was a decided improvement in weather conditions during the last week in August, and business was brisk, including funeral work, and a few good sized weddings. Counter trade was also lively. Taking August as a whole, it compared very favorably with August of previous years, and actual receipts were larger than in August of last year.

The scarcity of flowers has been relieved and the quality is vastly better, due to cooler weather. A heavy rain recently broke the prolonged drought of a month and a half. There is a slight improvement in the quality of Roses, and young stock Carnations are arriving in all colors, and are larger. These bring 60c. per doz. retail. Easter Lilies and rubrums are plentiful, and auratums continue to sell well. Dahlias are becoming prominent and Zinnias are making a good showing.

Early 'Mums do not sell especially well, but are used for window decorations. Prices are high on these.

Plants for Summer

Well-flowered Aster plants bring good returns; these and a few Celosias and Begonias are all there are offered in plants. With the excellent demand for flowering plants at this time of the year, it would seem to the writer that some enterprising grower would produce seasonable plants for Summer sale. There certainly is a rich field in this line, and as far as the writer can see, no competition. Boston ferns and other fancy varieties have sold exceptionally well this Summer.

Jottings

The A. J. Lanternier Co. has purchased another large Overland truck. This firm is rebuilding two of its greenhouses completely and will plant them with Winter stock when they are rebuilt.

The Flick Floral Co. is installing a new steam circulating system at its greenhouses, which is operated by an electric vacuum pump, in connection with the boilers, to help reduce the consumption of coal this Winter, by keeping the steam in constant circulation. The expense it is believed will be more than offset by the saving of coal and the reduced cost of running the heating plant. The greenhouses are being renovated.

Robert Greenlaw, representing the S. S. Pennock Co., of New York City, was a trade visitor.

A large number of the growers are planning to raise vegetables and vegetable plants this Winter in their greenhouses.

The cut flower market remains in good shape, there being no large oversupply on hand at any time, and as business continues good for this season, prices remain firm. Good Roses, including Killarney, Russell, Ophelia, Columbia, Shawyer and Richmond bring from 4c. to 15c. Asters of good quality range from 2c. to 5c., Gladioli from 2c. to 6c. Lilies are in fair demand and supply and find ready sale at 12½c. to 15c. Smilax, Asparagus, ferns and Galax are in good demand, as funeral work has been rather heavy.

Fine weather and the long looked-for rains have arrived at last, filling ponds, cisterns and wells to overflowing, and giving the growers confidence in their Fall crops. Carnations in the fields suffered considerably from the drought and if the rains had not arrived much stock would not have been worth planting. The growers are now getting busy, in view of the change on coal conditions, as screenings are plentiful in this district. No doubt the next bond issue will go over the top again in Missouri, as the coal men and growers will have a few extra dollars to invest.

Our convention guests, who came by automobile, were detained on Saturday, Aug. 24, on account of the heavy rains. President Totty left about an hour before the heaviest rain that has fallen in St. Louis for years. J. A. Peterson and C. E. Critchell were ready to start in their machines but changed their minds. Mr. Peterson and his wife left on Monday, but had got only a short distance when he wired C. E. Critchell: "Roads in bad condition," and Mr. Critchell waited until Tuesday, leaving with J. A. Caomes for Indianapolis.

Labor Day Celebration

Labor Day was celebrated here as never before. A heavy rain started about 6 a.m. and continued all day, but the marchers with their white umbrellas and gaily decorated floats of flowers and bunting paraded as if the sun had been shining.

Joseph Frank, formerly of New York, has been appointed buyer and manager of the floral department of the Stix-Baer & Fuller Dry Goods Co.

The Scruggs-Vandervoort-Barney Dry Goods Co., which has operated a floral department very successfully for the past five years has leased same to Messrs. Schaeffer and Steitz of St. Louis, and it is to be operated on a percentage basis.

George Schriefer, who has been with C. A. Kuehn for the past 18 years, has been appointed manager of the cut flower end of the St. Louis Wholesale Cut Flower Co. He will prove a valuable assistant to the company's president, D. S. Geddis. G.

Cincinnati, O.

Roses are in fair, and Asters in good supply. Excellent blooms are coming into the market from the North and in quantities large enough to satisfy all present demands. Gladioli are still fairly plentiful, but the average quality is hardly as high as it was a fortnight or more ago. Easter Lilies and a few auratum Lilies may be had. Other offerings include Carnations and Dahlias.

Club Meeting

The September meeting of the Cincinnati Florists' Society will be held on Monday evening, Sept. 9.

Chas. Windram who has been overseas with the Aviation Section of the Marine Corps has returned for some special technical training.

Raymond Kischner, a former street flower seller of this city, is at Camp Jackson, S. C., and writes that he expects to go overseas shortly.

Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Ohmer and their son, James Ohmer, of West Palm Beach, Fla., are visiting Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Gillett. TEDDY.

What Combusto Draft System is:

COMBUSTO DRAFT SYSTEM is the result of months of technical research and exhaustive engineering tests in application and utilization of well-known laws in the field of combustion, and as applied to boilers and furnaces used for heating purposes, consists of Devices (supplementary air channels) made of cast iron, attached to the inside of the feed doors in such manner that they cover the slides or air vents in the doors. The System is indestructible under proper usage—has no mechanism —requires absolutely no attention—adapts itself to all draft conditions that may be necessary to meet load changes, and is as constant as the sun in performing the function for which it is designed and intended.

Economical combustion of coal is dependent primarily upon the maintenance of a fuel bed of standard thickness for the kind of coal used, and upon proper air supply—both through the fuel bed and OVER THE FIRE. Under such standard conditions (and coal cannot be burned economically otherwise) the air introduced over the fuel bed must suit the requirements of the furnace. In COMBUSTO DRAFT SYSTEM the supplementary air channels vary in size and combined length according to size and air requirements of furnace, thereby introducing, under control, the proper volume of air to meet the requirements of combustion under varying draft conditions.

New York Florists' Club

Over one hundred members were present at the meeting of the New York Florists' Club, held Monday evening, Sept. 9. This was its first meeting since its adjournment, last June over the Summer season.

President Chas. Schenck in a short address greeted all present and expressed the hope that the attendance at all future meetings would be fully representative of the club's large membership, especially in view of the fact that many questions of vital interest to the trade were likely to arise out of conditions which were now confronting all engaged in the production and sale of flowers and plants.

Protest Against Proposed Restriction Plants

After the minutes of the last meeting had been approved, the secretary read a letter which the club's committee appointed to protest to the Federal Floricultural Board against the proposed restriction of importations of plants had sent to that Board. Copies of this letter had been sent to the various florists' clubs and horticultural bodies, with the request that they take similar action; the many replies received showed that action had been taken as suggested. No report from the committee itself was forthcoming.

The committee on the memorial to the late Mrs. H. D. Darlington, Mamaroneck, N. Y., presented a memorial resolution, a copy of which had been duly forwarded to the family of the deceased.

The Flower Service to Base Hospitals

Mrs. J. C. Clark Curtin, chairman of the Committee on Home and Overseas Relief of the National League for Woman's Service was present by invitation and addressed the Club, describing the work of the distribution of flowers to sick and wounded soldiers and sailors at the different base hospitals in and around New York. She expressed the thanks of her organization for the regular and liberal supply of flowers which the club, through its efficient committee having in charge the collection of the flowers donated, was supplying for this work, and to show that they were appreciated, she read several letters from boys whose, at that time, dreary existence had been cheered by the flowers. It was hard to realize, she said, how much pleasure these little gifts excited. She gave several instances where flowers had been preferred to other things calculated to be more to mens' taste, the patients really seeming to crave the flowers. When she, in company with her lady assistants, visited the hospitals on their regular days she found their coming looked for; indeed, on one occasion, she laughingly said, she was greeted with the welcome "Here comes the Society of American Florists." This was due to the slogan signs "Say it with Flowers" which was always carried on their motors, and which also carried the names of the Society and the League. Many thousands of these signs had been supplied by the Promotion Bureau of the S. A. F. Publicity Campaign. It could thus be seen, Mrs. Curtin said, that the generosity of the florists was known and recognized in the League's work, and would undoubtedly at some time be reciprocated.

Unfurling the Club's Service Flag

Mrs. Edward McVickar, New York City chairman of the League, also present by invitation, spoke briefly. She said that the League membership comprised 300,000 women, throughout 40 States, and it was increasing so that it would shortly be active in the entire 48 States. The slogan "Say it with Flowers," she said, had been adopted as the slogan of the League in its hospital work, and the legend was displayed in every possible way. She, too, thanked the Club for the aid given the League in its work. Mrs. McVickar then unfurled the Club's new Service Flag, carrying 15 stars, amid great applause.

The ladies were then presented with handsome bunches of the new Rose Premier for their personal use, and with all the flowers staged on the exhibition tables that evening for their hospital work.

Hun Destruction of Fruit Trees Shown by Lantern Slide

F. R. Newbold, treasurer of the New York Horticultural Society, showed a series of about 50 lantern slides made from photographs he had recently received from the French Government. Many of the slides were particularly interesting as depicting territory where the battles of the last weeks have raged, as Chateau Thierry, Douai, Peronne, Noyon and other localities. The wanton destruction by the Hun of orchards, gardens, trees and ornamental plantings in this territory was clearly shown and described. Orchards were completely destroyed, the trees being sawn, not chopped, with no other purpose, it was quite evident, than their complete destruction. Fine old trees were seen with deep axe cuts girdling them so that recovery was impossible. To people such as the florists who were privileged to see photographic evidence of this ruthless work on the part of the enemy, the killing of these grand trees and destruction of the horticultural work of years, for no military purpose, seemed unpardonable and, without the evidence, was not to be imagined. Mr. Newbold received a hearty vote of thanks for his lecture.

Miscellaneous Business

The matter of appointing delegates to the forthcoming meeting of the New York Federation of Horticultural Clubs and Societies at Syracuse was discussed, and in view of the fact that two of the officers of that organization were members of the club it was not thought that further representation was necessary.

A request that the club again take active steps to promote the sale of bonds among the New York Florists' trade, during the drive in connection with the Fourth Liberty Loan shortly to be instituted, was fully discussed but no action was taken officially.

The Secretary reported that the club had recently lost through death one of its ex-presidents in the person of James Dean, of Freeport, L. I., who presided in 1892, and was a charter member, and A. V. D. Snyder, of Ridgewood, N. J., who became a member in 1918. On motion, committees were directed to be appointed to prepare resolutions of sympathy with the families of the deceased.

A resolution of sympathy with President Schenck and family in the death of a close relative was read by J. Austin Shaw, and adopted by the club, and a copy was ordered to be sent officially to Mr. Schenck.

C. H. Totty, president of the S. A. F. and O. H., Richard Vincent, Jr., and J. A. Manda, who formed part of the club's delegation to the St. Louis convention, spoke of the work accomplished there in the interests of the trade, and of the great success of the convention. All agreed that it was in every sense a strictly business meeting, and should go upon record as one of the best ever held by the S. A. F. and O. H. They spoke in high terms of the courtesies and entertainment received at the hands of the St. Louis florists, and a motion was made and carried that the club, through the secretary send a letter of thanks to the St. Louis Florists' Club for the hospitality extended.

Chairman Jos. S. Fenrich of the Flower Collection Committee reported that there was a fair supply of flowers for the sick soldiers and sailors everyday, but the demand was increasing owing to the heavy arrivals at the base hospitals, consequently the committee hoped that there would be a better response to the appeal for flowers. Florists outside of New York were doing very little in the way of contributions, as was noticed when Mr. Fenrich read his list of contributors.

The Monthly Exhibition

There was a very creditable exhibition of cut flowers and plants, the following being exhibitors: John Lewis Childs, Flowerfield, L. I., N. Y.—21 vases of Gladioli, awarded a silver medal. The varieties shown were: America, Lustrous, Gorgeous, Irene, Baron Hulot, Mrs. F. King, Primulinus hybrids, Snow King, Viola, Europa, Scribe, Princeps, Rareroy, Rosy Spray, Enchantress, Primulinus species, Ruby King, Fascinator and Pink Perfection. Some claim that America is a back number but as shown there was nothing to beat it in its color.

John Scheepers & Co., Inc., New York.—Vase of Gladioli acedanthera, awarded vote of thanks; 2 vases of Giant Ever-bearing Raspberry La France, awarded preliminary certificate. Richard Vincent, Jr. & Sons Co., White Marsh, Md.—Vase of Dahlia King of the Autumn (Dec., deep pink shaded apricot), highly commended; vase of Dahlia Futurity, (Dec., a very deep pink), thanks of the Club. George Schlegel, Brooklyn, N. Y., S. G. Milosy, gdr., plant of Cattleya Moira "The Bride," awarded silver medal. C. H. Totty Co., Madison, N. J.—Vase of new Rose Premier; the awards committee thought this variety very promising and the exhibitor arranged to show it again later.

Chicago Florists' Club

The third and last of the series of "get together meetings" of the Chicago Florists' Club was held in the club rooms at the Hotel Randolph at Wells and Randolph sts., on Thursday evening, Sept. 5. This series of meetings started with the July meeting, which was growers' night, when many of the prominent growers gave their views on the present situation. This was followed by the wholesale commission men at the August meeting, when many excellent papers were read. The meeting on Sept. 5 was designated as retailers' night several of the prominent retailers being invited to read papers giving their viewpoints, on the florist's industry. The response of the retailers was not as ready as that of other branches of the trade at former meetings, as only two papers were read. A few retailers made timely remarks on the situation, especially those of Geo. Asmus, so that the meeting on the whole was much better than was anticipated.

President Lautenschlager presided, and as Secretary Zech was absent the president appointed E. A. Ollinger as secretary for the evening. The reading of the minutes of the last meeting was also postponed. President Lautenschlager called attention to the next meeting of the F. T. D. to be held at Cleveland next month, and announced that he would appoint a "booster committee" to see that Chicago was well represented at that meeting. This committee will be announced at the next regular meeting of the club.

Fourth Liberty Loan

The matter of the Fourth Liberty Loan was next taken up when President Lautenschlager invited E. G. Hill to take the chair while Mr. Lautenschlager took the floor to speak for the forthcoming loan. As president of the club he has been appointed chairman for the florists' and allied industries of Chicago and Cook County to arrange all the details for the loan. It was thought best to establish temporary headquarters downtown during the period of the loan, and he announced that the E. C. Amling Co. had offered to the loan committee, free of charge, the use of office space in its store for this purpose, as well as the service of one of the firm's stenographers in assisting in all clerical work. On motion of Mr. Lautenschlager the offer was accepted, and the E. C. Amling wholesale house will therefore be headquarters for the next campaign for the Liberty Loan for the trade. Committees will be appointed to work among the various allied trades, all of which will be announced in due time. A motion was also carried that the club contribute $50 for such expense for this campaign as might be incurred for clerical work or other charges or otherwise.

The Retailer's Problems

For the "good of the club" portion of the meeting Geo. Weiland read a paper from A. Lange, 25 E. Madison st., treating the florist's situation in Chicago from a retailer's point of view.* Another interesting paper, signed "Chicago Florists," was read. Geo. Asmus also spoke from a retailer's point of view and made some timely remarks. His plea was for better cooperation among members of the trade. Geo. Weiland, Evanston, who is both a grower and retailer, said that retailers who were growers always sold stock cheaper than retailers who had to buy their own stock. This was a case of unfair competition but he was of the opinion that retailers who grew their own stock were beginning to wake up to the fact that they have been selling their stock for less than the cost of production. A. C. Craig and D. R. Robertson spoke also from the retailer's viewpoint.

E. G. Hill, Richmond, Ind., gave a good talk, speaking from every angle of the business. He said it took good business methods for florists to succeed, as the profits were not in proportion to the time and care it took to carry on a successful business. There are very few rich florists in the country he pointed out and those of the craft who have made money have done so through the increased valuation of their property rather than because of the actual profits of their business. Florists in many cities who built houses some years ago have found that their property became too valuable for greenhouse use and moved farther out, realizing enough on their old property to build again and have something left over for the future. A rising vote of thanks was given the speaker for his excellent talk.

C. W. Johnson, of the Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Ass'n stated that florists should get better prices for their stock than they are receiving. At Mt. Greenwood Cemetery, when prices on all material had advanced, the price of all stock from the greenhouses had also been advanced, including both plants and cut flowers. Mr. Johnson said that the association had had no difficulty in getting the advanced prices from customers, since people realize that prices have gone up in all lines.

Grading, Prices and Credits

W. J. Keimel stated that the grading of flowers by the grower before sending them to the wholesaler helped matters considerably. Poor stock should not be sent to the market. Otto Amling spoke for better prices. He had said at former meetings that Roses should never be sold at wholesale for less than $4 per 100. This he repeated, and added that under existing conditions growers could not make any money at a lower price and that the retailers should get together and hold out for better prices than they are now getting. J. E. Pollworth of Kennicott Bros. Co. gave a talk brimful of common sense and good business suggestions. He said the retailers must become a unit, for as individuals they never can accomplish anything.

In order that the results of the good work done at former meetings might not be lost the chair appointed a committee, composed of Geo. Asmus, chairman, Otto Amling, J. E. Pollworth, W. J. Keimel and T. E. Waters, to see that the interest was kept up.

F. S. Webb, credit manager of the Wholesale Florists' Association, was present and talked interestingly on credits. He condemned the practice of wholesale houses giving long credits to some retailers in good circumstances while to others less fortunately situated the rule requiring all bills contracted in one month to be paid by a given date the month following, on penalty of having credit cut off entirely was strictly enforced. This, he said, was discriminating against the struggling retailer, who needed help the most. He made a strong plea for the wholesalers to help the retailers who needed financial aid. It is the retailers after all who market the products of the growers and wholesalers. He likened the retailers to the waterspouts on a house which carry the water off the roof. Without the spouts there would be no outlet for the water and without the retailers there would be no way of disposing of the products in question. The more the retailers were helped the better it would be for the trade.

*This paper will be found on another page, this issue.

E. A. Ollinger read a clipping from a Morgan Park newspaper telling how Chas. Thomas Johnson, son of C. W. Johnson, of the Mt. Greenwood Cemetery Ass'n, and among the first to leave in the selective draft to join the Army had quickly risen from private to sergeant and had recently been promoted to second lieutenant. He is at present at Camp Taylor near Louisville, Ky.

T. E. Waters read a letter from Sergeant Wm. E. Colligan, a former employee of the Poehlmann Bros. Co., who is now with the army in France, in which he related many interesting facts regarding military duty there. He wished to be remembered to all his friends and asked that someone write him and tell him all the news in florist's circles in Chicago. The chair appointed a committee consisting of Jas. Morton, E. A. Ollinger and Harold Wolfe to write Sergt. Colligan.

Geo. Ball of Glen Ellyn exhibited a handsome vase of white Asters of his own raising that he calls America. These were highly admired. E. G. Hill and C. W. Johnson as a committee on exhibits awarded the exhibit the club's certificate of merit. Mr. Ball expects to disseminate the seed of this variety next season.

New Contact Insecticide

Nicotine oleate effective in laboratory experiments—Kills high per cent. of aphis, mealy bugs, soft scale and white fly—Not harmful to foliage—Not being volatile, cannot be used on plants to be eaten—Easy to make—Patent applied for will be donated to the public.

From the results of a series of experiments, it has been determined that the most efficient contact insecticides must be of an oily or soapy nature. Based upon these observations, a new contact insecticide, nicotine oleate, has been made by the formation of a soap through the union of nicotine and oleic acid. When dissolved in soft water it forms a soapy solution which may be used to emulsify an animal, vegetable or mineral oil.

Experiments reported in The Journal of Economic Entomology give an idea of its value. Diluted to give one part of nicotine in 1500 parts of water, it killed 96 per cent. of Chrysanthemum aphis. In another case when diluted to one part of nicotine in 2250 of water with two parts of laundry soap it killed 97 per cent. Used at the rate of one to 500 it killed a few mealy bugs and a few egg clusters. A mixture of two per cent. of a vegetable, animal or mineral oil emulsified in the nicotine oleate solution killed mealybugs and their eggs. An emulsion containing one part of nicotine in 500 parts of water with two per cent. kerosene killed 79 per cent. of the adult mealy bugs and their older larvæ, 98 per cent. of the eggs, and 98 per cent. of the young larvæ.

Preliminary experiments have shown that 85 to 90 per cent. of the soft scale on greehouse plants may be killed using nicotine oleate at a dilution of one part of nicotine to 500 parts of water. Similar experiments have shown that adults and larvæ of white fly may be killed at the same dilution as used for the soft scale.

All experiments mentioned were conducted under laboratory conditions, care being taken to hit all the insects used in the experiments. Under field conditions it may be necessary to use a higher percentage. Nicotine oleate being nonvolatile it is more necessary to insure striking all insects than in the use of a volatile compound like Nicofume.

Nicotine oleate may be made directly from any nicotine preparation containing free nicotine. Two and one-half parts of a 40 per cent. nicotine solution unites with 1¾ parts of commercial oleic acid or red oil. Four and one-fourth parts of this soap will then contain one part of nicotine or will equal 2½ parts of the 40 per cent. nicotine solution. Two and one-half quarts of 40 per cent. nicotine solution costing about $7 can be mixed with 1¾ quarts of commercial oleic acid costing about 90c. making 1¼ gallons of nicotine oleate. For spraying to control plant lice, where a gallon of a 40 per cent. nicotine solution costing about $11 would be used to make 500 gallons of spray, one gallon of nicotine oleate costing about $6.50 would make 650 gallons of a spray solution as effective if not more effective than the spray containing free nicotine. Nicotine oleate will cost about $1 a hundred gallons where the free nicotine spray will cost $2.20.

To make the oil emulsion spray with nicotine oleate 10 parts of kerosene is mixed with 1¼ parts of commercial oleic acid and then 2½ parts of 40 per cent. nicotine solution is added and thoroughly shaken. Ten parts of water is then added and again thoroughly shaken. For use against mealy bugs, white fly and soft scale this quantity is then mixed with 480 parts of soft water.

In sprays where nicotine oleate is used the spray water must be soft (rain or distilled water). To make nicotine oleate only those tobacco extracts containing free nicotine can be used. The stearate or palmitate of nicotine may be made in the same way, but it is not as effective a spray as the oleate. Nicotine oleate is not volatile, hence should not be used on plants to be eaten, such as Lettuce. The effect on plants has not been completely studied although sprays containing nicotine oleate equal to one part of nicotine in 100 of water did not injure Tomatoes or Coleus. Slight injury was noted on tender leaves of greenhouse Roses when sprayed at the above strength.

On dormant trees the use of a rather nonvolatile oil such as linseed, cottonseed or fish oil emulsified with nicotine oleate should be valuable for the destruction of insect eggs or scale insects.

A patent has been applied for this compound and when obtained will be given to the public so that anyone will be able to manufacture it.

Cost Production—A Call for Volunteers

To the members of the S. A. F. and O. H.

Fellow Members:—Following a discussion on present day cost production, the president was empowered to appoint a committee to collect statistics along these lines in order that a production cost basis might be worked out as a means of educating the grower to the prices he should receive for his product in order to make a living, and to put his business on a proper plane as a business enterprise. I will appoint a committee and draft them, if necessary, but first of all I am going to call for volunteers. If we can get a few active men in every state who will be willing to make a record of cost statistics in their own line, and permit these figures to be used, it will render the work much easier.

Some of our best cut flower growing establishments and many of our retail establishments at the present time are collecting or have collected such statistics. These statistics, of course, rightfully belong to the man or parties who compiled them, possibly with the expenditure of quite a little money and labor, and they may rightfully say "What we have collected is ours: let the 'other fellow' look out for himself." While this idea might prevail in normal times these days are abnormal and every man is "his brother's keeper," to the extent of helping in some way to keep the "Ship of Business" afloat, while the boys are "Over There."

It will be necessary in order to get a comprehensive idea, as I see it, to collect statistics from every state. Cost of fertilizer differs radically in different sections of the country, as does labor, coal, etc., and other items that enter into the business. This phase of knowing the cost of a crop is not a new proposition in other lines, though florists, save in rare cases, have no knowledge of what it costs to produce a crop, and this is the first element of any successful business.

How many florists in different states will agree to collect statistics along these lines and how many will agree to contribute statistics they have already collected on this most important subject?

I trust volunteers from every state will answer this and then I will appoint a central committee, who will make suggestions just how the different work can be carried out.

Brother florists, if you really want to see our business brought to its proper legitimate plane, give us your aid in this movement, which, as one florist in St. Louis remarked to me, was the most vital subject he had ever brought up at any florists' convention.

CHARLES H. TOTTY,
President S. A. F. and O. H.

National Publicity Campaign

The Fall season for the florist is now opening. What are the prospects for good business? Are flowers in the public mind? Just how these questions should be answered entails considerable thought. One question hinges upon the other—an affirmative answer to the latter would furnish the answer we all would desire for the former.

Supposing that, just now, flowers are not in the public mind—and who is optimistic enough to say they are?—it would naturally occur to anyone that the best thing to do would be to exploit them so that they might command the attention we require. Our publicity committees did this thing just prior to St. Valentine's Day this year, with the result that the public sat up and took notice—never before did the florists do so much business for this particular festival. The same course was taken in regard to Mother's Day, and the result was the same—the greatest business ever done in connection with this memorial day. And, when we come to think of it, these days are "made" days, made by publicity, made by exploiting flowers for use on these occasions, made by effort put forth mainly by florists themselves through proper organizations.

The public mind is most receptive. Any idea which is properly put forward and aggressively pushed is sure of a good reception provided it of itself is good.

The idea which we have all along entertained (that the public would accept proper suggestions tending to a wider and greater use of flowers in the home) being a good one, has been kindly received and, in consequence, we have enjoyed the benefit of a demand which has surprised many of us who have had regard to the depressing influence of these war times.

It is highly necessary that the work of our committees which has resulted in so much publicity for our products should be kept up. Their efforts should not be curtailed in the least; they should even be greater than before.

We are nearing a crisis in our national affairs which points to times of greater depression and, therefore, the need of intensive stimulation of demand for flowers and plants.

We are confronted with our annual avalanche of Chrysanthemums which, this season, is expected to be abnormally large. As we all know, this crop is an expensive one to raise, and its value in the aggregate immense. It must be moved, and moved profitably.

Our committees are called upon, through publicity channels which they have planned, to assist in the effort which all must put forth to get this crop into the homes of the public as well as to stimulate the demand for other flowers in season.

The committees can perform their part if the trade will furnish the wherewithal, the amount of money needed to complete the publicity campaign fund of $50,000 which was asked for at the outset. Only $6000 more is required to insure the completion of the committees' carefully thought out plans for 1918. Already liability is being incurred looking to the consummation of these plans, and every penny of the fund will be needed.

Surely the florists who have not already subscribed will lend their help by sending in at once what contributions they can. Many hundreds of their brethren have already contributed generously, in many cases duplicating subscriptions made earlier in the campaign. This is no class project: retailers, wholesalers, and growers are all benefited.

JOHN YOUNG, Secy.

Gardeners' Convention Postponed

Acting on the recommendation of some of its members, the executive committee of the National Ass'n of Gardeners has voted to postpone, until after the war, its annual convention, which was to be held in Cleveland, Ohio, on Sept. 24 to 26, and for which an elaborate program had been arranged, as given in THE EXCHANGE of Sept. 7. This action was taken in order that the association might comply with the recent request issued by the Director of Railroads to avoid all unnecessary traveling, and might also respond to the general appeal to invest in War Savings Stamps, as the money saved by not holding the convention would be available for that purpose. The convention will be held in Cleveland, as originally planned.

In postponing the annual national meeting for the duration of the war, the executive board urges that gardeners' local conferences be frequently held to discuss ways and means by which they can aid in speeding the war.

In announcing the convention's postponement, President Robert Weeks instructed that the secretary and treasurer publish their financial reports at the close of the fiscal year, Dec. 1, and that the secretary also publish a report of the association's activities including its service bureau and the work of the various committees during the year.

M. C. EBEL, Secretary.

Secretary Ebel advises that it has been decided to hold a gardeners' conference at the Hotel Hollenden, Cleveland, on Tuesday evening, Sept. 24, at 8 o'clock, to which all gardeners and those interested in the development of ornamental horticulture are invited. The conference will be devoted to considering war time means as to how the gardener can best serve the country's interest. Noted speakers both in and out of the profession will be heard. Mr. Ebel further states that a New England conference, under the auspices of the Boston gardeners is being planned, to be held some time during the middle of October in the city of Boston.

Gasless Sunday Satisfactory

After a meeting of oil officials in New York City it was stated that so much gasoline has been saved by the two "gasless Sundays" that probably the ban on the use of gasoline on Sunday will be lifted inside of three weeks. When figures were presented by the officials of about a score of the leading producing and refining companies to show what stocks were available it was found that the situation had improved beyond expectation. A. C. Bedford, Chairman of the Petroleum War Service Committee said:

The whole-hearted cooperation of the newspapers has made the conservation programme a success beyond expectations. The publicity given the necessity for conservation of gasoline has enabled us to accumulate stocks. Now, if pleasure car users will go a step further and cut down their rides somewhat during the week, the trouble can be ended in short order.

The committee has no power to lift the ban on gasoline use, but its suggestions have weight in the decisions of the Fuel Administration's actions.

Chatelaine Begonias

Among the inexpensive flowering plants for Winter the Chatelaine Begonias are near the top, and every retail grower should at least have a few. If you have one end of your Carnation house which is just a little warmer than it should be for the Carnations, that's the place for these Begonias. Field stock lifted now and carefully potted up will soon become reestablished and grow into fine plants. Small 2½in. stock should be shifted; maybe three plants potted up into 5in. bulb pans. With just a little care and aphis kept away nice stock in full flower can be had by Christmas—a time when a good many of these Begonias can be disposed of. Don't wait too long with bringing the plants in; the least frost will finish them outside.

Pæonias, Irises and Phlox

Time for Planting

One might easily call the Pæonia, the Iris and the Phlox the three leaders among the perennials and if you have field space, and once a stock of either one of these has been established, there is no excuse for not keeping on increasing the same and still have a good sized surplus each year to dispose of to brighten up hardy borders for your patrons. You can't grow too many of either one of these—that is of good sorts—and it is but little trouble to take care of the plants in the field. All three like a deep well cultivated soil; it doesn't need contain a lot of a particular kind of fertilizer. In fact, both the Iris and the Phlox are better off if you keep manure away from them; they will remain far healthier if you do. A good many Phlox, Delphiniums and Iris have been ruined by over-doses of stable manure. Don't delay the replanting and dividing of your stock; do it now and get it out of the way and thereby give the newly planted stock a chance to become reestablished before Winter sets in. Old clumps of Phlox cut back now and divided will be far better for next year's flowering than the old plants. If you intend propagating Phlox in large quantities you can either do that through root cutting, which is very simple, or lift a few plants and keep in a frame until February when they should be brought into a Carnation house where great quantities of cuttings can be had in a short time.

Giganteum Lilies

Starting Them for Easter

A subscriber wants to know about cold storage Giganteum Lilies for Easter flowering. Notes on that subject can be found in the Week's Work, July 27 issue of THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE, as to the time of starting the bulbs. Around Christmas or New Year will be time enough; 16 weeks usually is considered necessary for cold storage bulbs, but less will do for plants to be brought into flower for as late a date as Easter 1919. I doubt whether it will pay the smaller grower to make use of cold storage bulbs for Easter, especially if intended for pots. One or two flowers usually is about the limit from these bulbs, not enough, to my mind, to make it pay to sell them in pots. The bulbs when planted should be kept in a 55 deg. house in order to give them a slow start to become rooted. When once put bound and growth has begun get the plants into 60 deg. house and keep them there. If any holding back is necessary do this toward the end, after the plants have made their growth and the buds are well formed. Giganteum, whether fresh imported or from cold storage bulbs, never want to be checked while making growth; keep them going, otherwise you stunt them. As I stated before rather than put the eggs all in one basket, why not keep on planting cold storage bulbs right along from now until December or 1st of January and let them come along? That will pay better than staking everything on Easter week.

Propagating Soft-wooded Plants

Do It Before Frost

From now on until the war is won carpet bedding will be much in favor, especially in places where a patriotic design can be displayed to advantage. It would be well for florists to consider this now in order to prepare for next Summer. Anything you can do to help create enthusiasm and which will help win the war is in order. A neat lawn with an attractive design in flowers or foliage plants will meet with the approval of your townspeople. If there is just half a chance for you to make such a display next year by all means do so—you needn't on that account stop hoping that the war might be over. Of all the plants suitable for carpet bedding the Alternantheras are more useful than any and it is not too late for those wishing to work up a large stock to take cuttings and root them in the propagating bench. If you haven't any it is up to the neighbors or the city park to supply them. Coleus can also be taken and rooted as long as the frost hasn't touched them and so with other soft-wooded plants. With hot days and warm nights we are very apt to put things off and sometimes just one night too long. A heavy frost finishes everything and means a loss of money to us. So get busy while you can; prepare for next Spring.

The Trailer

A Most Useful Attachment

One of the most useful things for the retail grower to have is a trailer. From now until cold weather sets in for good such an outfit will come in handy. Usually the space in the ordinary automobile, whether a Ford or otherwise, is very limited and only a very small number have a specially made arrangement, or a truck. In most cases a man will have a regular sized box, which hardly ever exceeds 4ft. x 5ft. With little money a plain trailer can be purchased with almost any sized wagon box. Such an outfit is easily attached to any make auto and there is no end to the many uses a trailer can be put to. It takes the place of another machine and driver, more than double the load can be hauled in one trip and whenever there is no use for it it doesn't eat anything. Your auto is not complete without a trailer, and for the average retail grower a Ford type machine, with a neat covered top so plants and cut flowers can be delivered properly during the Winter months, will do nicely for ordinary work, and if you add to it a good sized trailer your delivery system will take care of quite a lot of business. The man who hasn't as yet a trailer can't appreciate all of the unnecessary extra trips he makes and how much more he could accomplish if he had one. The first cost is all there is to it. A closed top auto is hardly the thing to carry large palms, field grown Cannas, Hydrangeas, Vincas or some other stock in; as well try to get along with a horse and wagon. To do the most in the easiest way and the shortest time is the order of today.

Spraying Carnations

A Dangerous Practice

Avoid having damp or wet foliage overnight on the newly housed Carnations. Nothing will cause bad leaves quicker, for the moisture will settle in the center of the plants and soon will show the bad effects. If you water in the afternoon make use of only a part of the water force and avoid getting the plants wet; water between them. If on a hot, sunny day you wish to spray in the house don't wait until after lunch so as to give the plants a chance to dry off properly before evening. The heavier your soil the more particular you should be with watering or spraying.

Carnation Supports

The Sooner Given the Better

Plants which were housed from five to seven weeks ago are, by this time, in need of supports of some kind. There are a good many kinds in use and it really matters little just what kind you make use of as long as the plants get the benefit. Don't wait until the flowers are lying on the benches before giving a thought to the supports, and before you start to stretch wire or strings across the benches see to it that all of the plants are clean. It's just half the work if done before; also cultivating the soil. Maybe by this time the soil in the bench has settled down considerably and it will be well to apply a nice layer before the overhead work is started.

Mignonette

Make a Sowing Now

You may have a bench or so of Mignonette nicely under way? With cool weather coming along, growing time is at hand and the plants soon will develop into bushy specimens; but for all of that another sowing should be made now. By the time the plants are ready for benching some of the 'Mums will be out of the way and you may be looking for something with which to fill the benches. While you are at it sow out some more Sweet Peas; these also may be useful in five or six weeks from now. These as well as the Mignonette can get along with a low temperature, if necessary.

Increasing Rex Begonias

The Canadian Florist in its issue of June 14 publishes an article under this heading by T. Sheward of Vancouver, B. C., as follows:

There are several plants that are grown most readily from leaf cuttings. Among these especially is the Rex Begonia. The cuttings are made by taking a large, well-formed leaf and cutting it into sections, following the veins. Fig. 10 in the illustration shows this very well. The pieces of cut leaf are then dibbled in sand in pans or flats and placed in a propagating frame, where a temperature of from 75 to 80 degrees is maintained. See Figs. 6 and 7. The flats should be syringed two or three times daily to ensure their being kept moist. In a short time the cuttings will have rooted and small leaves have appeared at the base of each. This process is shown by Figs 1, 2 and 3.

As soon as the small leaves appear pot the cuttings into 3in. pots, and later into 4in. pots (Figs. 4 and 5). A mixed soil of peat and loam in equal quantities should be used.

Another method just as successful is illustrated in Fig. 8. The veins of a large leaf are notched as shown in Fig. 9, and the leaf spread on the sand and pegged with wire staples. The leaf may also be covered with the sand. Small plants will soon appear at each cut (Figs. 8 and 11). These can be potted up and will soon make nice plants.

The Guada Bean and Other Gourds

Two varieties of edible gourds, long known but little grown in this country, have been widely advertised recently as "Butter Beans" of rare quality and high productivity. Vague but glowing and extravagant claims are made for them which has led the U. S. Dept. of Agri. to warn farmers and gardeners to be on their guard. Their culinary value is similar to that of Summer Squash, say department officials, and they are interesting as curiosities, but have very slight practical worth. The name Gigantic New Guinea Butter Bean has been given to the common Cucutza or Sweet Gourd. It is frequently found in Italian vegetable gardens and is offered in the markets of New Orleans, but is considered of such little value that regular seedsmen rarely give it notice. It has been reported that this so-called new Bean has been offered at extravagant prices, for example, 6 of the gourd seeds for 50c., or 16 for $1. The Snake or Solomon Island Gourd also has been renamed in certain advertisements as Guada Bean. This gourd can be grown only in warm climates and is adapted to rather limited regions in the southern part of the United States.—U. S. Dept. of Agri.

Our Bank Savings Safe Unless Germany Wins

A very insidious propaganda seems to have been carried on by secret agents of Germany, to the effect that savings banks deposits are to be confiscated. It is difficult to believe that any person in America would credit such a report for an instant. Secretary McAdoo says the absurdity of these statements is manifest, but in order to allay the fears of a few who might be alarmed by such reports, he repeats officially that these rumors are wholly baseless.

Only one thing will in the least put in danger of confiscation the savings of the American people, whether deposited in savings, or other banks or invested in Liberty bonds or any other investments. That one thing is a German victory. It is not the American Government that our people should fear, but the German Government. With American soldiers fighting as they are in France and the American people supporting their Government as they are in America, the American people, their liberty, their rights, and their savings are safe.

Holland Bulbs on the Way

Advices received this week from M. Van Waveren & Son, Ltd., of the Leeuwenstein Nurseries, Hillegom, Holland, and with offices at 26 Cortlandt st., N. Y. are to the following:

It may interest your readers to learn that cable advices are to the effect that the exportation of bulbs from Holland was ended Aug. 31, 1918. Total cases exported between 15,000 and 18,000, as against 37,000 cases in 1917, all forwarded via England. Perhaps in an effort to deprive the people of the United States of the beauty and enjoyment of Dutch bulb flowers, the Germans have declared them contraband of war. Or can you find a better reason?

Cable advices also state that most of our shipments had arrived in England on or before Aug. 20. We expect goods to begin to reach this side within a week or ten days. Steamship companies and brokers in England do not seem to be permitted to cable definite movements of the shipments.

Owing to the extreme necessity of producing foodstuffs in Holland, the government had ordered that the area devoted to bulb growing must be reduced to two-thirds of the average area employed for the 1917 and 1918 crops. Many varieties of bulbs have totally disappeared in Holland during the last year or two, and a further process of elimination will be the result of the new government order.

European Notes

The whole of Western Europe is experiencing a spell of very tricky weather just now and the farmer as well as the seed grower is having a somewhat anxious time. The harvesting of our crops of Carrot and Parsnip is proceeding apace, and the veriest tyro in seed growing knows that clear, dry weather is a sine qua non at such a time, if the seed is to be secured in good condition and of a bright color. The frequent and almost sudden showers of the past ten days, while they have not at the present time done very much harm to these crops, are giving us double work at the harvesting and this we can ill afford.

While the acreage of both these crops is far below the average in pre-war days, they are on the whole very promising; [illegible] may confidently be expected, especially for Parsnip. The showers mentioned above will help the development of the Parsley crop, of which the present condition leaves much to be desired. There is also a general shortage in the acreage standing for seed, both of the curled and plain-leaved varieties. If there is the usual demand prices will most likely advance.

Spinach crops already delivered are somewhat disappointing; for this falling off the growers hold the pestiferous wireworm responsible. The demand for this seed is very brisk. European Seeds.

New York Seed Trade

The Bulb Situation

Up to Tuesday of this week there were no further arrivals of French or Dutch bulbs. There are reports from several sources that Dutch bulbs are afloat via England for American importers, and a Dutch steamer with bulbs aboard is daily expected to arrive at an Atlantic port. Not a few importers are apprehensive that both French and Dutch bulbs will arrive after the normal season for filling retail orders and for counter sales. Furthermore, most seedsmen feel that it is quite certain that there will not be this year anything like the usual counter demand for bulbs.

The arrival of a moderate sized shipment of Spinach seed from Holland via England is reported.

Burnett Bros.' New Building

Burnett Bros. are now well settled in their own building, which they purchased several months ago, at 92 Chambers st. near Broadway, and which they have put in up-to-date condition for the accommodation of their business. This building has five floors, a basement and sub-basement, a frontage of about 25ft. and a depth of over 100ft. It is equipped with an electric freight and passenger elevator and other modern conveniences. On the store front a large, vertical, electric sign extends from the first story to the roof. The salesrooms are on the main floor with offices in the rear. Two floors are devoted to vegetable and flower seeds, one to grass seeds, and one to implements. The basement and sub-basement are used for bulbs, tubers, roots, fertilizers and general storage. This firm began business 15 years ago at 101 West st., and has steadily progressed. From West st. it moved to 72 Cortlandt st., later to 98 Chambers st., and lastly to its own building at 92 Chambers st. The business was founded by George A. Burnett, and later his brother Samuel Burnett became his partner, and these two constitute the firm today, which is certainly to be congratulated on having permanent, well-located quarters.

Frank C. Woodruff, of S. D. Woodruff & Sons, 82 to 84 Dey st., has been for several weeks in California, where he is inspecting the firm's seed crops.

There was held at Vaughan's Seed Store, 41 to 43 Barclay st., this week the most comprehensive and best arranged display of French and Dutch bulbs seen in this city, and also a full line of Bermuda bulbs.

Madison Esterley, manager for J. M. Thorburn & Co., is taking his annual vacation.

Washington, D. C.

The Emergency Agricultural Bill in the Senate, Sept 4, a motion to eliminate from the bill appropriations totalling $721,000 [illegible] tion of insects and plant diseases injurious to agriculture was made by Senator King of Utah, but action on it was deferred.

Senator Walsh of Montana offered an amendment appropriating $20,000,000 to be lent to farmers in drought stricken districts [illegible] was rejected, but another by Senator Jones, authorizing the War Finance Corporation [illegible] such districts so that financial assistance could be given to farmers, was accepted.

Burpee's New Tomato Cannery

The Burpee Seed Farms have installed an [illegible] two miles west of Doylestown. The building has been altered, concrete floors and new timbers put in to accommodate the machinery. The plant has been equipped with modern machinery and will be used to can the pulp of Tomatoes gathered for seed. This pulp formerly was either thrown away or used for fertilizer. By the old system which allowed the pulp to ferment a foul odor followed the work.

The canning process is very simple. Machinery gathers up the Tomatoes, which pass through a revolving screen where they are washed. They are then sorted on a table, sent to a centrifugal pulper which separates the seeds and skins. The pulp drops into a 1000 gallon copper coiled vat where it is boiled down to about half its original bulk, and drawn out to the filling machine, fed to the capping machine where the cans are lidded and automatically sealed. A small chute carries the cans through several jets of live steam to heat them and to kill bacteria.

The cans used at present are enamel lined gallon cans. The product will be used for catsup, and high grade canned Tomatoes according to quality. On account of the different varieties grown for seed, particular care will be exercised to can each variety separately. The daily capacity of the plant is 7500 gallons. The filler can be set for 26 cans a minute.

However, there have been but a very few other vegetables or flowers ever tackled in this way. Why not? Almost every State has a State experimental station and a State agricultural college. Almost every seed firm has a trial ground. A little cooperation between the three and who can say what the value would be to the trade and the people? I am very glad to see a step being taken in this direction.

Variety Improvement

Traveling hand in hand with the problem of nomenclature is that of variety improvement by seed selection. It isn't the great number of new varieties every year that we want, but improvements on the existing and established varieties. Just because a grower finds a strain of stock differing slightly from any other he is acquainted with is no reason why it should be inflicted on us. If some concern pushes it as a novelty, we all know the result: One more name for everybody to list for the next few years. At one of the Gladiolus shows in Cleveland, Mr. Werner, as judge, was hotly censured by a few exhibitors because he refused to give credit to many "new seedlings" which were really nothing but small-flowered, vari-colored sorts that would have no place except in a cheap seedling mixture.

We can all name varieties of flowers and vegetables that, as far as character and type go, are just what is wanted. But it requires constant work to keep the stock from running down, and by proper selection it can always be improved a little. There are certain types of any plant that are most desirable for certain uses and there is some one type that is best for a certain use. The choice of type isn't merely a matter of personal opinion, but one of plant adaptation to conditions. Why should not these desirable types be systematically promoted and good stocks protected by some cooperative action?

Instead of each individual grower following his own desires and likes in his selection work, why not have some cooperation and let the work be done along some definitely laid out plan? Do not understand me as believing in cooperative growing, but simply in some form of cooperation in the learning of the most desirable types and in deciding on the producing of the best possible stocks of our standard and most important varieties. Here is where our State agricultural colleges and experimental stations can be of great assistance to both the

With an American Seedsman in France

A Highly Interesting Letter from Overseas

The June 29 issue of THE EXCHANGE has just reached me and I read, with great pleasure, the report of the 36th annual convention of the American Seed Trade Ass'n. After the "home letters" THE FLORISTS' EXCHANGE is the next thing I look for. Any news of the trade or any horticultural literature is rather scarce over here.

My especial interest as a seed grower is along the line of variety improvement by seed selection, and though I am over here in France trying to do my bit in this most terrible of wars, I have by no means lost interest in the seed trade.

On account of defective eyesight I was prevented from going into the trenches, where I enlisted to go, and was transferred to an engineer regiment operating directly behind the lines. This regiment, being a part of the French Army, we made an attempt at camp gardening and naturally that is where they put me.

The French have a wonderful system of camp gardening that means much to the soldiers. They have a garden department that is under the supervision of their Dept. of Agriculture and each and every camp has its garden. These gardens are supplied, in the way of early plants, tools, etc., from garden depots located at different points, usually at base hospitals. As a unit of soldiers moves into a camp they keep up the garden while they are there, be it only for ten days, and it makes no difference if Hun bullets drive them out occasionally. And their gardens are something they are proud of. Some of them I have seen have meant a lot of work, being on a side hill and terraced. There are not only vegetables in these gardens, but one often sees flowers planted around the garden and the barracks in such a way that the effect helps to remove some of the harshness of war. The Frenchman truly believes that "a thing of beauty is a joy forever." France figures that the value of its camp garden vegetables exceeds 2,500,000 francs a year, and the work is done mostly by hospital patients and those temporarily disabled for active service. We have undertaken to have gardens at our various camps along our railroad line, but due to certain reasons they have not been a huge success. As long as they won't let me fight, I am glad to be doing the next best thing, viz.: Gardening under shell fire.

Nomenclature and Seed Selection

For some time before enlisting and often while here I have thought about this proposition of nomenclature and seed selection. There is a great deal of work to be done in both of these directions and I think there should be much closer cooperation between the seed growers and the Government, as well as between the seed growers themselves.

As to nomenclature, everybody knows that the trade is cursed with synonymous names, similar varieties and poor varieties that are urged upon the people. Follow most any popular variety through the catalogs of the country and we find it listed under different names; we find it described as being early, late and mid-season; fair, good and excellent. For information as to type of growth, growing habits, immunity from disease, etc., very few catalog descriptions are any real guide.

It is not only in the retail catalogs that this is true, but in the wholesale catalogs as well. We are all familiar with the splendid example Dr. Tracy set for us when he classified the Beans.

trade and the people. My opinion is that most of our State agricultural institutions have been neglecting, in this, a good opportunity. Even a little cooperation and understanding between the growers would do much to eliminate some of the evils of our haphazard methods, and I am pleased to see a tendency in this direction.

Visit to a French Seedsman

Before closing I want to say a word or two about my visit to Lyon where I called on P. Leonard Lille. I called at the office of the concern and was taken to Mr. Lille's house. He is a very agreeable man and I was sorry to find that he is confined to a wheelchair. He is very pleasant and cheery, however, and in the course of my visit he mentioned many names of seedsmen in the States. He speaks only a few words of English, but he enjoys trying out what little he does know. After a short visit he turned me over to M. Jean Lille, who showed me all through the establishment and then took me home with him.

Now, I say, when French people are hospitable they are very hospitable. I stayed three days with him and I surely did enjoy it. M. and Mme. Lille were wonderfully good to me and made me feel glad to be in France. I was there at Lyon for the dedication of the new bridge, "Pont Wilson," and it was a most impressive sight. When the American boys marched out onto that bridge, led by a real American band playing the National Emblem March with real American snap, the French people went "wild." The discipline and snap showed by those boys was better than any of us, French or American, had ever seen before, and, I tell you, I was proud. The French and Americans are every day being more firmly cemented together by a bond that will never be broken. It is well, for there are qualities in each that the other needs.—PTE. SCHUYLER ARNOLD, Co. D., 13th Engrs. (Ry.), A. E. F., France.

Chicago Seed Trade

The new draft is a matter of much consideration to many in the seed trade here.

Vaughan's Seed Store has on exhibition a varied line of popular shrubs shown in vases. These are of great interest to all who want to know the names of the shrubs and plants to be seen in the parks and boulevards of the city. There are the ornamental foliage groups, and the flowering and berried sections, covering a wide range of hardy ornamental plants.

Carl Cropp returned from a trip to California on Aug. 29. Ed. Goldenstein, a former well-known employee of the store, came in for a visit the past week from Camp Grant, Rockford, Ill. Bert Chadwick is happy over the arrival of a little seedman at his home on Aug. 7. Leonard H. Vaughan, is also receiving felicitation on the arrival of another baby boy at his home on Sept. 4.

Winterson's Seed Store reports a shipment of Tulips and Hyacinth bulbs on the way that are due in Chicago the coming week. John Degnan, manager of the store, and E. F. Winterson, Jr., will have to register under the new man power act, Sept. 12

Wheat Disease Discovered in Virginia

A serious disease of Wheat, long known in Europe, has recently been found in certain parts of the United States, particularly Virginia, it is announced by the Dept. of Agri. The disease is caused by a small nematode or eelworm.

Closing of California Fressia Bulb Season

Though we are pretty well over with Freesias we are still shipping some, but the stocks are cleaning up as well this year as in any previous season in spite of the extra heavy crops. This is because Freesias are being used more extensively than ever before on account of the shortage of Lily of the Valley and Japanese Lily bulbs as well as to the uncertainty of French and Dutch bulb receipts.

We feel that we should do something patriotic in connection with our business so we are preparing to plant about as large an acreage in vegetable seeds this Winter as in flower seeds and bulbs.

Home Fruit Grower

By M. G. KAINS

A clear, simple, practical and comprehensive volume for the amateur who seeks to grow high quality fruits for home needs, whether to eat out of hand as dessert, or to put up in some culinary way.

The author was particularly well fitted to write this book, having been reared in just such a fruit plantation, and in a village where for more than half a century the leading hobby has been high quality fruit growing for family use. With this standard of excellence he has united the best modern methods of securing choice specimens—methods little practiced, or even unknown, in his boyhood days—tillage, spraying, thinning, fertilizing, cover cropping, preventing frost injuries, low heading, rational pruning—each simple in itself and each conducive to the production of an abundance of the best fruit.

Besides general topics each fruit suitable to the home garden is discussed, in many cases with descriptions of a dozen, a score or even more varieties of conspicuous merit from the home plantation standpoint: Apple, Pear, Quince, Peach, Nectarine, Plum, Cherry, Apricot, Strawberry, Raspberry, Dewberry, Blackberry, Grape, Loquat, Fig, Juneberry, Pawpaw, Persimmon, Kaki, Wineberry, Pomegranate.

Heavily illustrated with teaching pictures. Cloth, postpaid.....$1.50

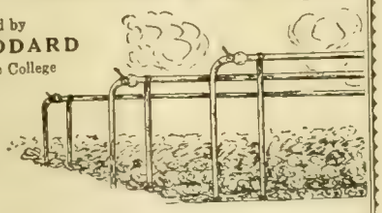
Vegetable Crops Under Glass and in the Open

Conducted by
E. F. STODDARD
Maryland State College



Forcing Radishes in the Greenhouse

A good selling, coal saving crop, easy to grow, quick to mature, excellent for interplanting between Beets, Cauliflower, Lettuce and other cool greenhouse crops. Professor Stoddard emphasizes the importance of forcing varieties, screened seed, light soil, well rotted manure, proper temperatures and right conditions for intercropping.

The Radish is one of the cool crops which may be grown in greenhouses this Fall and Winter as a means of saving coal. It is a popular vegetable in the Winter for salad and garnishing purposes. While there is usually a steady demand for them in sections which are supplied with greenhouse Radishes, it is an easy matter to overstock a market. This may be avoided, however, by planting small quantities at a time instead of making large plantings which mature in too large quantities to be marketed at the same time.

Radishes may be grown in houses that are too low for other crops. It is important that the crop should receive as much full sunlight as possible. Shading injures the crop by causing the plants to grow tall and develop poor roots.

Both ground beds and raised benches may be used. On raised benches, the crop will mature about one week sooner than on ground beds, if grown right. Very little, if any, bottom heat should be used since too much bottom heat will cause the development of large tops and poor roots. It is easier to maintain moist soil for rapid growth on ground beds than on raised ones. Benches dry out rapidly especially if the soil is not very deep. For the small round Radishes the soil must not be less than 4in. deep on benches, although 6in. to 8in. are better since the soil does not dry out as fast. To keep the crop growing evenly it is desirable to water more frequently the spots that dry out faster than most of the soil.

The best kind of soil for Radishes is a light sandy one that contains plenty of well rotted organic matter. In such a soil the Radishes will be more uniform, smoother and more attractive than those grown on heavier soils, and are also easier to wash before bunching. If it is feasible, sand may be added to a heavier soil to improve it. Well rotted manure or compost will also improve the structure of heavier soils.

Fresh manure must never be applied just before planting, but well rotted manure may be used. Some growers have tried commercial fertilizers but these do not give the best results. Experiments conducted at the Rhode Island Experiment Station show that well rotted manure used alone is the best fertilizer. At the same time it improves the soil. Some growers who produce two or three crops of Radishes apply a light application of manure before each crop is planted, while others who sterilize their soils, apply all of the manure before the first crop with very good results since the sterilization destroys all damping off fungus which attacks young seedlings.

The varieties used in greenhouses are the round or turnip shaped varieties. Most markets like a light red color such as the Scarlet Globe type has. The white Radishes are not very popular in Winter although the White Icicle is excellent in quality. This variety, however, has a long root. The plant should have short tops to admit of close planting. Many seedsmen can supply varieties that are adapted to forcing.

The best seed should be used for forcing. Those who expect to grow a succession of crops this winter could secure the largest possible returns from their soil by securing small amounts of seed from different sources for the first crop and buying seed for later crops from the seedsman who supplies the highest grade seed as determined by the first planting. Large plump seeds will produce the best Radishes. Small, poorly developed seeds will not produce good ones. For this reason, screening the seed with a mesh that has about 12 holes to the inch will remove the inferior seed.

The removal of this inferior seed means less thinning of the plants and more even maturity. Good seed sown one every half inch should give a good stand of plants if sown at an even depth. It is best to do a little thinning since in this way weak plants may be discarded, so the strong ones remaining may produce good Radishes. Some growers sow at a rate to secure a good stand and do no thinning until the first Radishes are ready to pull. By this plan, the Radishes will not mature as soon as those that are thinned, but of course this method is cheaper. Thinned Radishes are always better.

The soil should be level before seed sowing begins. The furrows may be made across the bed with a very narrow board. One half inch deep is sufficient. Uniform depth means uniform germination. The rows may be 4in. apart and the Radishes may stand 1 to 1½in. apart in the row, when round or Turnip shaped varieties with small tops are grown. After the seed is covered, the soil should be firmed and watered. Sowing the seed broadcast is used by very few growers.

The temperature may be 43 to 45 deg. at night and 55 to 60 deg. during the day. If the day temperature runs higher, plenty of ventilation must be given. In the early fall, the short season varieties will mature in 30 to 35 days, but in the winter when the days are shorter and there is less sunshine, seven to eight weeks may be required. In the Spring a crop may be grown in four weeks.

Intercropping with Radishes

Radishes are often planted in rows between the rows of some longer season vegetable like Beets, Lettuce and sometimes Cauliflower. The Radish seed should be sown at the same time that the other crop is planted in the house and the crop removed as soon as marketable.

In the preparation of the soil for such intercropping, while Lettuce may not be injured by manure that is a little fresh, Radishes will grow too fast and go all to tops. Both Lettuce and Cauliflower require very rich soils, but if the soil contains an abundance of nitrogen at first, Radishes will not do well as an intercrop. Some growers apply a manure mulch when Cauliflower is half grown, if the soil at first was not excessively rich in nitrogen. In such a case Radishes may be used as an intercrop with Cauliflower.

The condition of the soil then must be considered when Radishes are to be grown as an intercrop. Since the Radishes affect the other crops very little, the space may be used to the best advantage and larger returns realized and more crops grown.

Of all the many varieties and strains of Primula on the market now there is not one of them compares, even favorably, with the Rohrer Primula Malacoides. Years of patience and hard labor have developed this one to perfection, both in growth and size of plant, color and production of bloom. A season, such as this, when coal is scarce and expensive, it is one of the most profitable, economical and popular plants for you to grow. The colors are most beautiful shades of Rose Pink, Light Lavender and Snow White. A cool temperature, 40 to 45 degrees, produces the best results. For September and October delivery:

Club Meeting

The Houston Hort. Society after a Summer vacation, resumed its meetings last Monday evening Sept. 9 accepting the invitation of Supt. C. L. Brock to hold its first meeting of the season in the office at Sam Houston Park. It is particularly appropriate that the first meeting of the season should be held here, as Secty Laughlin read a paper on the Crape Myrtle movement and these beautiful plants have bloomed in the park this year to the admiration of all beholders. The club will endeavor to increase interest in them and make Houston the Crape Myrtle city as Galveston is the Oleander city. Talks of interest will be made before the club by Pres. S. J. Mitchell and R. C. Kerr.

Things have been a little slow this week in the florist line, but the outlook for a brisk business this season is good. R. C. Kerr reports two or three good days this week, despite the tendency to depression. A visitor at the store was Frank McCabe of the A. L. Randall Co., Chicago.

R. G. Hewitt of the Brazos Greenhouses says that on checking up his August business he found a gratifying increase over the same month last year. Now that the weather is becoming cool, he has calls for shrubbery, a comparatively new line with him. C. L. B.

Kansas City, Mo.

Kansas City and vicinity have had some fine rains in the last 10 days or so, but the protracted drought had done so much damage to outdoor stock that the rains were too late to do it much good. There was a fall of nearly 5in. in less than 10 hours on Aug. 29, and a day or two later there was a fall of more than 1in. The cool weather that followed this rainfall, combined with the moisture in the air, helped Roses greatly and they are now being cut plentifully.

Growers have their Carnations in the houses now and the change has put back stock so that there will be few of these flowers available until the latter part of September. Another week will see almost the last of the Asters and Gladioli, and Lilies will, of course, be very scarce. Asters are now selling at wholesale for 3½c. apiece, Gladioli 6c., Roses from 3c. to 10c. and Lilies from 10c. to 12c.

Thus far September has been very quiet among the florists, but they are not complaining as stock is so limited that heavy business would be difficult to meet. All agree in saying that August was better than had ben expected. One of the wholesalers reports the heaviest August for a number of years, with the bulk of sales in shipping orders. Local business was good, too.

Edward P. Taylor, previous to his enlistment in an artillery unit an employee of the W. L. Rock Flower Co., is now in France. The company has now 10 men in service.

The city has threshed 25 acres of Wheat in Swope Park this season. Last Fall Blue Grass seed was sown over 25 acres of this large city park, and to protect the grass from hard rains and heat of the sun's rays Wheat seed was planted liberally. Later the Park Board decided to let the Wheat mature. The average yield was 25 bushels to the acre and something like $1400 from the harvested grain has been turned over to the Swope Park district improvement fund.

Charles Humfeld, of Clay Center, Kan., was in the city during the week of Sept. 1. W. C. Hughes, of the Weller Pottery Co., was also a recent visitor.

Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Lamb have returned from Outing, Minn., where they spent the month of August at their cottage. B. S. B.

tember meeting. It has been Mr. Schmid's custom to tender the florists and their friends an annual crab feast Owing to the great shortage of seafood this year, watermelons and hot corn were served instead. It was a "big night" for the club. The Kallipolis Grotto Band of 30 pieces was the chief noise. Congressman Johnson of Washington State gave an interesting talk on the Washington of 20 years ago, telling stories about Mr. Schmid, for at that time the Congressman was cub reporter on the Washington Post.

Frank W. Bolgiano told of what goes to make up success in a most entertaining way. Other speakers were the Reverend E. E. Richardson and William T. Gude. Sergeant Groom, of Camp Meigs, described the landscape work that had turned a barren ground into a beautiful station. Motion pictures were furnished by Sidney B. Lust, of the Super Films Attractions Company, Inc.

Plenty of flowers were on the market last week. Gladioli came in large quantities and part of the stock dragged along from the early to the latter part of the week. There were too many Easter Lilies, but the present week opened up with a scarcity of these.

Among Roses, some exceptionally fine pink and red Radiance found ready sale at fair prices. Ophelia, next in quality was in fair supply. Maryland and White Killarney were fair. White Roses have been scarce, with hardly enough to go around. Cool weather is shortening up the supply of all Roses. It will bring out the Dahlias, which are beginning to look good. Large inside grown Asters sell at sight, but are very scarce. The smaller and poorer grades are plentiful, but are not selling.

Dagger ferns are scarce because pickers are finding more profitable employment in other lines. Several stores on Saturday were unable to put any greens in with customers' orders because of this scarcity.

Water Lilies have become scarce. Orchids are in demand but inasmuch as it is practically impossible to get any wholesalers have refused to accept orders for definite delivery. Cosmos is beginning to make its appearance.

The sympathy of the trade is with Fred Leapley, of G st., who last week met with the loss of his mother. Mrs Leapley has been ill for a long while.

The Merchants and Manufacturers Association is making an appeal to the women of Washington who are not employed in the Government to accept employment in the local stores. In a public statement, the association declares that the stores have cooperated with the Government in every way possible, and released a lot of men for more essential work. The store forces have also been badly hit by enlistments and induction into the Army, and are in great need of recruiting themselves. The women are appealed to on patriotic grounds to keep the home industries going.

The Florida Fruit and Flower Company has taken over the business of

W. W. Kimmel, on 14th st. Mr. Kimmel has entered the employ of the Government and is working at the American University camp. George Demer is operating the business. Fruit and flower baskets for hospitals and sick rooms will be among the specialties of the store.

Miss Julia Ballenger, operating the American Florist Company, at 14th and I sts., Northwest, is operating a cafeteria in connection with the sale of flowers. Neat tables, of the sanitary type have been put in and considerable business is coming to the store due to the general overcrowded condition of all places selling foodstuffs.

W. F. Nehrling, of Orlando, Fla., Will Rehder, of Wilmington, N. C., and John G. Esler, of Saddle River, N. J., were recent visitors in Washington.

With the Colors

John H. Small, Jr., son of J. Henry Small, has won his commission as second lieutenant in the Field Artillery and has been ordered to Camp Jackson, near Columbia, S. C., for duty. He is a graduate of Cornell University. When the Cornell squad was formed in an officers' training camp at Camp Meade, Md., he resigned his position in charge of landscape work, under the Department of Buildings and Grounds, and joined it. He made good and was sent to the Artillery School at Louisville, Ky., later getting his commission.

V. H. Morgan, formerly with Lord & Burnham, but now a first lieutenant in the Army, was a visitor in Washington recently.

John McCabe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael J. McCabe, who operated greenhouses in Anacostia and have a stand in the Center Market, is a member of the junior officers' training camp at Plattsburg, N. Y. Young McCabe, who is below draft age, is very enthusiastic and hopes to get into the Army under the new age limit. While a student at one of the high schools here he was active in the cadet corps. His brother, Harry, is a member of the Air Service and has been at the front for many months.

The Growing of Boxwood

MARINUS VAN KLEEF

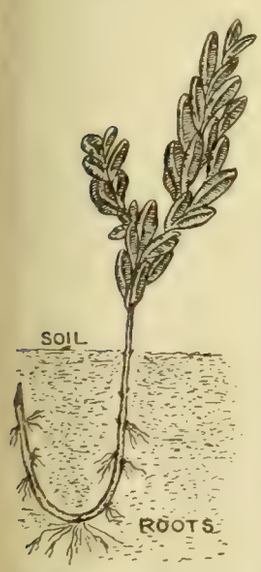
It is not always possible to give our readers so valuable an article as we are presenting on this page today. The writer, Marinus van Kleef, is an eminently practical man, having had a thorough experience in the nurseries which have to date furnished us with the bulk of our Boxwood. In view of the fact that no plants to speak of have reached these shores from Europe for many months, and with no present possibility of their being brought over in quantities at all to meet the demand, it would certainly appear to be the part of wisdom for nurserymen particularly, and florists also where their interests in these plants are large enough, to attempt the propagation of Boxwood in quantities to fit their needs. As explained by Mr. van Kleef, the art of propagation and raising of these plants seems so extremely simple that the wonder is that so comparatively few are being raised in the United States. Readers will quickly feel assured that Mr. van Kleef has given them all the particulars necessary for the successful propagation of Boxwood and has done so in such a way as to make the operation look decidedly easy.

Since it has become practically impossible to import oxwood from abroad, the scarcity of these valuable id useful plants is being severely felt by florists spe-alizing in the filling of window boxes.

Many articles have been written in gard to the different evergreens which in be substituted in place of Boxwood, ut very few indeed of such substitutes re really valuable for the purposes for hich Boxwood can be used.

If money is no object to the prospec-ve customer there is no limit to the arieties which can be used in window oxes. The cheaper varieties of ever-reens usually are the quicker growing nes, while the varieties which are best uited for window boxes are generally uite expensive. As a rule the plants in indow boxes last only one year, so it ecomes quite a costly proposition to re-lace expensive evergreens.

Boxwood is the ideal plant for window ox purposes and, in case importation of ursery stock is prohibited, and florists ontinue substituting other evergreens, Boxwood will soon be a thing of the past n America, with the exception of a few pecimen plants here and there. This nust be prevented by all means, as Box-wood is appreciated by almost everyone nd no other evergreen can take its place. There is no doubt, that before the war, nore Boxwood plants in all sizes were sold in America than of any kind of plant with probably the exception of Roses. And as Boxwood is readily grown there is no reason why every nurseryman or florist who has an opportunity to secure Boxwood cuttings in his vicinity should not grow them. Especially the florist who has his establishment near a cemetery where Box-wood usually is distributed in large quantities has an incentive to grow these plants in quantity.



The large roots from the lowest point in the bend of the cutting come from the new cambium layer formed where the bark cracks. The smaller roots above come from the cambium layer formed where the leaves are stripped off

Boxwood plants which have come unscathed through the severe cold last Winter are unquestionably the most ideal stock plants to make cuttings from. Such plants are acclimated to such a degree that young plants produced from them will be much hardier than the usual Boxwood imported from Europe. Many nurserymen are of the opinion that Box-wood does not keep well in this country, and it is a fact that too many plants turn yellow in a short time, while the growth is insignificant and the leaves appear shriveled up. The main reason why this happens is through planting in poor, dry soil. In Holland where Boxwood is grown by the millions, the plants are placed out in the most fertile spot in the nursery and, no matter how fertile the ground, cow manure is applied abundantly and dug under before the plants are set out. But I am getting ahead of my story, as the saying is, as it is my intention to explain in brief words the growing of Boxwood from the beginning up to good sized plants.

Azalea Shira-Mauya. See text page 426

It is possible to grow Boxwood from seed but this method is not advisable on account of the long time it requires to develop the plants; additionally it takes a considerably longer time yet before the plants are of sufficient size to be large enough for selling purposes.

The best way is to grow them from hardwood cuttings during the early part of Summer after the growth is settled. It is advisable to select twigs of good size. The foliage must be stripped off the lower part of the twig for about 2½in., while the bottom must be cut with a sharp knife—a clean cut heals quicker than a cut which is made with a dull knife. Do not cut off the foliage; stripping the leaves is far better. When stripped, a small piece of bark is torn off the twig where every leaf was. This injury quickly heals over, and on the cambium so exposed root forming takes place quickly. (See drawing.) To promote root forming, the cutting is pressed into the soil almost doubled up. Place the first finger of the right hand nearly in the center of that part of the cutting which is stripped off the foliage. The action of bending the cutting while pressing it into the soil causes the bark to crack in several places on the part which is bent. These injuries heal very quickly; cambium forms on the wounds and from the cambium root forming starts.

Your frame, of course, must be first prepared ready to receive the cuttings. Many people are of the opinion that it is absolutely necessary to remove the soil out of the frame to a certain depth, place a quantity of manure in the bottom, and cover the manure with about 8in. of soil to promote the bottom heat. This is not so, although it is advisable to prepare the frame that way if the cuttings are made in the Fall, because then the bottom heat will force the forming of roots before Winter begins. Bottom heat is necessary when cuttings are made in the Fall, as without the heat not many cuttings would form roots. However, as stated, if the cuttings are made in the early part of Summer, the warm weather will take care that the cuttings have nice roots before the Fall.

It is best to build the frame in such a way that it is nearly level with the ground, when the cuttings can easily be protected during the Winter with a lot of manure and some mats.

A light, sandy, rich soil is the best to place Boxwood cuttings in. In making cuttings the taller ones can be selected for the purpose of forming pyramid Boxwood, while the short, stocky ones are best for future bush Boxwood. It is advisable to even up the short cuttings a little on the tops.

The cuttings are placed about 2in. apart each way, and for the next six to eight weeks the frames must be covered with sash. As root forming takes place quickest in the dark the glass must be heavily whitewashed and covered with lath or thin mats to keep the sun out entirely. If the cuttings were not kept in a quite dark place the foliage would commence to grow and no roots would form. The cuttings must be watered copiously so that the soil is continually kept moist, while in extra warm weather a light spraying a few times a day will be beneficial. On warm days they also must be aired. In about two months the sashes are taken away and the cuttings can be protected by lath only until the cold weather sets in. Then the sashes must be placed on them again.

As Boxwood cuttings in their young stages are very tender, fully adequate protection must be given them during the Winter. When Spring is at hand this protection can be taken away and, to obtain a nice growth before they are planted out, the following must be done: Feed the plants with plenty of liquid manure at the first signs of Spring, leave the sashes on them, and keep them as warm as possible, watering them abundantly. Care should be taken not to burn them.

When they have made their first growth they can be planted out. When planting out it should be taken into consideration that Boxwood needs rich soil, considerable moisture and, if possible, plenty of shade. The best place for Boxwood is where it can be watered occasionally during dry weather. If one has a block of Maple trees Boxwood can be planted in the rows, and the shade of the trees will do them good while, at the same time, the same trees will give them protection during the Winter.

However, most Boxwood, and Rhododendrons also, are usually not killed by frost. It is the sudden change of temperature about March (in this latitude) that does most of the harm. One day it may be very cold, while the next day the sun will shine warmly on the foliage thawing it out too suddenly. It is the hot sun on the foliage, right after severe, cold nights in March or April, that does most harm to both Boxwood and Rhododendrons, causing alternate freezing and thawing.

The training of Boxwood must begin from the earliest stage. Bushes must be trimmed on the tops to obtain nicely shaped round plants, while pyramids must be trained quite high before they are allowed to grow in circumference. And it always must be borne in mind that Boxwood needs a lot of nourishment; feeding of small quantities of nitrate of soda will tend to keep the foliage dark green. Nitrate of soda is a dangerous fertilizer, however, and must be applied carefully as otherwise it will burn and injure the foliage quickly. The best time to apply this fertilizer is before a storm, or a rain, as then the soda which accidentally might have fallen on the foliage will wash off immediately.

Airplane Service to Chicago

A trial airplane mail service was inaugurated last week between New York and Chicago. It is to be hoped the outcome will be successful as the gain in time will be considerable. The hour given for closing the mail, 3 o'clock in the morning, is not propitious for quick delivery, except on the part of those who wish to stay up nights, and the number of willing night workers is thinning out rapidly. A service, to be really valuable, would be one closing in New York at 5 p.m. or 6 p.m., leaving Belmont Field, the airplane starting point, at say 8 p.m., reaching Chicago at 6 a.m. or 7 a.m. the next morning, enabling delivery of mail by or before 9 a.m. This would be a magnificent combination for business men and would surely be appreciated. Our idea may be impractical for the time being on account of the night flying involved, but after the pilots have had the necessary experience, we feel it would be just as simple a matter to make the trip by night, with the aid of the compass, as in the day time.

Preference List of Industries

In the preferred list of industries as given out by the Priorities' Division of the War Industries Board we find the following:

Industrial plants engaged principally in manufacturing industrial implements and farm operating equipment.

Industrial plants engaged principally in preparing feed for live stock and poultry.

Industrial plants engaged principally in producing fertilizers.

Industrial plants engaged principally in manufacturing insecticides and fungicides.

So far as we can ascertain, these are the only preferences in the four classes which have any connection whatsoever with the lines represented by THE EXCHANGE. These preferences it may be understood, have to do particularly with material in the course of manufacture for war purposes. There is no word of preference for florist, nurseryman or even seedsman.

Since this list was published on Monday last, the papers of Tuesday furnish us with information to the effect that Provost Marshal General Crowder is determined to have the draft run by his office and the district boards, and that while information supplied by other Government departments, such as the War Industries Board, will be considered, the final decision will be made by the officials and experts of the War Department.

This week passing finds all business considerably upset through the taking of these first steps in the draft. It will be several weeks before the actual effects on business become known. In a general way, some 2,000,000 men from this draft may be gradually inducted into the army and at least another million will be taken more or less promptly from their ordinary pursuits and inducted into war industries, it being known that we are that number short at the present moment.

Again predicating on general principles, the trades we represent stand to lose on an average, within a few months, some 30 to 40 per cent of their present employees, this operation again considerably reducing the number of men available for work in pursuits not necessary to the winning of the war

There is only one way to look the facts of our individual business troubles in the face and that is to do it bravely and with good grace, in the full belief that every Government regulation is for the benefit of all, and with a view single to winning the war quickly, instead of allowing it to drag along its weary way through lack of strenuous measures: that is to make up our minds that while we are all going to be hard hit, we will, each one of us, do the best we can under the circumstances, assured that our Government is not singling out any particular one of us for deprivation of man power; and, so encouraged, making our determination all the stronger to keep together at least the nucleus of our business, so that as quickly as the tide turns, as it will surely do before long, we will be prepared to resume full speed ahead, and to do this with far more gratification than had we been indulging in the meantime in useless whining and protestation.

Florists Not Classed as Non-Essential

Important to all Florists Throughout the U. S.

Statements have gone abroad that an order was issued from General Crowder's office at Washington, D. C., placing the florist business on the non-essential list, and that florists must seek other occupations. This I have never believed and do not believe it now, but the fact that these statements have gone out has succeeded in disorganizing help to a large degree in the florist business.

In view of the above statements which have come to me from various parts of the United States, I called on General Crowder at three o'clock on Friday afternoon, Sept. 6, and he personally assured me that the florists had not been classed as non-essential nor was there any idea of doing so.

This statement coming direct from General Crowder should in a measure alleviate the discontent among the florists, especially the heads of departments.

WM. F. GUDE.

Washington Representative, S. A. F. & O. H.

Not Alone in the Boat

To the man who is immersed in his own troubles to the exclusion of all else, it must certainly seem as though these were days when his own business affairs had reached the culmination of misfortune. Conditions naturally affect those the most who have hitherto lead a comparatively easy business life—like the strong, healthy man with never a moment of sickness when taken down with some ailment—he feels as though no one could possibly suffer as he is suffering. The man who has been "up against it" all his life, who is used to a mixture of hard knocks with an occasional glimpse of success, is not so easily affected.

Deprived of half his coal and quite often not yet knowing when he is going to receive the other half, which is his allotment, deprived of one half or more of his laborers and assistants, and bothered with freight and express delays, higher prices for everything, no dependence to be placed on anything, yes, surely, these are hard times, but—

The florist, the seedsmen, the nurserymen, and all the allied industries which go to make up our line, are no whit worse placed than are those engaged in a hundred or more "non-essential" industries. In other words, we are not "alone in the boat."

Our recommendation is that we put the best face possible on what is but a temporary situation, one that will pass with the swiftness of a Midsummer's mist as soon as victory has crowned our arms. It is so much relief not having to regard present conditions as a fixture to be indefinitely endured that really our present trials should seem of the lightest in comparison to what they might have been.

If each one of us will give of the best that is in him, day by day, for country, for freedom, for the boys "Over There," for home and family, the way will not seem so long nor the path we must tread so difficult.

Things would be far worse if our friends—the enemy—had their way, which they won't.

A cheerful side is furnished by the outlook that there will be a good market, to say the least, for every flower that will be raised under glass this Fall and Winter.

Our Potash Supply—The Best of News

We will soon produce all the Potash we require. The British develop a process of supply from Blast Furnace dust

The Board of Trade Journal (London) publishes a remarkable article on the British supplies of potash, showing the important progress which has been made during the war in the production of potash in Great Britain. One source of the new supply is from blast-furnace dust, from which potash is obtained by a cheap and simple process, consisting primarily in an addition of a small proportion of common salt to the charge of the furnace, which releases the potash present in the ore and causes it to be volatilized with the emergin gases as potassium chloride.

As the result of experiments on a large scale it wa estimated that it would be possible to recover 50,0(tons of potash salts per annum from blast-furnace du alone—enough practically to meet the needs of the cou try.

A factory has been erected near Birmingham, d signed to produce 400 to 500 tons of potassium chlori weekly from blast-furnace dust and a conversion factor is to be added where chloride, not needed for agricu ture, may be converted into other refined potash salt

Large quantities of potash can similarly be collecte from fumes and dust from cement kilns, and potas now is being sold by many cement manufacturers wh hitherto had no idea that such valuable material coul be so easily collected.—N. Y. Times, Sept. 6.

At the convention of the National Fertilizer Ass(ciation in New York City last week it was stated tha the output of potash produced in the United States th year would largely exceed last year's product of 32,00 tons. The presiding officers declared it would "be po sible, by mobilizing all the raw material at blast fu naces and cement mills, to reach an annual output (500,000 tons. Imports the year previous to the war wer 283,025 tons, valued at $9,813,263. Part of the America supply will be derived from a California lake which, ac cording to chemists, holds 20,000,000 tons of potash i solution.

If the telegraphed report quoted above is dependabl and if the statements made at the convention are cor rect, it will probably mean the entire loss to German of her immense potash exports and, per contra, a ne and valuable industry for the United States, and th keeping at home the very considerable funds hithert sent abroad in payment for that fertilizer.

Encouraging American Potash Outlook

The United States Geological Survey estimates that th amount of potash produced in this country for the first si months of 1918 was between 20,000 and 25,000 tons (actual potash (K20). These figures indicate that the tot for the year will reach 60,000 tons, which is nearly doubl the amount produced in 1917. This is a most satisfactor increase, although the total is only about 25 per cent (what we were using before the war. If this country is t become independent of the German potash monopoly, i is very important that every effort should be made to de velop all our own sources of supply as soon as possible If this is done, it seems reasonable to believe that we should eventually be able to supply all our own needs.

Here is the most important and encouraging fact in the potash situation. In the four years since the war began w have developed a native potash supply from nothing t 25 per cent of our total pre-war consumption. It may b interesting and of practical value to enumerate the char acter and sources of this present supply.

By far the largest present source is found in a group o saline lakes in Nebraska. Here the potash is mixed with other salts dissolved in the lake waters. The process o recovery is essentially evaporation by heat, with subse quent crystallization and purification of the residue. The commercial product is chiefly muriate of potash.

The next most important present supply is probably that derived from the kelp of the Pacific coast. This seaweed is gathered by a dredge, dried, burned and usually marketed as ash. Under normal conditions cost of transportation would confine the use of this product to the Pacific coast section,but it is probable that the supply wil equal the demand for that area.

Searles Lake in Southern California contains saline deposits from which potash in commercial quantities is now being profitably obtained. The deposits here are estimated to aggregate 20,000,000 tons of actual potash.

The alunite mineral in Utah is being commercially worked; at least one fertilizer concern controls large mineral rights already being utilized. High grade sulphate is produced from this source.

The green sands of New Jersey long known to contain 4 to 5 per cent of potash and used locally as fertilizer are now being scientifically worked with good results.

A small amount of nitrate of potash has long been recovered from tobacco factory waste. This source of supply has been encouraged and increased.

Feldspar, which contains as high as 12 per cent actual potash in the form of silicate, has commonly been considered as the most hopeful source of potash supply for the future. Two difficulties have been in the way. The mineral is as insoluble as window glass, and no economical method for conversion into soluble form has been devised. Also the mineral occurs in such strata and situations as to render mining very expensive.

Another source, heretofore practically overlooked, now seems to offer the greatest probability of becoming our chief reliance—the cement industry which uses slate as a raw material. Several inexhaustible deposits of this slate are in southern localities. A promising source exists near Atlanta, in the Cartersville slates. These are being worked on a small scale near Portland by the American Potash Co. In many cement plants potash is now being recovered from the kiln dust, with very satisfactory financial results.

Publicity for flowers is highly necessary, for they do not live long. The fuel question this Winter is further agitated by a recent invention of a Swede using peat for fuel by first pulverizing it to a powder, and blowing the powder into the furnace with a hot air blast. The combustion takes place while it is in suspension and greatly augments the heat properties in chemical action by this process.*

The governor of the State of Coahuila, Mexico, on the Texas border, has proposed to the Governor of Texas a plan of supplying Mexican coal at the border at a very low price. "They do smell kind o' fine," drawled the youth, "I'll jist drive a little closer so you ken git a better smell." *

Well, the weather man has been doing stunts; ran the thermometer up to 90 deg.; forgot to run it back and then the next day started where he left off, and ran it up to 107 deg.; very careless of him. (This happened several weeks back.) Now, no one wanted to work in such hot weather so our bank accounts feel it; this temperature, while very good for Rubber plants is not at all good for men.

An old Scottish farmer was being drilled by a government official as to what he was to do in the event of a raid by the Huns in Scotland's East Coast. "Dearie me!" said he, "I'm thinkin' I'll hae an awful job wi' ma bees."

Time to think of many things is given us as we sit on the shore and watch the waves roll in; especially we think of their untiring energy; never still, always that ceaseless roll. You have heard some people say talk is cheap. Is it so?

That he perhaps has often paid for medical advice.

An enterprising butcher recently put a notice outside his shop to the effect that he had "All sorts and sizes of shoulders to suit all purses." While he was surveying this notice with much satisfaction, a young lady approached him and, after reading the announcement, turned to him and said: "What sort of shoulder have you got to suit an empty purse?" To her surprise the answer came without hesitation: "Nothing but the cold shoulder, miss!"

Saliva Plants need Spittoonia Borders. It is told of a local Mrs. Malaprop, more happy in her supply of cash than proud of her vocabulary, that employing a landscape architect to embellish her grounds, she observed, pointing out one spot to be beautified, "I think it would make a very pretty effect to put here some of that plant—you know, they call saliva."
"Certainly, madam," replied the landscape artist, without a change of countenance. "And to add to the effect I will surround it with a border of spittoonias."—Baltimore American.

Our Potash Supply—Concluded

The composition seems to indicate that the Cartersville slates would be very suitable for use in the manufacture of Portland cement, and as they contain 8 to 10 per cent of K20 the recovery of potash at present prices would probably be as profitable as the manufacture of cement.

Unfortunately the installation of the necessary plant is rather expensive, and investors hesitate to put up the capital, as they do not know how long the present high prices will last, and under the proposed revenue bill, a very large percentage of the profits will be taken as taxes. It seems that the establishment of a permanent potash industry in this country is so important that it should be given every encouragement. One way to do this would be to exempt such companies from any tax on profits until the cost of the plant has been paid. This would probably insure these companies being able to continue in business with potash at a normal price.

It is very doubtful if potash can be produced in this country at the price at which it was imported before the war, and we think the Government should not allow any "dumping" after the war. Germany is relying on her potash monopoly to compel this country to supply her with certain raw materials that she needs badly. The American farmer should be prepared to pay a little more for his potash in order to make him independent of this monopoly, and to render it impossible for any foreign country again to endanger our food supply.—Southern Ruralist.

Tractors for Small Areas

Due to shortage of man power, and the expense of maintaining horses, THE EXCHANGE has been giving attention to the merits of the various tractor machines on the market with the object in view of placing before its readers all information available, particularly applying to the work on small acreages where that has hitherto been done by one man and one horse.

We publish here the experience of H. E. Jacob (Dept. of Hort., Ohio State University) of Columbus, Ohio, with the Beeman Garden Tractor, and solicit the experience of others using tractors, whatever the make, in the endeavor to help our readers to an intelligent choice when they make a purchase, as it is simply on the cards that a perfected tractor will as surely replace the horse for field operations as the automobile truck is replacing that same domestic animal for heavy work.

Follows a Narrative of Practical Experience

"In recent years there has been an increasing interest in the production of a tractor which would eliminate horses from the garden. A machine of this kind must possess three prime requisites: First, it must be small enough to cultivate rows as narrow as 12in. Second, it must be powerful enough to do any work not exceeding a one horse cultivator, and, third, it must be easy to manage. Any machine not possessing all of these factors is useless. Such was the case with the first garden tractors built. They lacked one or more of the above requirements. In recent years a garden tractor has been developed which works more or less satisfactorily, depending to a large extent upon the nature of the work and the skill of the operator.

"The Beeman Garden Tractor is now built for practical garden work. The Department of Horticulture, Ohio State University, received a Beeman tractor last Spring, and during the Summer it has been operated by three men, including the writer. After the first half hour's trial each man in turn pronounced it unmanageable and useless. After a half day's work we agreed that we might get some work out of it. After one week we decided that it was a practical machine. It takes about a week for a man to learn to operate the tractor and until he learns he had better work where he has plenty of room. The tractor is guided by friction of tools in the ground which can hardly be described in words, but must be experienced to be properly understood.

"After one becomes familiar with the machine anything from onions drilled 12in. apart up to corn planted 40in. can be satisfactorily cultivated if soil conditions are right. For use in narrow rows the soil must not be too wet; it must be level, and must be evenly packed. If there are many holes such as horse tracks or even loose places, the machine is difficult to manage. If one wheel drops into a hole that side then pulls harder than the other and the machine has a tendency to turn. On more even ground, however, the work can be easily and well done.

"Cultivation in rows wide enough to permit the use of 4in. extension rows is much easier. With the extension runs the tractor is much more stable, steady and powerful. In fact if the proper tools are used it will do practically as much work and do it just as well as an ordinary horse.

"We have used the tractor here this Summer to cultivate Corn, Celery, Tomatoes and a few Beets. While the tractor will do practically the work of an ordinary horse, it does not compare with a good, slow, steady, careful horse where a horse can be used. Neither does its work in narrow rows equal in quality the work of an expert wheelhoe man. Of course, one man with the tractor will do as much work as two or three men with wheelhoes and do it easier.

"In the matter of fuel consumption the tractor is quite economical, running from two to about five hours on a gallon of gasoline, depending of course upon how hard the work is.

"The belt power of this tractor is a desirable feature. It is claimed to develop full 4 h. p., and the engine delivers a smooth, steady power available for any machinery not requiring more than 4 h. p.

"In a few words the following is the writer's individual opinion of the tractor: If a man keeps a good team anyway, he does not need a tractor of this kind. But if his area is too limited to keep horses profitably, or if it is desirable to eliminate horses altogether, a tractor of this kind is desirable and will render at least reasonable service."

It takes colored people of the South to emphasize the use of flowers for the sick, as well as the dead. The President sister of the Order of Colored Emancipation, was told in her cabin that she had only two days between life and the grave, as the physician left her without hope on her sick bed. The sister members of the society who wished to honor their proposed departing sister with flowers, thought the idea a good one to bring them to the sick roon that she might enjoy them; they could take them to the grave later on. So that flowers in vases and in wreaths were lavished about the bedside in great profusion. The following day the proposed dying sister thought the flowers needed refreshing and attention so, feeling much benefitted from the good cheer, managed to get up and attend to the job herself. She is now so much improved that another supply of flowers will have to be furnished, for her very indefinite grave.*

Obituary

Frank S. Fisher

Frank S. Fisher, for many years connected with the florist's business of Worcester, Mass., and Worcester County, died on Thursday, Sept. 5, from heart failure. Mr. Fisher was 62 years old. He was widely known, both in Grafton and Worcester. During his residence in Grafton he owned and operated large greenhouses in Centerville, selling his flowers at wholesale in Worcester. After moving to the latter city he had stores at 219 and 537 Main st., under the name of Frank Fisher & Son, and for some time occupied a booth at the Union Station.

He is survived by his widow, May Fisher, and a son, George Edward, of New London, Conn., both well known to the florist's trade. F. L. M.

John W. Gibson

John W. Gibson, of the florist's firm of Gibson Bros., Newport, R. I., died at his residence on Bliss rd., on Sunday evening, Sept. 8, of Bright's disease. The deceased was in his 62d year and but for a few years spent in New York City, where he opened a store in 1882, his whole business career was spent in his home town, where he was known as an expert decorator. He took an active part in politics as a Republican, and has been a member of the Representative Council since 1907; his fraternal affiliations included, in Freemasonry, St. Johns Lodge and other Masonic bodies; also the Royal Arcanum and the Newport Lodge of Elks. He was a member of the Newport Horticultural Society. Two brothers and three sisters survive.

The writer, as well as Mr. Gibson's many other friends, sincerely mourn their loss. A. M.

William F. Dreer

At the moment of going to press we have received with regret the news of the death of William F. Dreer, president of H. A. Dreer, Inc., Philadelphia. We are without further particulars and owing to the closing of our forms at this hour we are unable to give here but a mere sketch of the deceased.

William F. Dreer was the son of the founder of the business, who died in 1873, when the younger Dreer took over the task of developing the nursery establishment and the fostering of the extensive trade built up by a lifetime of patient and conscientious effort by Henry A. Dreer.

Wm. F. Dreer was born in Philadelphia on Nov. 11, 1849. He attended the Hastings Academy in West Philadelphia until the Spring of 1865 when he entered his father's business. In 1868 he went to Europe to study the details of the seed and plant business and was employed in one of the largest seed establishments in Paris. He returned to the home business in the Autumn of 1869. In 1870 he took charge of the plant business at Riverton, N. J., and in 1873 returned to the seed establishment in Philadelphia, taking charge of both the seed and plant departments. In 1892 the business was incorporated, having for its stockholders the old and experienced employees.

The Nursery Department

Important to Nurserymen

The U. S. Railroad Administration has given assurances that the orders of last March placing nursery stock on the list of commodities exempted from embargoes will be continued for the Autumn and Spring shipments of nursery stock.

Penalizing for Fruit Trees Untrue to Name

J. R. Mayhew, President American Association of Nurserymen, advises us that the objectionable nursery stock bill recently filed in the Georgia legislature has been defeated. This bill, it will be remembered, established the measure of damages when fruit trees proved untrue to name.

Azalea Shira-Mauya

The Azalea of which we write is one of several new ones from Japan, all of which are giving us a hardier type than we have had heretofore, many of them being nearly or quite evergreen.

The Shira-Mauya is particularly valuable because of its semi-double white flowers, something quite new in this type of Azalea. As our illustration shows, it is of free growth, inclining to make a handsome bush, which is much in its favor planted where it is at the base of a slight elevation on a lawn.

In this respect, free growth, it is so very different from the mollis, and, in fact, from the Ghent division, as well. Mollis is particularly noted for its stiff, erect branches. Our Shira-Mauya in it slight branches and free growth has more the habit of wild Azalea, nudiflora. It is its semi-double white flowers which make it so desirable to our gardeners, leading all others in this respect if we are not mistaken.

The propagation of this Azalea follows the usual method with this genus, the placing of cuttings of half ripened shoots under glass.

Colorado Blue Spruce Defended

Referring to Mrs. Francis King's recent condemnation in these columns of certain trees and shrubs as being "out of date" P. D. Barnhart of Los Angeles, Cal., writes:

It is news to me that Colorado Blue Spruce is "out of date and under the ban of all persons of taste." Here we regard it as one of the most beautiful of the conifer family, and no planting is complete in this part of the country without it, and while the golden leaved Philadelphus is not a desirable subject in landscape work, the golden colored Privet is a beautiful thing for fine effect in a large shrubbery.

Do you know that there are some folks with such a super-sense of refinement that much of the work of God in the vegetable kingdom jars their nerves? It is a fact. There are esthetic people who condemn the work of their Creator for having made the gorgeous Bougainvillea, and howl at their fellows who plant it hereabouts. Such people make me mad and I must confess that I cannot refrain from saying some mean things about them and their folly. I wonder what kind of a world this would be had some of these contrariwise critics been put on the job of making it.

But I must stop right now, and get to work, and not let my indignation get the better of my judgment, or I may write some things that would not look well in print.

Southern Nurserymen's Ass'n

The Southern Nurserymen's Ass'n held a highly successful annual meeting at Birmingham, Ala., on Aug. 21 and 22. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, H. Cobb Caldwell, Atlanta, Ga.; vice-president, S. W. Crowell, Roseacres, Miss.; secretary-treasurer, O. Joe Howard, Pomona, N. C. Executive committee, the three officers and Chas. T. Smith of Concord, Ga., and C. A. Simpson of Monticello, Fla.

The first morning of the convention was given over to a discussion of trade publicity. In succeeding sessions interesting discussions on horticultural and nursery topics were held. J. R. Mayhew, of Waxahachie, Tex., president of the American Ass'n of Nurserymen, in his address before the association, made the interesting statement that ten years ago Huntsville was the nursery center of the world, having some of the largest nurseries then in existence, but that it would be hard now to tell just where the center was because of the vast strides made by the nursery interests of the States beyond the Mississippi.

Mr. Caldwell, the newly elected president of the association, is well known in the Southern trade as proprietor of the Ashford Park nurseries, on Peachtree rd., Atlanta, considered one of the largest establishments of its kind in the South. Mr. Caldwell is a member of the Rotary and Capital clubs and has been prominent in city affairs.

It was decided to hold next year's convention in Atlanta, Ga.

The following members of the association, besides those previously mentioned, attended: O. W. Frazier and W. H. Kessler, of Birmingham; L. Moore, Grand Bay, Ala.; H. B. Chase, Chase, Ala.; J. B. Frazer, Milton Mors and R. R. Harris, Huntsville; Mark Lanier, Lockhart, Ala.; J. L. Hoffman, Atlanta; J. B. Wright, Cairo, Ga.; Paul C. Lindley, Pomona, N. C.; H. H. Nickols, Bristol, Tenn.; W. A. Easterly, Cleveland, Tenn.; Harry Nicholson, Winchester, Tenn.; R. P. Hood, Richmond, Va., and J. B. Watkins, Midlothian, Va.

An English Letter

Quite some interesting extracts from a letter written by our old friend, T. A. Weston, are given here. It is dated Aug. 14. He moves from one subject to another, almost as rapidly as the Allies are now working the ground over in France but, with all that, his story is really interesting.

Speaking of the sale for the benefit of the British Ambulance Committee on behalf of the French Red Cross (previously mentioned) he says that the total of sales of flowers from all stalls was nearer $50,000 than $25,000. The people simply bought the Carnations because they wanted them, and bought there instead of going to the dealer on that day. The Carnation stalls could easily have sold double the quantity if they had had the flowers. As it was, they sold nearly one hundred dozen blooms a day.

Cheers for the Americans

"I'm right glad that we've got the Germans squeezed a bit and that the Americans have helped so well. I think, however, it's absurd for folks to talk of its ending by Christmas. The Huns will take a lot of pushing as they have a long way to go. Perhaps, however, they'll squeal before it comes to fighting on the Rhine. I guess they'll feel more sick when they read the U. S. A. is now starting on the 18 to 45 stunt.

High Prices for Vegetables (Forced, Presumably?)

"I'm rather surprised that your florists got the 'wind up' so badly over the coal deal, but there were plenty here who, at the outset, foresaw the nursery trade 'going West.' As a matter of fact the market grower has never done better than this year. Tomatoes and Cukes (Cucumbers) are at a premium. Toms at 36c. a lb. retail, lowest, and Cukes, 20c. each retail! As for the flower sales: Well, my friend in Hythe, when I saw him at Easter, told me he was putting 22 acres down to Chicory and the bulk of his remaining ground to Tomatoes and flowers. Vegetables like Potatoes, etc., were a washout last year because of the allotments around, but my friend couldn't get enough flowers. So this year he's making up largely on Chrysanths.

"The Chicory is a new stunt to make up for the failure of the Belgian crop. Chicory will be a great crop if the conditions as now prevail. We can't grow it to pay against Continentals, and our Customs don't encourage the growing of dutiable crops here. It's easier for them to collect on foreign stock at the ports. That's where you have the bulge on us. You are surfeited with folks who clamor for a big fence against everything. Here just the reverse prevails. Our merchants have hitherto made the most out of imports and the 'powers' more or less have encouraged it. Perhaps we may wake up after this job is over. Anyhow my friend has sunk a lot of money in his Chicory venture with ovens and grinding plant. There is a big call for Chicory for Coffee mixing, you know and, with luck, my friend reckons he is safe against Continental competition for this and next season. After that, the bottom will be out of his market in all probability. * * *"

Home Grown Bulbs—Plant Disease Investigator

"We have a good share of home grown bulbs going around. Just fancy, Geo. Monro, Jr., who is a big bulb grower as well as a big Covent Garden salesman, has just taken on J. K. Ramsbottom as a plant disease investigator. Ramsbottom is a clever little chap who has been working on Daffodil disease at Wisley, and Monro apparently has something in mind. He has big money in the trade. He grows millions of bulbs, so I guess it's a business idea to run an investigator. It's his market in all probability. * * *

As will be remembered, Mr. Weston is apparently a permanent fixture holding a responsible position in a receiving depot "somewhere in England" at a point where the material for the soldiers abroad is assembled before dispatching forward. Speaking further of floral conditions at that depot (camp), he says:

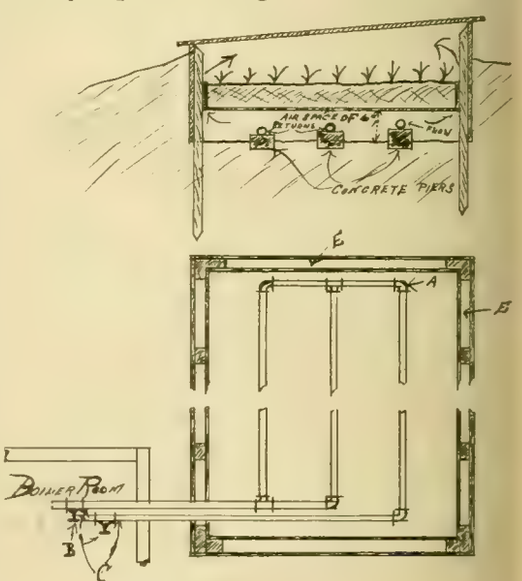
Flowers at the Camps

"Since recent rains things have grown famously, but Potatoes are not any too grand up here this time, and the Onion mildew has beaten me again. The flowers in camp are O.K., Violets and Begonia semperflorens in great shape around my tent, and Carnations opening out good. The other beds around, too, are good. I have a great show of dwarf Cactus (Dahlias) and early Chrysanths., whilst Nemesia strumosa is the admiration of everyone. I've got the others fairly cliqued, when it comes to class of stock. Burpee's Red Sunflowers are coming very good, one a double. Have an immense crop of wax and other bush Beans, but it was too cool in June for my Tomatoes. Actually we had frosts, and the plants never got away for weeks."

Hot-Water-Heated Frames

The accompanying sketch shows a pipe-heated frame used by us, which has proved successful in every way. In these times of shortage in fuel, which threatens to reduce greenhouse space, and shortage of manure, which has consequently such increased value as a source of fertilizer that it is too expensive to use as a means of heat, the following proposition is one which might be of use to anyone who finds his greenhouse space somewhat congested at different seasons.

This idea suggested itself to us because of the necessity of having a steadier source of heat than derived from manure and one which could be regulated. The system of heat used by us is hot water, pipe lines consisting of one flow and two return 2in. pipe being used throughout. During the Spring months many greenhouses do not carry all the coils necessary for Winter use. These being cut off with us, we turn this surplus radiation into the frames and find that it takes very little increase in fuel to operate. In fact it cost $1.50 less per sash to operate than a frame of the same size heated by manure. The system is so arranged that heat can be cut off from the boiler room and the water drained from the system by means of drainage cocks placed at C. At point A the elbow is tapped and connected with a ⅜in. pipe leading through the soil to a pet cock which can readily be reached by opening a very small opening in the covering.



Hot bed heated by hot water

We use single light sash, with mats on very severe nights. The spaces at E show an air space 2-in. wide running the entire length of the frame. The soil bench is constructed the same as an ordinary greenhouse bench, being built to hold about 6in. of soil. Running the length of the bed is a joist which takes the weight through the middle, otherwise the bench would sag and water would drain to the middle of the bench.

Under the soil bench is an air space of 6-in. through which the coils are run instead of being buried in the soil, a practice which to our mind, causes the loss of much heat. Thus you see the plants are growing in a bench of soil which does not come into direct contact with the cold earth outside, making it possible to maintain an even soil temperature night and day.

With the ground frozen outside for days at a time we have been able to keep a soil temperature of 60 deg. and a temperature above of 58 deg. to 60 deg. at night. The past season we operated one frame 80ft. long, sown with Peppers and Eggplants and had a better stand than we have ever had before in our experience. After these plants had reached a height of about 2in. we experienced a week or rather five days, of continual sleet, which froze as fast as it fell, making it impossible to ventilate or even open the frames to the light. In the pipe-heated frame there was about 2 ft. of row that damped off while out of the other frames we lost as much as 50 per cent. of the plants; this was due to the fact that in the pipe-heated frame the dry heat from the pipes kept the surplus condensation dried up while in the other frames the lack of heat caused the loss of thousands of plants. We operate in our plant season about 10,000 ft. of frames, growing vegetable plants exclusively, and the plan just given has eliminated many troubles to be found in the plant growing business.

"God's Visiting Cards, Dropped Everywhere"

Miss Jennie L. Miller of California sends us an editorial from a California newspaper from which we quote the following slightly condensed passage: When the librarian of the Cleveland public library died it was assumed there would be a notable funeral, with a great profusion of floral offerings. He had held that conspicuous public place for 30 years, and was personally known to tens of thousands. Then somebody suggested: Why spend money for flowers? What Mr. Brett would want is books—books for soldiers—the books he has been begging for day and night for more than a year. The family instantly acquiesced. Word was passed around, and friends, instead of buying beautiful but useless and perishable flowers, contributed so liberally to a "memorial soldiers' book fund" that thousands of soldiers will be enabled to read, in the cantonments and in France, good books they might otherwise have missed.

With no thought to disparage the value of books, or to belittle the happy thought that prompted the formation of the "memorial soldiers' book fund," we would like to ask the editor and others who agree with him how flowers could be useless if they are beautiful? Do they not appeal to the finest of our sensibilities? Do they not stir memories of many events, memories that no other gift could affect? Miss Miller admirably expresses her sense of the value of flowers when she says: Are they not God's visiting cards, dropped everywhere? And if so why belittle either the gift or the loving thought of the giver?

Modern Flower Shop Methods

Paper by A. Lange, read at a meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club, Sept. 5.

The retail florist's business requires undivided attention. New ideas and inspirations are necessary to the maintenance of a successful flower shop; customers demand new creations, superior service and alert and courteous salespeople. One of the greatest assets is the neat arrangements of stock throughout the store, keeping baskets, wreaths, jardinieres and novelties clean so as always to be presentable to customers, while flowers, the most important item, should at all times be artistically arranged in neat vases, the faded foliage removed and the stems clean.

The retail branch of the trade has made wonderful progress during the past 10 years and must continue to maintain its importance or it will be classed among the so-called "non-essential" industries, and florists must comply with the various Government orders and respond to campaigns for carrying on war work.

Various Problems

Let us also consider our immediate business problems. The wholesaler has for many years received orders from acquaintances, or persons, who, should he refuse to serve them, would naturally patronize the retailer. This business, taken by the commission man, has been termed "red violet," and I believe that an understanding could be maintained so that the wholesaler would turn these orders to the retailer, perhaps on a commission basis, or as might otherwise be arranged. Some of the out-of-town florists send orders for delivery in the city to the commission houses, whereas the retailer should rightfully receive such business.

My experience in the florist business extends over a period of 35 years, starting with James Farrell in 1883, who was the originator of the loose arrangement of flowers in bouquets and baskets, the style up to that time having been similar to that employed in making up the Colonial bouquet of the present day. At that time, the stiffer the arrangement, the better it pleased. I recall at one time looking into the store of Hovey & Co., on Wabash ave., when Frank Benthey, who made a specialty of plateau baskets, was manager. These were usually arranged in six or eight sections, each of different flowers. One day, I mentioned the beautiful baskets I had seen in this window to Mr. Farrell, and I am leaving to your imagination what he said in reply.

The retail business is, to quite an extent at present, and will be, for the duration of the war, conducted by women and we must give them great credit for the way in which they handle the situation.

Advertising

In the matter of advertising, the appropriation for this purpose depends upon gross receipts. Of the total sales, five per cent. should be set aside for high class publicity, and usually, for quick results, the best paper in town should carry your message, the effectiveness augmented by a cut of what you feature at the time.

In regard to expenses which have increased tremendously, we well know the situation with regard to boxes, twine, etc., which have practically doubled in price within the past two years. As to corsage bouquets and other flowers, where the sale amounts to less than $1, there should be an extra charge of 10c. for the box, and if delivered, a charge of 10c. for carfare. Flowers sent out of town by express or parcel post on Saturdays, are as a rule, not delivered until Monday, and it is wise to notify by wire the person for whom they are intended, the charges of course to be paid by the person ordering the shipment.

The Essence of a Flower Vendor's Heart

The "widow's mite" was exemplified in the act of an aged flower vendor whose stand was located near the Arc de Triomphe, Paris, when recently she unloaded all her variegated stock of Roses, Lilies, Tulips and Violets upon an American ambulance passing her stand loaded with American wounded from the front and being driven to a Paris hospital in the vicinity. The ambulance was open and the wounded men could be seen on hanging stretchers, swayed to and fro by the motion of the car. One young soldier sat on the seat with the driver, his injury being a shattered arm. With one arm free, he received the flowers, the essence of the old flower vendor's heart. There was little delay. Every one understood the incident. The soldier's face showed he was in pain, but the aged woman's offering caused him to forget his suffering and he smiled.

The Undertaker and the Florist

Editor The Florists' Exchange:

G. G. McClunie, in THE EXCHANGE of Sept. 7, p. 390, takes exception to my remarks in regard to the undertaker and the florist. I am sorry he feels that way. Certainly I must have touched a very sore spot. From the way he speaks you would take Mr. McClunie to be in the undertaking business rather than in the florist's trade. He is only knocking down the florist when he gives a commission to the undertaker.

I don't intend to "cough up." The florist does stay in his own yard, something the undertaker is not doing. Mr. McClunie says the undertaker will get me sooner or later. I agree with him on this one point. When I am dead he will "get me," not one minute before. Will Mr. McClunie explain how, when and where the florist gets 20 per cent., and from whom and how does he get the "five spot"?

Mr. McClunie says that if he had as much on his books as they have he'd be a fit subject for "Middletown, Conn., on the hill." Well, there is another "health resort" in Middletown, N .Y., "on the hill," for the poor florists with all their bad outstanding bills.

I made no reference to "Mary Ann" and "a $10 pillow." They are wonderful business men who can do that and pay their just debts. Mr. McClunie should take time and thoroughly digest W. Cleaver Harry's article on the "Retail Florist and the Undertaker," in THE EXCHANGE of Sept. 7. Mr. Harry states the facts clearly and forcibly; what he says is true in every detail. It is nothing but deliberate "graft" on the florist's labors. Discontinue giving commissions to undertakers, all hands together.—THEODORE STREZESKI, N. J.

Flowers are messages of Love sent to us from the Almighty.

They are ready to receive us with open arms and yielding lips. Their caresses are sincere and natural. Their message is of peace and tranquility and confidence. All's well~God is still in His Heaven~

When days are darkest, when hope is faintest~~~go among the flowers~drink in their message of peace~and be comforted.

We need flowers now, as never before. We are just beginning to realize their true meaning.

Flowers! Heavenly messengers of Peace! May God give us more of them~

Flowers for Wounded Soldiers

An interesting article in The New York Sun of Aug. 8, accompanied by an attractive illustration, calls attention to the work of the National League for Woman's Service, and the fact that the florists are heartily supporting the work of that organization in furnishing flowers for wounded soldiers. In this direction, at least, there can be no doubt that the production of flowers is an "essential" industry.

Geo. E. Manning, "The Village Florist," Broadalbin; N. Y., sends us a copy of his new billhead on which, in the lefthand corner, he has had printed in effective type, the following well worded appeal on behalf of flowers:

> If you have sympathy for a friend
> Say it with flowers.
> If a message of love to send
> Just say it with flowers.
> If you would spread good will and cheer
> Come and buy your flowers here.

"The Garden of Forty Arches"

As a centerpiece to what is said to be "the world's largest apartment house," covering an entire block between 47th and 48th sts., and Madison and Park aves., New York City, there was made this Spring a wonderfully beautiful garden of flowers and evergreens, and semi-tropical plants. The ground used for this garden contains 22,750 sq. ft. The garden is divided into two sections, owing to a bisecting street which continues Vanderbilt ave. to 50th st. from 42d st. Among the great amount of material entering into the make-up of the garden are Phoenix palms, Yuccas, Rhododendrons, Bay trees, Azaleas, Blue Spruce, and other evergreens.

The apartment house was erected by Dr. Charles V. Paterno, but "The Garden" is the work of Marius Mutillod of Charles Dards, Madison ave. at 44th st., who also designed the landscaping of the famous Japanese tea garden of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel. This "Garden of Forty Arches" has approximately a width of 70ft., 10ft. wider than the average city street, and a length of about 325ft. The accompanying picture shows a view of the garden from Madison ave., and on three sides of it some of the arches from which the garden takes its name.

F. T. D. Advertising Exhibit

It is planned to hold, at the F. T. D. meeting scheduled for Oct. 8 and 9, at Cleveland, a comprehensive exhibit of all types of advertising used by the florists of this country. Herman P. Knoble, of Cleveland, F. T. D. director, states that the local committee intends to make a large display around the entire meeting room, as advertising will be one of the big features discussed at this meeting. The exhibit is being made at the request of President Gude, and Secretary Pochelon is cooperating in furnishing the material.

The Wholesale House of the Future

Readers will recollect seeing this paper in our issue of Aug. 17, it being one of a series read at the August meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club, at which time it received our unstinted praise for the reason that in setting forth a proposition of considerable magnitude the writer left nothing to the future, but covered in concise language every step necessary to be taken in order to bring about a successful operation of "The Wholesale House of the Future."

Since then 3000 copies of this article (in which has been included the testimony of THE EXCHANGE to the effect that the writer must be credited with an assembling of common sense ideas rarely brought together by one man) handsomely printed, have been distributed to the trade by Kennicott Bros. Co. of Chicago, especial care being taken to see that every member of the F. T. D. received a copy.

The retailer and the grower are just as much interested in the proposition as is the wholesaler, therefore, in all the cities there should be meetings held for the discussion of Mr. Pollworth's paper with a view to putting into operation so much of its recommendations as these conferences can agree to adopt as a point from which to make a start.

This is the day for big accomplishments. As the writer points "organization" can bring about in a few months that which takes years of individual effort.

This would be a proper subject for the Florists' Telegraph Delivery Association to thrash out at its coming October meeting; as an organization it must be deeply interested in many of the ideas advanced for betterment and its endorsement, just as far as it can give it, in part or in full, will bring the consummation sought just that much closer.

THE EXCHANGE would suggest that every florists' club throughout the country could well afford to make the reading and discussing of the Pollworth paper a feature at one of its early meetings. Where approved committees could be formed to get in touch with similarly appointed committees from other F. C.'s, the basic idea being to bring about uniform methods of operation throughout the country on the part of all concerned—wholesaler, retailer, grower.

The main support of the florist for the past two weeks or so has been funeral work, transient business being unusually quiet. Several of the shops, however, have taken advantage of the lull to paint and rearrange their stores in order to make them more attractive for the Fall opening of business, which has in years past, started about Sept. 15.

Managers of the larger stores are also busy canvassing the nearby towns, to find out just which growers are going to stick with the business this coming Fall and Winter and are ready to sign up their usual contracts for Sweet Peas, Violets, Roses, Carnations and other stock.

New England Fair

The New England Fair was held here Sept. 2, 3, 4 and 5. One large hall was devoted to the fruit and flower exhibits; another entirely to the vegetable exhibits. The flower display was excellent and in many of the classes there was close competition, especially in the exhibit of Asters, Gladioli, Dahlias, baske' arragements and bouquets. The flowers were judged by Harry I. Randall, assisted by Alfred H. Green, formerly of Whittall's private estate.

Tae vegetable display was beautifully arranged and through the efforts of the Worcester County Farm Bureau interested exhibitors were brought from all over the State. The vegetables were judged by Allyn Hixon, florist and market gardener of this city.

Frank S. Fisher, for many years in the floral business in this city, died on Sept. 5. His obituary will be found on another page.

Market prices for cut flowers were as follows: Roses $2 to $12 per 100; Asters 50c. to $2; Gladioli $1 to $2.50; various small flowers from 50c. to $2; Carnations, the first of the season, brought $2. F. L. M.

Pittsburgh, Pa.

The first week in September showed a remarkable improvement over August, which was the poorest the business has experienced for over a year. Good late Asters are coming to this market in large quantities. They meet with ready sales, the shorter grades at low prices. New crop Carnations have very little call. Roses are in demand, especially those of good length. Prices range from $2 to $8 per 100. Good Opuelia and Columbia are seen. The latter is one of the best produced since Killarney was introduced. Am. Beauty are more in demand and prices have advanced slightly, the best selling at $25 per 100. Gladioli have been scarce all week but have sold at good prices. Dahlias are due about next week. They will be welcome as the retailers are tired of the Summer stock. With the cool season and people home from vacations an improvement in business is looked for.

Personal Movements

I. S. Crall Co. of Monongahela is shipping fine ferns to this market.

B. L. Elliott has returned from his visit to the Pacific Coast.

The first florist employee ordered to secure an essential position was Earl Hunkel of the sales force of the McCallum Co. He has taken a position with the Union Switch and Signal Co., at Swissvale. He will be missed by the florists with whom he is popular. C. C. Phillip will now be connected with the cut flower department during Earl's absence.

Earl Tifton expects to attend the Canfield Fair this week. For some years he was connected with the Altimo Culture Co. of that town.

Indianapolis, Ind.

An increased call has been noticeable for flowers for the sick and for gift purposes. Funeral work is still the mainstay of the business and this comes mostly from the masses rather than from the rich.

The variety of good stock is far from what it should be and any high grade flowers are readily taken. The local Aster crop is almost a failure so that Northern stock is depended upon, at $2 to $4 per 100; retail prices range from 75c. to $1.50 per doz. Golden Glow Mums of fine grade are shipped in at $2 to $4 per doz. and disposed of at $4 to $6 per doz. Giganteum Lilies are scarce,

State Florists' Ass'n Meeting

The State Florists' Ass'n of Indiana held a most interesting September meeting as guests of Mr. Lewis, head florist at the Central Indiana Hospital. The many beautiful beds and the excellent greenhouses inspected by the members show them to be worthy of much praise. Eric Bucaner, Muncie, Ind., and Donald W. Saville, Kokomo, Ind., were elected to membership. Secretary Steinkamp spoke in full on the request of the State Food Commission for the cooperation of the florists.

W. W. Coles of Kokomo was at his best when he made an eloquent presentation speech handing the members present in the service and unfolding a beautiful silk flag bearing nine stars. This was the gift of John Evans to the association; a gift long to be remembered and highly prized by those returning from abroad.

The fuel committee consisting of Messrs. Baur, Elder and Henry Reiman reported, saying they were acting in full accord with the Administration and urging all those having fuel problems to present them at any time.

The matter of the October meeting was left entirely in the hands of the able secretary. Among the out-of-town members were W. Smith of Marion, W. W. and Lincoln Coles of Kokomo, Mr. Turner of Rushville and Edward Morner of Shelbyville.

Indiana State Fair

The display of flowers at the Indiana State Fair, while not as extensive as in other seasons, was an unusual one for quality. The Roepke Floral Co., Temperley florists, and Baur & Steinkamp were among the principal prize winners.

Temperley's took 16 firsts, the Roepke Floral Co. 17, and Baur & Steinkamp 5. This was besides numerous seconds and thirds. W. W. Coles acted as judge and A. F. J. Baur as superintendent of the exhibit. W. A. Comer of Wabash, and Joe Hill and party of Richmond were among those who attended. Harry Swearinger and Arno Nehrling of Crawfordsville combined business with pleasure on a trip to the fair.

The new draft regulations will probably take 50 from the flower firms in this vicinity. Many are now arranging their affairs to go. The strict enforcement of the "work or fight" clause will, however, have much to do with the general trend of the war in the near future.

Bertermann's count themselves fortunate in having the honor of displaying the new State service flag in their windows.

Oscar Carlstedt, well known in local circles, sends word that he is in a French hospital suffering from shell shock.

The Market

Sept. 10.—The most notable feature this week in the wholesale cut flower market is the increasing supply of Autumn flowers, such as late Asters, 'Mums, Tritomas, Celosias, Tamarix, Cosmos, Dahlias, Tuberoses, Boltonia and hardy Asters.

American Beauty Roses are in moderate supply and today they are meeting with very little demand at from 8c. to 25c. each for specials, and other grades at corresponding prices. Most of the hybrid tea Roses now coming into the market are Nos. 1, 2 and 3 grades. There are a few blooms of extra grade and still fewer of fancies and specials. The highest grades are selling in general at from 2c. to 6c. each; a few of the selections of the preferred varieties realize 8c. No. 3 and No. 2 grade blooms sell at about 25c. to $1 per 100. The demand is weak.

The increasing supply of Carnations cannot all be disposed of at the prevailing price of 25c. to $1 per 100.

Cattleya orchids are in a little larger supply; the variety Labiata is now coming into the market. The demand absorbs all of the quality flowers at prices ranging from 50c. to 75c. and occasionally $1 each. Both white and pink Lilies are in smaller supply, and are selling, the former at $5 to $6 per 100 and the latter at $1.50 to $5. For quality whites $8 is demanded. The usual short supply of Lily of the Valley is selling fairly well at $6 to $8 per 100 for the best grade.

In Summer and Autumn flowers late Asters are the dominating bloom, but, as before noted, there is a large range of other kinds of flowers mostly grown in the open. None of these are meeting with a brisk demand, and the same is true of all kinds of greens.

Club Meeting

The club held its first meeting this season at its rooms, Grand Opera House Building, 23d st. and Eighth ave., on Monday evening. A full report of this meeting will be found in this issue.

Matthew Sampson, for several years manager of the Noe Department of the New York Cut Flower Co., 55 W. 26th st., has now become a partner in the business, and the firm name is now Noe & Sampson. At the last meeting Mr. Sampson was elected a director.

W. P. Ford, 107 W. 28th st., is now on jury duty in the Criminal Court in this city. Miss Lilian Hart is now filling the position of bookkeeper at the Ford establishment.

The first Chrysolora 'Mums of the season, from Dreyer Bros., Whitestone, L. I., were noted at William Kessler's 43 W. 28th st., this week. This variety and Golden Glow are the only varieties now coming into the market.

Peter Carvell, salesman for the United Cut Flower Co., 111 W. 28th st., and Miss Laura Kuhn will be married in the Greek Church, 72d st., New York City, on Sept. 15.

Among recent visitors in town were Samuel McClements, of Randolph & McClements, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Paul Berkowitz of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., Philadelphia, Pa.; George W. Stillman, Westerly, R. I. and Richard Vincent, Jr. White Marsh, Md.

Dahlia Show

The Dahlia show of the American Institute of New York City and the American Dahlia Society will be held on Tuesday, Sept. 24, from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m., and Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 25 and 26, from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m., at the Engineering Building, 25 to 33 W. 39th st., between Fifth and Sixth aves. Admission is free.

Grand Central Palace a Reconstruction Hospital

The War Department announces that the Grand Central Palace has been leased for use as a surgical reconstruction hospital for the period of the war and three months after, at an annual rental of $395,000 and maintenance. It will be remodeled to accommodate 3000 patients. For the above very sufficient reasons there can be no further flower shows held in that building until the war is over.

The Market

Sept. 10. There is a slight shortage in the supply of flowers at the wholesale market so stacks are daily cleaned up. American Beauty Roses of high quality are in good supply. Prices are practically as last week, 4c. to 20c. apiece. Hybrid Tea Roses of fairly good quality range from 50c. to $6 a 100.

Each week brings a larger supply of Carnations. Though the quality is poor they bring 50c. to $1 a 100. Asters have been good this season and have had a good call. Though in good supply there is no surplus. Prices are from 50c. to $1 a 100 with a few extra choice flowers at higher prices. Lilium longiflorum and Lilium speciosum, a moderately good supply. Gladioli are plentiful and of good quality. Chrysanthemum Golden Glow and October Frost offered in small lots are selling well. Miscellaneous flowers are moving slowly. Greenery of good quality is plentiful. Ferns, Crotons and Dracænas are selling well.
